INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

About seven years ago, I brought out the first of a series of volumes giving a descriptive catalogue of the official Records of the Government of the Sikhs. It dealt with the records concerning the administration of the Military Department of the Khalsa government. The present volume, which is a continuation of the work, relates to the Revenue, Jagir and the Toshakhana departments of the Khalsa Darbar.

The arrangement followed in this volume is similar to that adopted in volume I. The book has been divided into three parts, viz., Part I relating to the Revenue rolls, Part II relating to the Jagir accounts, and Part III relating to the papers of the Toshakhana Department. Each part contains a summary catalogue of the various bundles of papers grouped under a particular head. As in the previous volume I have prefaced each part with a short note giving the outstanding features of the particular department with which it is concerned.

PART I.

MÁLIYÁT.

THE papers arranged and included in Part I of this volume are technically known as daftar-i-mál. The word mál (properly malíyát) simply means revenues and daftar-i-mál would, therefore, denote the Revenue Department. But as the English equivalent is not likely to convey the exact sense or the full scope of the matter, the papers grouped under the above head, it has been thought proper to retain the original vernacular term daftar-i-mál, or, briefly, máliyát, to denote this part of the volume. The practice of the Sikh government, as was explained in the previous volume (page 1, volume I), was to collect the records of the various branches of administration for one official year and arrange them in the form of a bundle. This final sorting and arranging of papers was done in the office of the Díwán who was also responsible for their safe custody. And since the Díwán was usually in charge of the mál, or revenues of the State, the records preserved under his supervision came to be known as daftar-i-mál.

Máliyát or daftar-i-mál

It is known on fairly good authority that before Díwán Bhawáni Dás joined his service in 1809, Ranjít Singh had neither an organized treasury, nor was there a proper system of keeping official records.† The Díwán was the first to organize the offices. Presumably he introduced the system of the Kabul government with which he had long been associated.‡ In the absence, however, of any authentic narrative account, it is very difficult to give an accurate sketch of the administrative system introduced by the Díwán. But a close study of the papers dealing with the ministerial details and belonging to the office of the Díwán reveals certain facts, which go a long way in enabling us to construct a brief outline of the departments or daftars into which Bhawáni Dás divided the business of the State.§

The Departmental
organization—its origin.

Since the official records were kept in loose sheets instead of in bound books or tagged files, and since there was danger of

* In India the term mál was used for the public revenue from any source whatever, but more especially for that derived from land, to which sense as a fiscal term it is now restricted, or the revenue claimed by the government from the produce of cultivated lands. (Wilson's Glossary of Indian terms, page 322).

† Vide page 125, volume I, Catalogue of the Khalsa Darbar Records.

‡ The Díwán himself, his father and grandfather held the very important post of díwán or revenue minister under the Kábul government,—(vide Chiefs and Families of Note in the Punjab, pages 376-77).

§ In his book 'The Sikhs and the Afghans' Shahamat Ali mentions that Bhawáni Dás divided the transaction of the State into twelve daftars, but he gives no further details.

the constituent papers of a file being lost or misplaced, the original founders of the system (probably the Persians) also devised means of providing against such risk. The papers belonging to different daftars or departments had different heads or titles scribbled at the top. And these heads indicated both the general nature of a paper as well as the particular branch of the department to which it belonged or a particular series or file with which it was to be arranged in the records.*

The main departments.

According to these titles or superscriptions, the papers of the earlier years, as a rule, fall under three main heads which correspond to the following chief departments, namely:—

- (1) awárcha.
- (2) taujihát.†
- (3) roznámcha.

The awárcha or awárija is an abstract account of receipts and disbursements (Wilson's Glossary of Indian terms, page 40). As such, the awárcha group comprises sheets of papers of what may be called the account books in the real sense of the word. They are divided into minfarda, minzálik and báqi or credit, debit and balance, or the usual sub-divisions of a statement of accounts.

The taujihát from tauzih (literally explaining, adjustment of accounts, Wilson, page 514) is a head of account. The tauzih papers do not show the credit, debit and balance as are found in the awárcha papers. They contain only the disbursed items appropriated to various heads of expenditure. Each head or sub-head has a separate ledger devoted to it.

The third group or the roznámcha is only a day book of disbursements whether in cash or in cheques.

Their sub-divisions.

These main divisions have their further sub-divisions which may be given in the following tabular form:—

- (1) The awárcha papers are sub-divided into—
 - (a) awárcha sarf-i-awwal.
 - (i) arbáb-ul-mál.
 - (ii) arbáb-ut-tahwíl.
 - (b) awárcha sarf-i-sáni.

*The titles indicating the main department and its sub-divisions are written in successive lines one above the other and are scribbled in elongated shikasta which is not easy to decipher without considerable practice. At first sight, these scribbles appear to be nothing more than mere lines at the top of a paper designed only for ornamentation.

† This is sometimes written as taujihát-o-muqarrariyat.

(2) taujihát-o-muqarrariyat—(i) akhráját.(ii) maucájib.(iii) muqarrariyat.(3) roznamcha.

The arbáb-ul-mál dealt with the accounts of revenue receipts from different sources and may be translated as Revenue and Exchequer Departments. This department was further subdivided into two, namely, jam'kharch taluqat and jam'kharch saírat. The taluqat section dealt with receipts derived exclusively from land, while the saírat comprised entries referring to customs, tributes and other minor sources.

The arbáb-ut-tahwíl appears to have been a department by itself. It seems difficult to find an exact English equivalent for the term. It was concerned with the jam' and kharch, or debits and credits, entered on account of the following sub-heads: viz., (i) bayutát, (ii) ah'kár or sometimes simply tahwíldár and (iii) zakhiráját.

The bayutát (from bayut plural of baít meaning house) may be rendered into Imperial Household Accounts. The details reveal principally the accounts of cash and furniture deposited with the officer in charge of the royal stables, the fatkhá-khána, the kitchen, the furniture and the necessary paraphernalia of infantry and artillery.

The tahwíldár is literally a cash-keeper, but in a wider sense it denoted any person with whom the government money was deposited, or any fund for which it was deposited. The term ah'kár or more correctly ahl-i-kár, means a man of business or an officer of a court. The tahwíl accounts may, therefore, with some accuracy be termed as the accounts of Government funds. This head comprises the accounts of multifarious natures such as the accounts of the central treasury, of the paymasters of the army, of purchases, of buildings, of cloth merchants and of jewellers, etc.

The zakhiráját papers comprise the accounts of the stores and provisions for military purposes stored in various forts in the empire.

Awár ha sarf-i-sáni.—Strictly speaking these papers belong to the Exchequer and the Revenue Departments. They deal with receipts from minor sources of revenue such as zabtí (escheats), peshkash (presents), etc. It is from the nature of their sources that these receipts were probably classed as sáni or second, or minor, to distinguish them from the awwal or first, principal or major head which comprised more regular and permanent sources such as land, tributes, etc., detailed under the head arbáb-ul-mál.

So far about the awárcha papers or accounts proper. Then we have the departments whose duty it was to post the accounts and distribute the items under their appropriate heads of expenditure. The collective name of these departments is taujihát-o-muqarrariyat.

Taujihát.—This head is sub-divided into two main and several subordinate heads. The two main heads, it seems, constituted two important departments of the Government. One was known as daftar-i-akhráját and the other as daftar-i-mawájib. The akhráját literally means expenditure. It comprises the expenses incurred under the following heads :—

- (i) in'ám (rewards, gifts).
- (ii) ibtiyá' or ibtiá' (from bat', purchase).
- (iii) istabl (stable).
- (iv) isti'mál (employment, use, the goods or material consumed in building or manufacture).
- (v) ta'mír (buildings, etc.).
- (vi) taháif (presents).
- (vii) khila'at (robes of honour).
- (viii) khurish fíl (feed of elephants).
- (ix) dharmarth (charity).
- (x) ziyáfat (entertainment).
- (xi) langar khássh (royal kitchen).
- (xii) ta'ma sher (feed of lions.)
- (xiii) mákula saggán (feed of hounds).
- (xiv) jágirát (grants of land).
- (xv) musá'idat (advances of money).
- (xvi) kiráya (fare of hired camels and carts, etc.).
- (xvii) madid kharch (aids and advances, etc.).

The other main department under taujihát is known as daftar-i-mawájib or pay office. The word means salaries or pensions. The papers arranged under this head are the pay rolls of the army and of the civil establishment or (amla). Each branch of the army and of the civil establishment had their separate ledgers and the papers under each sub-head will be found to have been arranged in separate groups in the following pages of the catalogue.

The last group of papers constitutes the roznámcha. The daftar was responsible for keeping account of the daily income and expenditure. The roznámcha items were subsequently transferred to other books and posted under their appropriate heads.

From what has been said above, it seems that the chief daftars created by Díwán Bhawáni Dás were—

Organization—a fairly elaborate arrangement.

- (1) Arbáb-ul-mâl the Revenue Department with its two branches, sarf-i-awwal and sarf-i-sâni, dealing with income, i.e., from land and minor sources).
- (2) Arbáb-ut-tahwíl (with its three branches of Imperial household (bayutát), Government funds (takwílát) and stores, etc. (zakhíraját)).
- (3) Taujihát with its two sub-divisions of the Imperial household expenditure (akhraját) and the pay department (marwájib).
- (4) Roznámcha.

For want of authentic information on the point, it is not possible to say with any approach to certainty if the system of accounts introduced by Bhawáni Dás was exactly the same as that which was in force in the Government of Kábul, or if it was a modification of the original type to suit the political conditions of the province. But for a simple government like that of the Sikhs, the system introduced by Bhawáni Dás appears fairly elaborate and Ranjít Singh deserves credit for the reform, the more so when we take into consideration the fact that, Ranjít Singh in 1809 was not yet secure in his position, and that the Sikh nation was being dragged into monarchy by this most powerful of their chiefs. Another consideration that one has to keep in view in giving credit to Ranjít Singh for this attempt at an orderly government is, that it was after nearly fifty years of absence of any regular government in the province that he introduced or re-established a departmental organization. With the death of the Emperor Aurangzeb, the Moghal administration in general had become disorganised, especially in the outlying provinces of the empire. Between the years 1738 and 1768, the greater part of the country lying to the west of Delhi was wrested piece-meal from his feeble successors by Nadir Shah and Ahmad Shah, the monarchs of Kábul. But for several reasons the new masters of the province, too, were not able to exercise any effective control over the province, nor could they enforce any vigorous system of government in place of the one they had supplanted. The country was situated at a considerable distance from the capital and their hold on their representatives in the province was, necessarily, very weak. The result was a general anarchy and a complete breakdown of the administrative machinery. The rising Khaisa, who now profited by these disorders and had become a sovereign power in the country, were composed of the rude, untutored peasants and were incapable of conceiving any orderly arrangements of administration. Their chief concern was the appropriation of the revenues of the land and applying them for the maintenance of their army and other military equipments.

Peculiarities
of the records of earlier
years.

The papers of earlier years have certain peculiarities which are not noticed in the records of the latter years of Ranjít Singh's government. In the first place, the dates used on the top of the papers are in Turkish calendar months and years, such as quí il, takha qui il, etc., although in the main body of a paper the dates are represented in Hindi months of the Bikrami era. The second interesting feature of these papers is the use of elongated form of Persian letters to denote the heads or titles referred to in the footnote on page 2. They have no points or dots to represent the nuktas and appear at the outset as mere scrawls meant more for embellishment than for denoting any words.

Subsequent changes.

In the records of the Sambat year 1872 (1815 A.D.), we notice a sudden change both in the manner of keeping accounts and the preparation of official records. The practice of using the Turkish dates gives place to the use of Indian chronological terms as fasl-i-kharíf and fasl-i-rabi. The elongated forms previously employed in scribbling out the heads or titles is also dropped and the simpler and more easily readable forms (though not exactly nasta'lik) are adopted in their stead.

Reorganization of
or daftars.

In the same year, i.e. Sambat 1872, with the changes noted above, we find more important changes in the departmental organization. The old division of major and minor heads of accounts (sarf-i-awwal and sarf-i-sáni) is abandoned. The Exchequer Department is organized on a different basis. The sources of income other than land are now consolidated under one general head of sáirát with its sub-sections of customs (sáirát), excise, etc. (wajuhát) and tributes (nazrána). These together form a sub-department of the Exchequer.

Besides the above, there were other minor changes, all designed to introduce greater simplicity and definiteness into the system of records.

The result of this general reorganization of the departments was the addition of a new series of papers for the official records. Under the old system, we had three series of papers, namely, awárcha, tanjihat and roznamcha. The papers, as already pointed out in these pages, were connected with the debit and credit accounts whether of receipts or expenditure. In the new system this term is restricted in meaning, and in its place we have the simpler Hindustāni term jam' kharch used to denote the debit and credit accounts. The term roznamcha on the other hand is employed to denote the new series of papers referred to above. These papers are, strictly speaking, a sort of ledger for each head and sub-head of account in which are posted the items credited to that head from time to time. This was a device to check the jam'-khar h accounts supplied by various departments of the Government.

The new system or more correctly the changes introduced in Sambat 1872 synchronize with the date of employment of Díván Ganga Rám in the Finance Department of the Lahore State. Díván Ganga Rám himself and his father before him had held high posts at Delhi under the Moghal Government. He had acquired great experience in that line and it may be presumed that the Díván was responsible for these improvements.*

The Heads of Departments were required to send their official papers to the office of the Díván for his inspection. His office was in a way an office for Public Records and here these papers were stored, each in its proper place. The accounts, i.e., sikh, awárcha, and jam' kharch papers submitted by Heads of Departments were all examined and checked and, in certain cases, probably recompiled in an abstract form for permanent official use and reference.

The papers that were sent to the Díván's office from the several departments were those relating to--

- (1) ta'alugát—Collection of land revenue from districts.
- (2) sáirát—Collection of revenues from customs.
- (3) wajuhát—Collection of revenues from excise, etc.
- (4) nazrána—Collection of the fixed annual tributes, fines and presents.

*(See also Chiefs and Families of Note in the Punjab, pages 276-77).

- (5) tahwíldárs—Government funds and other State transactions.
- (6) ibtiy'a—Purchases of things for general use.
- (7) kiráya—Fare of conveyances hired for Government business.
- (8) zakhíráját—Transactions regarding the purchase and consumption of military stores.
- (9) rátib—Purchase and consumption of fodder, etc., for Government stables.
- (10) mawájib—Payment of salaries made to the various branches of the army and civil establishments, or 'amla.
- (11) madid kharch—Payments of political pensions and the ladies' apartments.
- (12) siáh roznámcha—Details of payments made from the treasury as well as the cheques or cash orders on the district treasuries or on tahwíldárs, etc.
- (13) awárcha—The awárcha papers of certain heads of expenditure whose jam'kharch account is not found among papers from Nos. 1 to 12 in the above list. It may be that these heads were grouped in one department and the officer in charge was responsible directly to the Mahārāja. These were the following :—
- (i) in'ám (rewards).
 - (ii) taháif (presents).
 - (iii) khíla'at (robes of honour).
 - (iv) dharmarth (charity).
 - (v) 'itáyát (gifts).
 - (vi) muqarrariyát (fixed annuities).
 - (vii) sarf-i-huzúr (Mahārāja's personal expenditure).
 - (viii) ziyáfát (entertainment).
 - (ix) rukhasána (some cash given at the time of departure).
 - (x) jáqírat (grant of land, etc.).
 - (xi) musá'idat (advances of money).
 - (xii) iwaz musá'idat (recovery of advances).

The details given above will enable us to form a general idea of the position and duties of the Díwán. It appears that this high functionary for the most part kept in his own hands the threads of all revenue collection and expenditure. The papers relating to almost all transactions and payments in all departments of the State were submitted to him for inspection. His opinion of the sanction and criticism of the budgets or actuals submitted by several departments was allowed him by the Mahārāja. We do not know. This much at least is certain, that, under the Mahārāja's Government, the functions and duties of the officials were not definitely and clearly laid down and that the exercise of the powers of an office varied with the personal ability, tact and judgment of the man holding that office. In the Court of Ranjít Singh who was surrounded mostly by the representatives of martial class, a literate was a rarity and the various incumbents of the post of diwán, namely, Bhawáni Dás, Ganga Rám and Dína Náth, enjoyed the Mahārāja's confidence to a fairly high degree.

Position and duties of the Díwán.

Among his other duties the Díwán was required to read out the reports of his department daily to the Mahārāja in the afternoon (دربارِ پهری) and obtain orders from him. These orders were frequently noted on the margin of the papers and instructions issued to the officer concerned.

No orders of the Government regarding appointments and grants of jágir, etc., could take effect, or were regarded valid, unless they bore the Díwán's seal under the technical phrase درج دفتر شدہ (entered in the books). As may be seen from the above list, he was the custodian of almost all the official records, and, as such, practically controlled the whole of the administrative machinery. It was this position and his intimate knowledge of the financial affairs that rendered Díwán Dína Náth indispensable to the early British administrators for some time after the annexation of the Panjáb in 1849. Next to the Prime Minister, on the administrative side, the Díwán was the highest functionary.

After this brief outline sketch of the departmental organization of the Government and the position and duties of the diwán, a word regarding the method of compilation of accounts and their audit may also be deemed necessary.

Compilation of accounts.

In the system of Persian accounts, the amounts are denoted by certain signs called raqúms. In these raqúms, the highest figure is shown at the top, the next lower figure represents the smaller amount and so on.

The account books are technically called kághaz jam' kharch. The usual form of these jam' kharch papers or statement of accounts was this: the items of receipt or those credited to a particular head from time to time were brought together and shown in one place under the technical name *minfarda; the items of disbursement, expenditure or those debited to this head were indicated in the second part of the statement technically called *minzálík; and the third or the last part of this statement was headed as bāqí,* showing the balance or the remainder.

In each of the three parts of a statement, the grand total is indicated at the top and the details are noted below. Each item of these details is shown under its appropriate head and is also supported by a précis of the voucher or authority.

The departments sent their accounts to the Díwán's office in the above form, where they were examined and checked with the records in his office. These records, as already pointed out, consisted of (a) roznámcha and (b) awárcha.

Every item of receipt or expenditure, whether in cash or cheque, was posted in the roznámcha immediately it was received, sanctioned or actually paid. The roznámcha navís was required to send his daily report to the Díwán's office. Here these items were sorted and each posted in its place in the awárcha or ledger. Each head and sub-head of account had an awárcha (ledger) devoted to it. The awárchás both of the heads of receipts and expenditure were generally drawn in the name of the individual officer responsible for them, although for certain kinds of expenditure (in'am, ziyáfat, etc.), the awárchás were prepared only in the name of the heads of accounts.

This device certainly facilitated the work of auditing and checking the statement of accounts submitted by an officer. The minfarda section of the statement submitted by him could be compared with his awárcha in the Díwán's office showing the items credited to his name from time to time, and any omission or mistake in the statement thus submitted could be easily detected. As a creditor, the Government was mainly concerned with the correctness of the amount credited to a particular officer or head of account, because the officer in charge was himself equally interested in the satisfactory disposal of that amount. He was required to show the debit items, arranged in distinct groups of *tahsilat-hát, tahwílát†, qabuziát‡, farmáishát§ and ichár||. The payments or debits under these heads could be easily verified from either the roznámcha papers or from the awaz of individual heads to which the amount was shown as debited. The chit or chitnamá or cheque could be valid until duly signed by the Amir of the Díwán, hence the items shown under this head could be easily avoid detection. The amount debited under the tahwílát must be acknowledged and owned by the tahsilat to whom it was shown to be transferred. The qabuziát and awaz-hát expenditures were to be necessarily supported by vouchers, while those debited as ichár were verified from the original sanctions in the Díwán's office.

* tahsilat (plural tahsilat)—order on the treasury for the payment of salaries, etc.

† tahwíl (plural tahwílát)—a deposit or transfer of an amount

‡ qabuziát (from qaboo)—receipt or voucher.

§ farmáishát (plural of farmáishá)—order on demand. This denotes the order and receipt from the Maharája. One attested copy of such order was kept in the office with which the items shown under this head were checked.

|| ichár is a statement. This item of expenditure usually occurs on the debit side of the statements shown in the papers submitted by the revenue collectors. It stands for expenditure incurred in connection with the establishment of the Collector's Office, etc. This item was allowed by comparison with the originals sanctioned by the Government.

SUMMARY CATALOGUE.

PART I of the volume deals with bundles relating to daftar-i-mál, from Sambat 1868 to 1906 (1811—1843 A. D.). Of these two relate only to the roznámcha papers for the year Sambat 1894, 1896 and 1897 in one, and 1898, 1899 and 1900 in the other.

As to the remaining bundles, ordinarily there is one bundle for each calendar year with the exception of the Sambat years 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905, to each of which more than one bundle is devoted. For 1902 and 1903 there are two bundles for each year, for 1904 there are three and for 1905 there are four such bundles. As to the arrangement of papers in each, reference may be made to the remarks prefaced to the description of each bundle in the body of the volume.

* This was another name of Amritsar and was so called after the name of its founder Rám Dás—the fourth Sikh guru. “Guru Rám Dás is said to have been held in esteem by Akbar, and to have received from him a piece of land, within the limits of which he dug a reservoir, since well known as Amritsar or the pool of immortality, but the temples and the surrounding huts were at first named Rámdáspur, from the founder.” (Page 51, Cunningham's History of the Sikhs edited by H. L. O. Garrett.)

† This denotes the depôt of salt. The salt mine or more exactly the depôt near the mine was known by this name since the Moghal days. The probable origin for this name may be traced to the tradition referred to in the Gazetteer of the Jhelum District, page 17, which states that Akbar was informed of the existence of the salt by certain Asaf Khán, on condition of his receiving as reward, during his life time, a sum equal to the whole of the wages of the miners employed in digging it. It is very likely that the place which after the discovery of the salt mines must have developed into a considerable market town may have been known as mandvi asafnagar after Asaf Khán who discovered the place.

Ranjit Singh had inherited the salt mine from his grandfather Sardar Charat Singh, and probably, on this ground, the ex-Maharaja Dalip Singh and his family subsequently took legal action unsuccessfully in England to endeavour to recover salt mine as a family heritage.

(2) Arbab-ut-tahwil-o-tahsil.

(a) At-tahásil.

At-tahásil is plural of tahsíl which means that which is obtained or received. The al in Arabic is a particle of determination, and is equivalent to the definite article "the" in English. The papers arranged under the above head relate to the following sources of receipts :—

- (1) tahsíl kohistān† ; folios 13.
 (2) tirni singhān‡ ; folios 2.

*The country that lies between the Rávi and the Sutlej in the south of Lahore District was known as the Nakka Country. The word nakka means border, edge. One of the Sikh confederacies whose possessions lay in this territory was called the Nakkái mísl. Ranjít Singh's first and principal wife Ráni Ráj Kaur (popularly known as māi Nakáin) was the daughter of Sardar Ran Singh, Chief of the Nakkái mísl. This alliance, however, did the Nakkái Chief no good, because Ranjít Singh, on attaining power, subdued the mísl and seized all its possessions in 1810.

† The fort of Gobindgarh in Amritsar was built by Ranjít Singh in Sambat 1864 (1807—08). It was in this fort that the treasure and jewellery of the State were deposited. It was strongly garrisoned and remained under the charge of Faqír Imám-'ud-Dín for a very long time.

‡ Tambol is a marriage present. The practice of receiving such presents in cash on the occasion of weddings of their sons and daughters is very common among Indian parents. The tambol in question refers to the cash presents received on the occasion of the marriage of Prince Kharak Singh. The heir-apparent Kharak Singh was married to BÍbi Chand Kour, the only daughter of Sardár Jaimal Singh Kanbya of Fatehgarh in the district of Gurdáspur. The wedding took place on 20th Mangh 1868 (6th February 1812). Among the distinguished guests were Colonel David Ochterlony, Rájás of Nábha and Jínd and the agents from the King of Kábul, Nawábs of Multán, Mankera and Kashmir, etc. Lahore and Amritsar were the scenes of great rejoicing and festivities for several days.

The details of the amount of the tambol as given in these papers are as follows:—

(i) Kohistán, comprising the chiefs of the Kángra Valley, Rs. 50,000; (ii) ta'aluqá l comprising districts under the direct rule of the Mahárája, Rs. 35,775; (iii) Sardárs Rs. 1,06,300; (iv) Army Rs. 23,707-8-6; (v) ghorcharah, Rs. 16,000; (vi) Bankers, etc., Rs. 3,050; Jandiálás, Rs. 1,100; Shamsher Ali, Rs. 105, total Rs. 2,36,037. The details under Sardárs contain Rs. 5,000 from Colonel Ochterlony.

Bundle No. B. 3—Total folio 2,321 ; size 5" × 7½" ; written in shikasta.

Official in charge.—Díwán Bhawáni Dás.

Date.—Sambat 1870 (1813 A. D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains the accounts of revenue receipts from various sources of income and expenditure incurred by different branches of Government in the year 1813. The papers in the bundle have been arranged in the following order:—

- (i) sarf-i-awwal—
 - (1) arbāb-ul-māl.
 - (2) arbāb-ut-tahwíl.
- (ii) sarf-i-sāni.
- (iii) taujihāt—
 - (a) akhrájāt.
 - (b) mawājib.

NOTE.—The rozámcha papers for Sambat 1870 are not forthcoming.

Remarks.—In the year 1813 Ranjít Singh obtained or rather extorted the famous Diamond Koh-i-núr from Shah Shujah-ul-Mulk in fulfilment of the promise which the Shah's queen had made to him to the effect that if he succeeded in restoring to her the person of her husband who was a captive in Kashmir, she would present him the famous diamond.

The year under consideration also witnessed the occupation of the fort of Attock by Ranjít Singh. News of the expulsion of his father from Kashmir by Panch Khan Wazír and also of the latter's intentions to march against Attock, disquieted its governor Jahan Dád Khán who sought protection from Ranjít Singh and on being persuaded surrendered the fort of Attock to the Maharaja. Ranjít Singh purchased the good will of the garrison by paying about one lac of rupees as their arrears of pay and instantly ordered his own troops to occupy the fort (see pages 137-38, daftar II, Sohan Lal).

Bundle No. B. 4—Total folios 2,697 ; size 5" × 7½", written in shikasta.

Official in charge.—Díwán Bhawani Dás.

Date.—Sambat 1871 (1814 A. D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains the accounts of revenue receipts from various sources of income and expenditure incurred by different branches of Government in the year 1814. The papers in the bundle have been arranged in the following order:—

(i) şarf-i-awwal—

(1) artāb-ul-māl.

(2) artāb-ut-tahūl.

(ii) şarf-i-sāni.

(iii) taujihāt—

(a) akhrājāt.

(i) muwājib.

NOTE — The roznamcha papers for Sambat 1870 are not forthcoming.

Remarks:—In the year Sambat 1870 some improvement is noticed in the method of keeping records as well as in the working of the system of ministerial details. The work was now more appropriately divided into branches. The minor sources of revenue which, in the records of the previous years, were all combined in one group under the head şarf-i-sāni are henceforth re-classified. The sources from which the annual proceeds were fixed, regular and recurring, were ranked with the land revenue and as such were transferred to the general head of şarf-i-awwal with sub-heads of şāir-ul-wajūh and wajūhāt, etc., and the remaining were being still treated as extra or şarf-i-sāni.

* zila Wīnēki was also included in the kārdārship of Sohiān and Shahpur.

† Fatehgarh was previously held in jāgir by Sārdar Gaur Singh, Dhāri. In Sambat 1871 Gaur Singh was not only deprived of this jāgir, but had to suffer a considerable loss by the confiscation of his privately hoarded wealth. Among the property confiscated were gold and silver ornaments valued at rupees 2,125, the gold valued at Rs. 15 per tola and silver at Rs. one per tola.

‡ The district of Wazirābād was placed under Faqir Nur-u-Din from Sambat 1871. The limits of the district were extended and the Faqir's charge included the districts of Halewā Daska, Siālkot. Consequently these districts do not appear separate in this year's account.

Date of rolls.—Maugh 1870—Poh 1871.

Bundle No. 5.—Total folios 1,725 ; size 5" × 7½" ; written in shikasta.

Official in charge.—Díwán Bhawáni Dás.

Date.—Sambat 1872 (1815 A. D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains the accounts of receipts and expenditure of the Government for the year Sambat 1872. The papers have been arranged under the following principal heads :—

- (i) máliyát.
- (ii) tahvilát.
- (iii) zakhíráját.
- (iv) mawájib.

- (v) roznámcha.
(vi) asárcha.

Remarks.—In our remarks pertaining to the papers of the previous year we referred to certain improvements made in the methods of keeping official records, etc. The year under consideration witnessed further changes. These changes synchronise with the appointment of Díwán Ganga Rám as the head of the military daftar. They reveal, as will be noticed from the following pages, a re-organization of the daftars.

There is also noticed a tendency to simplification of the old system which was introduced by Díwán Bhawáni Dás, lately an officer in the Finance Department of the Kábul Government. The heads and sub-heads are not so technical as one finds in the account books of the previous years. They are now denoted by simple and brief titles. The abkári and sái át or Customs Department were now regularly organized as we will have occasions to point out later on.

N.B.—The Kohistán or mountainous tracts do not form a separate zila' or súba, as they were shown in the papers of the previous years.

dár-ul-zarb* was the mint from dár (house) and zarb (coin), i.e., the place where the coins are struck. The title of the papers is, however, misleading. The receipts shown in these papers are receipts from 'adálat. It is evidently a clerical mistake and the words dár-ul-zarb should be read dár-ul-'adálat.

Remarks.—The revenue papers of Sambat 1873 reveal the annexation to the Kingdom of Lahore of the possessions of the Rámgarhia misl. This misl was one of the most powerful of the Sikh confederacies in the latter half of the eighteenth century. Ranjit Singh, who was rapidly gaining in power, began to covet the territory of these Sardárs but, not feeling strong enough to break its power during the lifetime of its Chief Jodh Singh, now seized upon his possessions on his death in 1816 A. D., allowing a small maintenance grant to his sons. The possessions of this misl lay on both sides of the river Beás and brought a revenue from six to seven lacs of rupees per annum.

* This ta'aluqa appears in the revenue accounts for the first time in the year Sambat 1874-75. It was conquered and annexed much earlier. The district was farmed out to Díván Bhiwáni Dás for Rs. 1,00,000 per annum. Here we notice a jágír of the value of Rs. 4,000 per annum granted to Mián Guláb Singh subsequently known as Rāja Guláb Singh, and then the Mahárāja Guláb Singh of Jammu and Kashmír.

† Chhachh plain centres about Hazro and contains the most fertile and richest portion of the Attock District. The fort of Attock and the territory around it was taken under direct management in Sambat 1870 as it lay on the road to Pesháwar. The acquisition of Chhachh was rendered imperative for the safety of the fort.

‡ This includes the revenue accounts of three districts, namely, Sohián Sháhpur, Kayya and Dhuda which were farmed to one Sukhe Sháh.

§ This ta'aluqa of an annual value of Rs. 22,000 was formerly held in jágír by the troopers of irregular cavalry. Hence it appears for the first time in the revenue rolls of Sambat 1875.

|| This ta'aluqa too was previously held in jágír by the troopers.

¶ Siri Hargobindpura was the chief town or capital of the principality of the Rámgarhia misl. Accordingly the possessions of the misl which Ranjít Singh had annexed to his kingdom of Lahore in Sambat 1873 and continued to appear in these rolls as Mulk Rámgarhia were henceforth denominated as pargana Siri Hargobindpura.

Lala Sukh Diál and Lala Rāma Nand jointly held the farm of Customs Department. In the previous year these accounts appeared under the name of Lala Sukh Diál.

* This includes the tribute money from the hill States, namely Pasohli, Chamba, Jasrota Mandi, Kula, Suket, etc.

† ghair muqarrari literally means not fixed or assessed. This class of nazrána consisted of feudal aids paid by jágírdárs or fees charged on the grant or renewal of a jágír and other fines, etc.

‡ These are interesting papers, showing the probable budget for the year, i.e., the amount to be realized both as a part of the land revenue and the tribute money which is estimated at Rs. 9,14,000 and the amount actually realized and expended on military, etc, estimated at Rs. 6,59,194. Official-in-charge.—(Name not given).

Date.—Sambat 1875-76 (1818-19 A.D.)

Contents.—The papers in the bundle have been arranged in the following order :—

- (i) mál.
 (ii) zakhíraját.
 (iii) mawájib.
 (iv) miscellaneous.

Remarks.—The papers relating to Multan in the previous years reveal that Ranjit Singh had gradually drained the resources of the Nawab by enforcing his annual demands for the cazána or tribute money. He had invaded the province as many as seven times between 1802 and 1818, when in Jeth 1875 (June 1818), the citadel finally fell into his hands after a protracted siege of nearly four months. The news reached Lahore on the 26th Jeth 1875 and the whole city was ordered to be illuminated in honour of the victory and the Maharaja himself riding on an elephant passed through the main bazárs showering rupees on the way as he proceeded.

The papers arranged in this bundle cover the revenue account of the province during the governorship of Diwan Jetha Ram (Rabi 1875), Lala Sukh Dial (Kharif 1875—Rabi 1876) and Diwan Sham Singh (Kharif 1876).

² Folio 26th is missing. On account of the heavy bombardment during the siege there were caused several breaches in the fort and several of the bastions and parapets were dismantled. The work of repair and construction of the new buildings in the fort was taken in hand immediately after its occupation. From a short note on folio 2(a) of this series of papers, it appears that a formal entry in to the fort was made on the 14th Har 1875—although the construction and repair work was started on the first of that month. The total expenditure on the buildings is shown at Rs. 38,284-11-6 from 1st Har 1875 to Bhadon 1876.

² This ta'aluqa of an annual value of Rs. 15,000 in the Jhelum District, was granted to one Sartar Jami'at High Ranzimanglia.

³ This ta'aluqa of about Rs. 5,000 annual value was originally held in ijara by Sardar Jai Singh, Attariwala, but since Rabi 1879 was granted in ijara to Sardar Buda Singh, Sadhuwalia.

Remarks.—Having gained the Indus for a frontier in the preceding years, Ranjít Singh now determined to advance it to the Sulemar Range itself. In sambat 1877 he expelled the Nawab of Dera Ghazi Khan and gave his territory in farm to Nawab of Bahawalpur. A couple of years later we notice Nawab Hafiz Ahmad of Mankera holding Dera Ismail Khan in Jágir from the Maharaja. In 1880 Ranjít Singh again crossed the Indus, at the head of a large force, marched through Isakhel without opposition, and pushed on to the outskirts of Banuu, and after fixing a nazzana or tribute to be paid annually into the Khalsa Exchequer, retired without planting a garrison in the country. The year under consideration also witnessed the famous battle of Nawshehra, fought between the Sikhs and Sardar Azim Khan of Kabul. The result was that Peshawar, the only remaining trans-Indus dependency of the Kabul Government, also felt the weight of the Sikh arm.

Remarks.—

The papers in this bundle are in a very bad condition and a large number of these is missing. From what one finds by looking at the sheets that are preserved, it appears that this bundle was badly damaged by damp and white ants, and that such papers as were wholly damaged were either destroyed or it was not thought safe to keep them in the bundle.

* Kapurbhala and the adjoining territory formed one of the twelve chiefships into which the Sikhs divided the Punjab amongst themselves in the last quarter of the 18th century. It was known as the Ahluwáliá misal. The head of the misal, Sardar Fateh Singh, Ahluwáliá, was, in the beginning of his career, a friend and ally of Ranjit Singh, but, being of a weak and yielding nature, was rapidly outstripped in the race for power and in the end found himself in the position of a feudatory of the Lahore Government. Ranjit Singh not only not interfered with his territory, but added to his ancestral possessions. But in Sambat 1883, owing to some misunderstanding between them, Sardar Fateh Singh fled across the Sutlej and took refuge with the British. The result was that the Mahárāja confiscated his entire territory. But, as there was no real cause for Sardar Fateh Singh's apprehensions, a reconciliation was soon brought about and his territory was soon restored to him. Under the revenue collectors of the Mahárāja this territory was assessed at nine lacs per annum.

Remarks.—In the revenue rolls of the year under consideration we notice the addition of the district of Derán Gházi Khan to the Kingdom of Lahore. The trans-Indus districts, though conquered by Ranjít Singh in 1820, were not formally annexed to his Kingdom till 1832, and so long they were farmed out to the Nawáb of Baháwalpur who used to pay a nazrána or tribute.

*Smyth's "The Reigning family of Lahore" has one Powttenwise, a German, in the Sikh service employed as an Engineer. This paper relates to the manufacture of gunpowder prepared under the charge of the above named gentleman. Considering the ignorance of the people with European names, their spelling and their pronunciation, it is not difficult to reconcile the above-mentioned name with the one given in Smyth's book. The two names have a good deal of phonetic resemblance ; and besides the additional Z or hard S in the middle can be accounted for in this case as in the several well-known instances with which we are familiar. For instance, Mr. Elsmie, the Financial Commissioner, was pronounced by the office peons as Lachhmi Sahib and Mr. Fanshawe as Pinchar Sahib—although there is absolutely no correspondence to the spelling of the two names.

Remarks.—Being apprehensive of the designs of Amir Dost Muhammad Khan of Kabal, the Maharaja now thought of permanently annexing Peshawar to his dominions. Accordingly, soon after the Dissolving orders were issued to Sardar Hari Singh, Nadwa, at Hazara, to proceed to Peshawar and join the Lahore troops already despatched there under the command of Prince Nihal Singh. The Barakzai Soldiers Pir Muhammad and Sultan Muhammad after some hesitation fled from the city on the approach of the Khálsa troops who occupied the fort of Bala Hissar and the city of Peshawar.

Remarks.—

On the 15th of Kátik 1897 (5th November 1840) Maharája Kharak Singh and his son Nau Nihal Singh breathed their last, and, with the death of the latter, the legitimate line of Maharaja Ranjit Singh expired. Prince Sher Singh's claim to the throne was contested by the widows of Kharak Singh and Nau Nihal Singh on behalf of the expected issue of the latter. Sher Singh, not feeling quite strong at the time, yielded to the proposal that Chand Kaur should exercise the supreme power as regent till the widow of Nau Nihal Singh was delivered of a son. But this was obviously to bide his time, for, as soon as he was able to strengthen his resources, Sher Singh made a bid for the throne and in January 1841 besieged the fort of Lahore with an overwhelming army. Rani Chand Kaur and his daughter-in-law were granted a suitable pension; and after a short time the former was beaten to death by her maid servants, presumably by the order of the Maharaja.

NOTE.—The roznámcha papers of the year will be found arranged with those of Sambat years 1898 and 1900 in a separate bundle.

Remarks.—The year under consideration witnessed revolutionary scenes in Lahore towards its close and the papers in a way bear testimony to these. Misar Beli Ram's name is conspicuous by its absence among the tahwīlāt papers. Belonging to the party opposed to the interests of the Dogras, Beli Ram was imprisoned and subsequently secretly put to death on 3rd Asúj 1900 by the order of Raja Hira Singh when the latter came into power and assumed the wazīrat. The zāṭi papers show that Bhai Gurmukh Singh was also murdered and his property confiscated to the State. The residence of the Bhai was raided and his movables were declared as confiscated to the State. On rough calculation, the total amount confiscated may be estimated at one and a half laes of rupees, including cash, ornaments, pashmina, etc. The Khulāṭ papers further reveal how lavishly Raja Hira Singh bestowed gifts worth about Rs. 54,300 upon all the important persons in order to secure their support at the installation of Maharāja Dalip Singh.

Remarks —Although in its beginning the muzaibat of Raja Hira Singh worked smoothly, yet towards its close it was beset with several serious difficulties. The Princes Peshaura Singh and Kashmira Singh were the rival claimants to the throne. The vigorous reforms which he tried to introduce in the army affected the financial interests of the Sikh Sardars, who were already jealous of the position which these Dogras had attained at court. The Regent Queen and her brother, Jawahar Singh, aspired for power, which was monopolised by the Minister. All these circumstances combined to end his rule and his life, and on 25th January 1815 the Minister and his tutor Pandit Jalla were murdered, and their heads publicly exhibited at the gates of the city.

 Written in Shikasta.

Official in charge.—Díwán Díná Náth.

Date.—Sambat 1903 (1846 A.D.).

Remarks.—According to the provisions of the treaty of Lahore, March 1846, the Mahárája Dalíp Singh ceded to the British Government all his territory situated on the other side of the river Beas, and further in lieu of Rs. 1,50,00,000 demanded as war indemnity the province of Kashmir, was made over to Raja Gulab Singh who undertook to pay that amount to the British. PART II.

JAGIRAT, ETC.

Part II of the volume deals with papers relating to the reorganization of the talukas or administrative units and a summary examination of the Jágir accounts.

Immediately on the restoration of peace after the treaty of Lahore, in March, 1846, the British Resident and his assistants took the reins of the Khálsa government in their own hands although nominally the Council of Regency was chargé d'affaires of the State. The first thing which attracted the notice of the Resident was a want of clear, definite system in State accounts, and the many opportunities which it afforded for dishonesty and fraud. The six years of a weak and unsettled government which followed the demise of Mahárája Ranjít Singh had greatly augmented these chances. Besides this, the actual expenditure of government had been more than doubled during this period, although there was no substantial corresponding increase in the revenues of the country. The war (1845-46 A. D.) had caused an additional strain on the revenues and the peace that followed brought no relief. It had, rather, further reduced the permanent income of the State. The territories of Kangra and the Jalandhar Doab—the richest districts in the Sikh dominion—were ceded to the British, and Jammu and Kashmir were created into an independent State under Mahárája Gulab Singh. It further involved an addition of 22 lacs of rupees to meet the expenses of the British troops kept in the Panjab for the maintenance of peace.

Such a great strain on the revenues of the country could be borne only if the finances were brought on a sounder footing by curtailing the inflated and unnecessary expenses. The Treaty of Lahore had provided for the reduction of the Khalsa Army, and when a portion of the army was disbanded it brought about a considerable saving. The next source to draw upon was the jágirs. These jágirs were classed as (i) military, i.e., granted to the chiefs in lieu of military service; (ii) civil, i.e., granted to the State employees in the civil department; (iii) dharmarth or religious endowments and (iv) miscellaneous including the rozinah or daily allowance to individuals of various description, and the inglis or pensions allotted to the widows and relatives of certain deceased servants of the State. The jágirdárs sometime retained lands in excess of that specified in their deeds and a dharmarthi or a rozina-dár often continued to hold this allowance even after the original sanad was cancelled. To discover these frauds a regular enquiry was instituted. The fraudulently obtained rent-free lands were resumed along with those of the discharged members of the army. The total amount thus resumed was estimated at a little over sixteen lacs (16 lacs) per annum.

Along with this, the constructive side of the work was also taken in hand. With a view to have a more definite idea of the resources of the country and of the utilizing of those resources for the benefit and the improvement of the State, the ta'aluqas were reorganized and their revenues were estimated more correctly. The accounts of the old collectors were checked and their opportunities for embezzlement very much reduced. A general Summary Settlement of each ta'aluqa was undertaken, and the areas of culturable lands together with the liabilities and rights of the landlords or the paying-tenants were reduced to writing.

SUMMARY CATALOGUE.

Part II of the volume deals with the following five bundles relating to jágir and other similar papers. Out of the five bundles comprising this section of the records, the first two deal with the re-organization of the ta'aluqas and the estimated revenues of the country as well as the expenditure of collections. The remaining three pertain to the confiscation of old jagirs and the granting of new ones by the orders of the Governor-General in Council, dated March, 1850.

(ii) Tafsil 'ilaqáyat.

The papers arranged under the above head contain the details of names of districts and their sub-divisions; their Kardars or governors as well as the estimated annual returns from each of these. These papers, in a way, enable us to form an idea of the total annual income of the Kashmir State from various sources in Sambat 1903, i.e., after the province of Kashmir was made over to Maharaja Gulab Singh and the territory beyond the river Beas was ceded to the British Government; folios 628.

These doabs were respectively known as doaba Bari between the rivers Beas and Ravi, doaba Rachnáb between the Ravi and the Chenab, doaba Chajj between the Chenab and the Jhelum, and doaba Sindh-Sagar between the Jhelum and the Indus; folios 10.

PART III.

TOSHÁKHÁNA.

Toshákhána is literally a store room, a wardrobe or a chamber where the objects of curiosity or value not in daily request, are kept. The toshákhána of Máhárāja Ranjít Singh contained all the valuables, jewellery, precious stones, gold and silver ornaments, as well as the Khilá'at pieces and other valuable articles of dress. The important State papers, such as treaties and documents concerning the foreign relations of the Khalsa government were also consigned to the custody of the toshákhána. The office of the custodian of the toshákhána like that of the Chamberlain or Deohriwála was one of great importance on the household establishment of the Máhárāja.

We have had occasion to remark elsewhere in these pages, that the various departments of the government of Máhárāja Ranjít Singh were re-organized in Sambat 1873 (1816—17 A. D.). Accordingly, in the State records subsequent to the year Sambat 1873, there are to be seen papers relating to two separate toshákhánas variously known as toshákhána khássa and toshákhána bahla. The former represented the old or toshákhána proper, while the latter was created as a small service treasury for cash and other valuables which were in daily requisition. The need for such a service treasury was growing every day since the Máhárāja had, by this time, established his position as an independent ruler of the Panjab, and there was going on at his court a frequent exchange of presents and ceremonious visits between his own government and the representatives of the neighbouring powers such as the British, the Kings of Kábul and the Amirs of Sindh.

The first incumbent on this post was Misar Basti Rám who was originally employed as his toshákhánia by Sardár Mahan Singh, father of Ranjít Singh, and continued to hold his appointment under the latter for about twenty years. On his death in Sambat 1873 (1816-17 A. D.) Basti Rám's nephew (sister's son) Beli Rám, who had already served on the toshákhána establishment for about seven years as the first assistant, was made to succeed his uncle. By his intelligence, ability, and business-like habits and above all for his fidelity to the interests of the State*,

* Steinbach mentions in "The Punjab", London 1846, that Ranjít Singh when at his death-bed was persuaded by the Brahmins to make a gift of the Koh-i-Noor diamond to the Hindu temple of Jagan Náth. The family tradition of the Misars corroborates this story, and further asserts that Beli Rám refused to make over the diamond on the ground that it was the property of the State, and that the Máhárāja being not in a fit State of mind could not make the bequest.

the young Beli Rám soon won the high opinion of the Maharája who appointed him as the Chief Manager and Controller of the treasury. Like other courtiers of the day, Beli Rám also made full use of his influence in the Darbár to advance the interests of his family. He succeeded in securing high appointments for his brothers, Rúp Lál, Megh Ráj, Rám Kishan and Sukh Ráj. Rúp Lál was the Názim or Governor of the Jalandhar, one of the richest provinces in the Khálsa dominion. Megh Ráj was the custodian of the treasury at Gobindgarh (Amritsar), and Rám Kishan was made Chamberlain to the Maharája who always treated him with special kindness. Sukh Ráj, the youngest of the five brothers, joined the army. In Sambat 1893 (1836 A.D.) he was created a General with a Command of 4 Infantry battalions, one regiment of cavalry, and 2 troops of artillery. Thus the Misar family became a very powerful family at Court and naturally excited the jealousy of an equally if not more powerful family of the Dogra Rájputs, the Dhián Singh, Guláb Singh and Suchet Singh of Jammu. In domestic politics and Court intrigues these two families were almost always ranged on opposite sides. Accordingly in Misra 1896 (October 1839 A.D.), a short time after the death of Maharája Ranjít Singh, when Prince Nau Nihal Singh and his party came into power, Misar Beli Ram and his brothers were arrested and thrown into prison by the Prince for having supported his father's favourite, Chet Singh, against the Minister Rája Dhián Singh. They remained in prison for about three months, till Maharaja Kharak Singh by a great personal exertion procured their release. The Misar brothers were then restored to their respective situations and continued to enjoy the confidence of the Government of Maharája Sher Singh (January 1841-43 A.D.) till again in the first week of Asuj 1900 (September 1843 A.D.) when Rája Hira Singh, son of the late Minister Dhián Singh, came into power, all of them were arrested. Megh Ráj and Rúp Lal were placed under the charge of Misar Lal Singh (of the bahá-toshákhána), and Beli Ram and Ram Kishan were made over to Sheikh Imam-ud-Din, who, it is suspected, secretly put them to death. Rúp Lal and Megh Ráj were, however, lucky to obtain their release after about a year when Jawabar Singh succeeded Hira Singh as Minister in 1900 (1843-44 A. D.) They were again restored to their former positions. Megh Ráj succeeded his brother Beli Ram, as the Chief Toshákhána, and continued to serve, for sometime, even under the British Government after the annexation of the Panjab.

† 'Chiefs and Families of Note in the Punjab' by Sir Lepel Griffin, puts the period of imprisonment at six months, whereas the Court chronicles by Munshi Sohan Lal give the date of arrest as 25th Asuj 1896 and that of release as 28th Poh 1896, which makes the total period of detention three months and three days.

The other noteworthy family of the toshákhánias or treasurers at the Sikh Court was that of Misar Jassa Mal. Like Beli Ram, Jassa Mal also started service as a clerk in the treasury under Basti Ram—the post being vacated by his elder brother Ram Jas 'who was killed in the hill country during a tax-collecting expedition in the early part of the reign of Ranjit Singh.' Jassa Mal was a good scribe, and could write exceedingly well the landa characters in which the treasury accounts were kept. He remained, therefore, for the most part of his early days in service, on camp duty with the Maharaja. It was during these tours that Jassa Mal came into frequent notice of the Minister Raja Dhian Singh who subsequently became the patron of the family and obtained for Jassa Mal the independent charge of the bahla toshákhána when this service treasury was created in Sambat 1874-75, as a separate treasury. With Raja Dhian Singh's influence on his side, Jassa Mal was soon able to secure lucrative appointments for his two elder sons (Amir Chand and Bhagwan Singh) in the Revenue Department and the third Lal Singh was taken as his personal assistant on the toshákhána establishment. Jassa Mal and his family were thus identified with the party of Raja Dhian Singh who used his unbounded influence at Court to advance their interests against the interests of Misar Beli Ram and his brothers. Accordingly in Sambat 1892 (1834-35 A. D.) on the death of Jassa Mal, the post of Chief Treasurer in the bahla toshákhána was conferred upon his youngest son Lal Singh who, as we know, subsequently became a very important person in the State. The history of Lal Singh himself, as remarked by Sir Lepel Griffin, was for three years the history of the whole Panjab. Lal Singh's career during these years as the first minister of the Lahore Darbar at the time of First Sikh War (1845-6 A. D.) and his subsequent deposition from that office owing to his complicity in the rebellion of Ghulam Mohiy-ud-Din, Governor of Kashmir, are incidents too well-known to be narrated here. His wealth and power may be estimated from the fact that when he was deposed from the office of wazir, Raja Lal Singh was in the enjoyment of an annual jágir worth Rs. 1,94,849, besides the private accumulated treasures which were confiscated by the State.

An examination of entries given in these papers shows that the toshákhána department was responsible for keeping a separate account of (i) the zar-i-naqd or cash received in the treasury, and (ii) zar-i-jins or simply jins, i.e., the goods and precious metals kept in its custody from time to time. The goods comprised all sorts of furniture and curiosities, namely, the gold and silver saddles and other trappings of horses and elephants, utensils made of precious metals, armlets, necklets, anklets gleaming with gems and precious stones, and the pashmina cloth and fancy goods of Kashmir. Among other duties of the toshakhana department was one of looking to the repair of the old and the preparation of the new articles of the above mentioned description, and for that reason it had on its permanent establishment a number of gold and silver smiths, engravers and other skilled artisans.

In fact, a varied and busy life teemed at the head treasury, the central point of all money transactions. Payments were made here to the clerks, to needy persons, to thousands of people who ministered to the varied wants of the Maharaja's household, purveyors, artisans, horse-dealers and others.

The papers of the bahla toshakhana are almost intact from Sambat 1873 to 1892 (1816-35 A. D.) and again from Sambat 1898 to 1903 (1841-46 A. D.) These comprise 4 bundles. The papers relating to toshakhana khas comprise only one bundle and this too is, unfortunately, neither complete nor very intelligible. However, sometimes it does yield, on examination, some interesting information. For instance, we come across in these papers an account of the booty that fell into the hands of the Sikhs after the fall of the citadel of Multan in 1818 A. D. Again we find from these papers information which has its own peculiar interest to a student of Sikh history. Ranjít Singh, as we know, would not spare even a very highly placed official of his Government when he came to know that he had amassed great fortune by dishonest means. He would subject him to a heavy mulct and in case of its non-payment the Maharaja will at once order the confiscation of his property. The toshakhana papers contain several such inventories of confiscated property.

Summary catalogue.

Part III of the volume deals with the following five bundles pertaining to the toshakhana papers. Out of these five, one comprises papers relating to toshakhana khas whereas the remaining four comprise the accounts of the bahla toshakhana :—

Bundle No. C. I.—Total folios 2,328, size 5" × 7", written in shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Misar Beli Ram.

Date—Sambat 1896-97 (1839-40 A.D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains a maujudát or the 'present state' of the toshákhána under the charge of Misar Beli Ram. The papers in the bundle have been arranged as follows :—

- (i) maujudát toshákhána qila' Gobindgarh.
- (ii) maujudát horeli Raja Hira Singh.
- (iii) maujudát asbáb bághicha Raja Suchet Singh.
- (iv) maujudát asbáb Pandit Ram Kishan.
- (v) zabti asbáb Raja Hira Singh.
- (vi) zabti asbáb Lala Har Sukh Rai.

Remarks.—The papers contained in this bundle are, in a way, detailed lists of the articles deposited in the toshákhána from time to time. They cover a period roughly of twenty-seven years from Sambat 1874 to 1902 (1817—45 A.D.) The entries are a sort of roznámcha entries and consequently not very intelligible, but are otherwise full of interesting details.

(i) Maujudát qila' Gobindgarh.

The fort of Gobindgarh in Amritsar was the principal repository for the valuable property of the State. In this fort were deposited the belongings of the toshákhána or the Royal wardrobe. The two other forts which also contained the toshákhána stock were the forts of Lahore and Sheikhupura.

The batch of papers arranged under the above head relate to the stock-taking of the toshákhána known as the toshákhána of Misar Beli Ram.

Maujudát literally means things present. The maujudát papers therefore stand for the lists or statements showing the present state of goods in stock. These lists contain details of cash and other valuables in the custody of the toshakhana on the day of stock-taking*. These lists are not very intelligible although some of the details contained therein are full of interest to a student of Sikh history, especially those relating to mál-maghruta or the property obtained from the spoils of war and the zabt jagirát or the confiscation of the estates of a fallen foe or a degraded servant of the State. It appears that these lists were made out on the spot when the stock was held under examination. In absence of both the consecutive page number or the catch word it has been found extremely difficult to arrange these loose sheets in any intelligible manner. They have, however, been arranged in five different sets. Folios 2049.

*This stock-taking was commenced on 29th Poh, 1896, and it took nearly four months to complete the preparing of lists, etc. This was probably done when Misar Beli Ram, after his release on 28th Poh, 1896, again took over the charge of the toshákhána.

(ii) Maujudat Haveli Raja Hira Singh.

The batch of papers arranged under the above head contains a detailed list of the confiscated property in goods and cash belonging to the Sindhanwalia Sardars. The Sindhanwalias possessed immense wealth and influence in the country. After the death of Nau Nihal Singh they supported the claims of his widow against those of Prince Sher Singh, supported by Raja Dhian Singh. Consequently an ill-will continued to exist between the two even when Maharaja Sher Singh had recalled the Sardars from their exile in British territory where they had escaped when Sher Singh gained the throne of Lahore and confirmed them in their possessions and jagirs. On 15th September 1843 the Sindhanwalias murdered the Maharaja and his Minister Dhian Singh with a view to place the boy Dalip Singh on the throne and usurp the whole power of the State. But they were soon defeated in their object and had to pay the penalty of their wanton crime with their life and property. Dhian Singh's son, Hira Singh, won over the troops to his side and with their help took the fort and proclaimed Dalip Singh as king and himself as his Chief Minister. The Sindhanwalias were arrested and put to death, and their estates confiscated. Folios 131.

(iii) Zabti asbab Harsukh Rai.

The papers arranged under the above head relate to the confiscation of the property of General Harsukh Rai Kapur, of Hafizabad. This confiscation took place during the wazirat and under the orders of Sardar Jawahar Singh whose displeasure the General had incurred by his sympathies with Prince Pashoura Singh. Folios 6.

(iv) Zabti Raja Hira Singh.

The batch of papers arranged under the above head contains detailed lists of the belongings of Rajas Hira Singh and Suchet Singh which were confiscated by the State after they had died. This property was received through Raja Gulab Singh as is evident from the title page. Folios 137.

Bundle No. C-2.—Folios 2,480, size 5" × 7¼", written in shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Misar Jassa Mal.

Date—Sambat 1873—1892 (1816—37 A. D.).

These papers were probably compiled on the death of Jassa Mal with a view to have a consolidated daftar of the whole account, otherwise contained in the annual account books and spreading as it did over a period of 20 years.

(i) Jam'kharch naqdi.

(ii) Jam 'kharch Jins.

The papers arranged under the above head relate to the receipt and disbursement of goods and other articles such as shikharis. The number, variety and quality of the pashmina goods are mentioned in Kashmiri; the number of tents of red silk cloth supported by iron poles, of chollas and howdhis made of gold, of chairs, of bedsteads, of tables, of chollas made of the same metal, the jewellery and other precious articles, and the toshakhana enable the reader to make some estimate of the expenditure of the court of the Maharaja:—

The papers arranged under the above head contain details of money drawn from the bahla toshákhána and spent in connection with the celebration of the Dussehra festival. Dussehra is a great historic festival of the Hindus celebrated in the honour of their great hero Rama. It commemorates the day of the great victory which Rama had gained over Ravan, the powerful King of Ceylon. At the Court of Rājiv Singh, as at the Court of other Hindu Kings, at Ayer Indir, this festival was celebrated with great pomp. On this day, the Maharaja had the following programme:—The morning time was devoted to the religious and patriotic and the worship of the Sival and the Shiva. The Maharaja then held his darbar and received nazars or presents from his nobles and bestowed khilats. When this business was over, a review of his whole army was held and a strict muster taken. The evening was spent in the festivities and sham fights between the opposing forces of Rama and Ravan, when with the setting of the sun, the obliquity of the latter was set on fire and the festivities were closed.
