Preface

For a long time Nundo Lal Dey's The Geographical Dictionary of Ancient and Medieval India was regarded as an authoritative work on historical geography, but subsequently its importance was diminished owing to the expansion of Indological researches in various directions, the requirements of which it was unable to meet. So need was felt for a more comprehensive work, and in 1952 V.S. Agarwal envisaged a multi-volume project devoted to the compilation of an alphabetical dictionary of ancient Indian geography. But the project remained only in blue-print until a faint light of hope was seen in 1965 when under the patronage of the University Grants Commission and the supervision of the late Prof. D.C. Sircar, an ambitious project (with which the present author was associated) was taken up by the Centre of Advanced Study in Ancient Indian History and Culture, Calcutta University. But again the hope proved to be an illusion when the project was eventually dropped, notwithstanding a considerable progress in the work of compilation. Another project entitled Geographical Encyclopaedia of Ancient and Medieval India, under the editorship of K.D. Bajpai, also had the similar fate, after the publication of its first volume in 1967.

So when the publishers of the present work requested me to prepare a fresh volume to meet the requirements of the students and researchers of the present generation, I got enthusiasm. I felt that something could be done in this field by individual endeavour. In fact, the infrastructure of such a project was already present, containing a rich heritage of important research works on different aspects of historical geography of ancient and early medieval India dealing with the geographical materials and place-names as found in the Vedic, Puranic, Buddhist, Jain and other literary sources, indigenous as well as foreign, and also in the inscriptions. Then there were works on regional historical geography, the study of which had received a new dimension in Sankalia's work on Gujarat, (1949), in which an attempt was made to broaden the scope of the subject by including cultural geography and ethnography as well within its purview. Among the subsequent doctoral dissertations prepared with this end in view, S. Mulay's work on Deccan (1972) had become the model of other works in this field done by S. Gokhale (Madhya Pradesh), K.L. Lele (Rajasthan), M.M. Mathur (Uttar Pradesh),

B.S. Pillai and T.K. Sheshadri (south India) and others. There were other important works on regional historical geography like those of B.K. Barua (1952, Assam), M.S. Pandey (1963, Bihar), D.K. Ganguly (1975, Orissa), A. Bhattacharyya (1977, Bengal), P.K. Bhattacharyya (1977, Madhya Pradesh), etc. Needless to say that without the help of such works it would have been impossible for me to proceed with this herculean task.

The scope of this dictionary is limited only to the ancient and early medieval period. The entries or topics, could have been given greater space. But I have preferred brevity, especially in view of the fact that it is not possible to provide complete information on all the topics dealt with in this volume. Since it is meant for assisting the students and researchers I have taken into consideration what they actually need. They do not want my view on the views of others in regard to the location or identification of the place-names. They want to know about the sources in which the names occur in various contexts. That is why I have left no stone unturned—to the best of my ability—in providing textual and epigraphical references, so far as each and every entry is concerned, so that those who want more information on any particular topic can easily have it. I have not ignored the prehistoric and protohistoric sites and have utilized the existing works of H.D. Sankalia, D.P. Agarwal, S.P. Gupta, N.R. Banerjee and others. Again it should be pointed out—lest I may be misunderstood—that my purpose is to provide A B C so far as the prehistoric and protohistoric sites are concerned and not X Y Z. The same holds good in the case of the sites relating to historical archaeology. There is no dearth of good works on historical sites containing architectural remains. I have described them in barest outline. For Buddhist sites I have banked heavily on the works of Debala Mitra and for the places of Hindu pilgrimage on P.V. Kane's History of Dharmaśāstra.

A detailed introduction has been given in this volume so that the readers may get themselves acquainted with the nature of the source-materials. Special emphasis is laid upon epigraphical sources and a long list of inscriptions has been provided. The geographical terms as found in the literary and epigraphical records have been listed and explained in detail. The process behind the formation of place-names is in itself a matter of intensive research and that is why some rules relating to this process have been outlined. An exhaustive bibliography will enable the readers to have a full view of the works done so far in the field of historical geography.

My labour will be amply rewarded if this volume be of any use to those for whom it is intended. I am quite aware of its defects and shortcomings for which I crave the indulgence of the readers. So far the errors are concerned—printing or factual—I take the full responsibility.

Introduction

1. The Sources

The sources for the study of the historical geography of ancient and early medieval India may broadly be divided into two categories, archaeological and literary. The former consists of studies in prehistoric and protohistoric sites, the monuments and surviving architectural remains of the historical period, and the epigraphic and numismatic materials. Studies in prehistoric and protohistoric sites, as known to us through archaeological explorations and excavations, are necessary not only for a clear and comprehensive understanding of the pattern of earliest settlements in different parts of India, but also for the determination of cultural sequences by which the process of transition from one stage to another can be traced, identified and documented. Likewise without the aid of ancient monuments and surviving architectural remains it is not possible to identify the ancient cities or monuments described in the literature of antiquity. The ruins of Taxila present before us a picture of ancient Indian city life which no literary work could have supplied. Cunningham could locate the ancient historical sites as mentioned in the Classical and Chinese literature mostly on the basis of architectural remains discovered by himself. No less important are the epigraphic materials because they contain names of numerous peoples, territories, kingdoms, administrative divisions, cities and villages. These supplement the deficiencies of textual materials. The location of Lumbinigrāma, Puṇḍranagara, Kausāmbī, Karṇasuvarṇa, Śravastī etc. could not have been possible without the aid of relevant inscriptions. Numismatic materials are also very helpful for the study of ancient place names. The discovery of coins of the Śibi republic, minted at Mādhyamika, at a place called Nagarī near Chitorgarh in Rajasthan helped scholars in suggesting that 'Nagarī' is just the latter part of the old name 'Mādhyamikanagarī' as 'Purī' is that of 'Jagannātha-purī'. There is also no dearth of geographical materials in Indian literary traditions which are numerous and varied. The Vedic texts, the grammatical, technical and scientific literature, the Epics and the Purāṇas, secular literary works, religious texts in Sanskrit, Prakrit and Pali, various works in Apabhramśa and regional languages, etc., contain useful information on geographical topics. The Classical and Chinese sources are also very much important for a better understanding of the historical geography of ancient and early medieval India.

2. Nature of Indigenous Literary Sources

The Rgveda does not give any idea of the Indian subcontinent as a whole. It refers only to one geographical area, namely the Saptasindhavaḥ denoting the land watered by the five Punjab rivers together with the Indus and the Sarasvatī (or the Kabul or the Oxus), a few mountains, a number of rivers and a lot of tribes whose territories were known after their own names. The later Saṃhitās and Brāhmaṇas cover a more extensive area. The Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa describes the eastern region as far as the boundaries of the territories of the Kosalas and the Videhas. The Aitareya Brāhmaṇa mentions the Madhyamā-dis or the central or middle region, as well as the regions in the east (Prācyā), south (Dakṣiṇā), west (Pratīcyā) and north (Udīcyā). Numerous tribes and their territories, including those of the Deccan and South India, are also mentioned in this text. The Pañcaviṃśa Brāhmaṇa also contains useful geographical information. The Aitareya Brāhmaṇa list of tribes and territories recurs in the Sāṅkhyāyana Śrautasūtra. The Baudhāyana Dharmasūtra mentions the Middle country as Āryāvarta and defines it as the territory lying to the east of Adarśana (Vinaśana where the Sarasvatī lost herself in the sands near Kurukṣetra) to the west of Kālakavana (probably near Allahabad), to the south of the Himavat the (Himalayas) and to the north of Pāriyātra or Pāripātra (the Western Vindhya with the Ārāvalli range). Besides the Himavat and the Mujavant (Mujavat of the RV), the later Saṃhitās and Brāhmaṇas mention a number of mountains and also certain new rivers, peoples of different regions and a few townships. In these texts we also come across the boundaries of a number of ancient kingdoms. Fortunately for us the geographical materials found in the Vedic texts have completely been worked out in the Vedic Index of Names and Subjects<sup>1</sup> and these have been arranged alphabetically with relevant textual references. M. L. Bhargava in his Geography of the Rgvedic India<sup>2</sup>, has also elaborately dealt with the physical geography of the Sapta-Sindhu region.

Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī, a grammatical work composed about the fifth century BC at Salatura in the Peshwar region incidentally refers to the peoples and territories, geographical divisions, mountains, rivers, forests, deserts, towns and villages of India. The Janapadas and the towns in the Gaṇas have specially been dealt with. It should be noted in this connection that according to the grammatical convention tribal names in the plural would indicate both the people and the land inhabited by them. Pāṇini's work however shows little knowledge of the south and the extreme east. Kātyāyana's Vārttikas composed about the second century BC refers to the Cola and the Pāṇḍya kingdom of the extreme south.

Introduction

Patañjali's Mahābhāṣya<sup>1</sup>, composed about the second century BC covers a wider range of geographical area. Patañjali's reference to Āryāvarta corresponds more or less to the boundaries of the same region as suggested by the Dharmasūtras and the Dharmaśāstras. It should be pointed out in this connection that the earliest mention of the seven-continent theory (implying that the earth is constituted by seven island-continents which became popular in the Purāṇas) is met with in the Mahābhāṣya. Geographical materials as gleaned from the grammatical literature have been brought to light in two significant works, viz. V. S. Agarwala's India as known to Pāṇini<sup>2</sup>, and B. N. Puri's India in the Time of Patañjali<sup>3</sup>.

The Āryāvarta of the Baudhāyana Dharmasūtra is described as Madhyadeśa in the Manusmṛti in which it is defined as the territory between the Himavat in the north and the Vindhya in the south and between Vinasana in the West and Prayāga in the east. The same work further says that the holy Brahmarṣideśa was the name of the land comprising the Kurukṣetra and the territories of the Matsyas, Pañcālas and Saurasenakas while the tract called Brahmāvarta is defined by it as the holiest area between the rivers Sarasvatī and Dṛṣadvatī. The Arthaśāstra of Kauṭilya mentions names of certain peoples and their territories, but the text is more important from the viewpoint of political, military and economic geography. It is the first work dealing not only with the nature of ancient settlements, but also with natural resources and products of different areas, the system of their procurement and distribution and kindred topics. The Kāmasūtra of Vātsyāyana refers to certain regions of India in connection with the sexual behaviour of different peoples. The Jayamaṅgalā commentary on it composed by Yaśodhara gives elaborate descriptions of such regions as Vaṅga, Aṅga, Kaliṅga, Gauḍa, Vāhlikadeśa, Avantī, Dakṣiṇāpatha, Andhra-viṣaya, Kārnāṭa-viṣaya, Vanavāsa-viṣaya, Koṅkana-viṣaya, Mālava-pūrva, Strīrājya, Paṭaliputra, Ābhīra-deśa, Aparānta-deśa, Lāṭa-viṣaya, etc. There are numerous texts belonging to the Dharmaśāstra, Arthaśāstra and Kāmaśāstra schools with a vast commentarial literature, but these have not been worked out from the viewpoint of geographical study.

The Jambukhaṇḍavinirmāṇa-parvan and the Bhūmi-parvan incorporated in the Bhīṣma-parvan of the Mahābhārata offer lists of mountains, rivers and countries of all the regions of Indian subcontinent including parts of Central Asia. In the Sabhā-parvan there is a description of territories in connection with the digvijaya (conquests in different directions) of the four Pāṇḍava brothers, viz. Arjuna conquering the countries and peoples in the north, Bhīma subjugating those of the east, Nakula those of the west and Sahadeva those of the south. Although the different versions of the Mahābhārata do not offer exactly the same text of the said section and there is confusion and some names appearing in more than one of the lists and more than once in the same list, the description is important, since it gives us an idea about the location of various countries. The Tīrthayātrā section of the Vanaparvan referring to numerous holy places is also very important for topographical understanding. Besides, in numerous stray passages of the Mahābhārata we come across vivid geographical descriptions of various countries and localities. Similar lists of countries and peoples, rivers and mountains in the north, south, east and west are found in the Kiskindhyā-kāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa. It mentions Mount Somagiri, between the country of the Uttarakurus and the Northern Ocean, which lightens the sky around it which may be a reference to the Aurora Borealis of the Arctic region. It also mentions Yavadvīpa with its seven kingdoms, Mount Śīśira beyond Yavadvīpa and the Suvarṇa-Rūpyakadvīpa (Chryse and Argyre of the Classical writers) which indicates knowledge of South-East Asia. In fact as early as in 1896 N.C. Das in his Ancient Geography of Asia Compiled from the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa<sup>1</sup> had tried to evaluate the implications of the geographical suggestivity of the Rāmāyaṇa in regard to greater India. But more important is the geography of Rāma's itinerary in exile. The travels and adventures of the five Pāndu brothers as described in the Mahābhārata are also equally important from the geographical point of view. One should not fail to recall in this connection that most of the Sanskrit poets, dramatists and novelists based their works on these two great epics, and these branches of Sanskrit literature contain numerous geographical reference. H.C. Chakladar worked on the geographical materials as found only in the works of Kālidāsa which was published posthumously in 1963 from Calcutta under the title The Geography of Kālidāsa. B.S. Upadhyaya's India in Kālidāsa should also be mentioned in this connection. Chakladar's work is divided in four parts—the first dealing with Kālidāsa's conception of the world; the second with countries and places outside India like Persia, China, etc.; the third with the Himalayan region, its physical geography, minerals flora, fauna, and tribes, and the fourth with the countries and peoples of India. In the same way if the works of Bhāsa, Bhāravi, Māgha, Bhaṭṭanārāyaṇa, Bhavabhūti, Rājasekhara and others can be properly utilised, it is expected to yield tangible geographical results.

The geographical accounts of the Purāṇas are mainly based on the great epics in form, though their contents are varied. The writers of the Purāṇas had some special geographical conceptions. Studies in these conceptions were initiated by H.C. Raychaudhuri in his Studies in Indian Antiquities and by B.C. Law in his numerous works on historical geography, and these were continued by S.M. Ali in his Geography of the Purāṇas,<sup>2</sup> and M.R. Singh's Critical Study of the Geographical Data in the Early Purāṇas.<sup>3</sup> The geographical accounts in different Purāṇas are more or less identical and the account in one is often repeated in the other. The longest lists of countries and peoples of India are contained in the Mārkaṇḍeya, Vāyu, Brahmāṇḍa, Padma and Skanda Purāṇas, while the Viṣṇu and the Matsya contain shorter lists. Pargiter in his edition of the Mārkaṇḍeya had dealt elaborately with its geographical contents. It contains a description of the Jambudvīpa and mentions the forests, lakes and mountains around the Meru. It mentions the nine divisions of India, the seven mountain ranges and twenty-two separate hills. It describes the course of the Ganges and refers to the famous rivers of India, grouping them according to the mountain ranges out of which they arise. The principal peoples in India and on its borders are also mentioned in it, arranged according to the natural regions of the country. Important geographical informations have been obtained from such specialised works on the Purāṇas as Avastī's Skanda Purāṇa, S.D. Giyani's Agni Purāṇa, D.R. Patil's Vāyu Purāṇa, V.S. Agarwala's Matsya Purāṇa, etc. J.E. Abbott's 'Topographical List of the Bhāgavata Purāṇa' published in the Indian Antiquary for 1899 should also be specially mentioned in this connection. The majority of the names of countries and peoples found in the Purāṇas is very much the same as we find in the Nadyādivarṇana section of the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa. The Janapadas or settlements have been described in the Purāṇas under seven territorial divisions—Madhyadeśa or the middle country, Udīcya or the northern region, Prācya or the eastern region, Dākṣiṇātya or Dakṣiṇāpatha or the southern region, Aparānta or Pascāddeśa or the western region, Vindhya-prṣṭha or the Vindhyan region and Parvatāśraya or the Himalayan region. The Purāṇas enumerate the rivers rising from eight mountain ranges, the Varṣa-Parvata Himavat and the seven Kula mountains. On the authority of the existing Purāṇas and their various editions. D.C. Sircar has prepared comprehensive lists of Janapadas and rivers which have been incorporated in his Studies in the Geography of Ancient and Medieval India.<sup>1</sup>

The Purāṇas conceive of the earth as having its centre on mount Meru or Sumeru and as consisting of seven concentric island-continent each surrounded by a sea of equal area and being double the size of the preceding name in the list. These seven island continents are Jambu, Plakṣa, Śālmālī, Kuśa, Krauñca, Śāka and Puṣkara. The island-continent Jambudvīpa is described as low in the north and south and highly elevated in the middle. It is supposed to be shaped like a lotus with mount meru as its pericarp. The elevated central region of the Jambudvīpa is styled Ilāvṛta-varṣa or Meruvarṣa. The term varṣa means subcontinent. Meru or Ilāvṛta contains two varṣas. Bhadrāśva and Ketumāla, respectively to its east and west. It also contains three varṣas—Ramyaka, Hiraṇmaya and Uttarakuru—to the north, and three to the south—Bhārata, Kimpurusa and Hari. The varṣa called Bhārata is therefore a southern subcontinent of Jambudvīpa. It is described as semi-circular and lying between the Himavat in the north and the sea in the south, the former standing like the string of a bow. As a subcontinent it covers a greater area than India proper and includes within its boundry portions of central, western, southern and south eastern India. It is divided into nine sub-divisions : Indradvīpa, Kaserumat, Tāmraparṇa, Gabhastimat, Nāgadvīpa, Saumya (Kaṭāha), Gāndharva (Simhala), Vāruṇa and Sāgarasamvṛta (Kumāra, Kumārīdvīpa).

The Kumārīdvīpa or India-proper is divided into seven zones, the names of which have already been stated. Every varṣa has a representative mountain-range called varṣa-parvata. In the case of India it is the Himavat or the Himalayas, the source of the river Gaṅgā, Sindhu, Sarasvatī, Śatadru, Candrabhāgā, Yamunā, Sarayu, Irāvati, Vitastā, Devikā, Kuhū, Gomati, Bahudā, Dṛṣadvati, Kauśikī, Tṛṭiyā, Niścīrā, Gaṇḍakī, Ikṣu and Lauhitya. Besides there are seven great mountain range called kula-parvatas. These are Mahendra, i.e. the Eastern Ghats from which rise the rivers Trisāmā or Tribhāgā, Ṛṣikulyā, Ikṣulā, Tridivā, Lāṅgulinī and Vamsadhārā; Malaya, i.e. the Travancore hills and the southern fringes of the Western Ghats, from which rise the rivers Kṛtamālā, Tāmraparṇī Puṣpajā and Utpalāvati; Sahya, i.e. the Western Ghats to the north of the Malaya, from which rises Godāvāri, Bhīmarathī, Kṛṣṇā, Veṅvā, Vañjulā, Tuṅgabhadrā, Suprayogā, Bāhyā and Kāverī; Suktimat, i.e. parts of the Vindhyan range including the Śakti hills of eastern M.P., from which rise the rivers Ṛṣikulyā, Kumārī, Mandagā, Mandavāhinī and Kūpā; Ṛkṣavat, i.e. parts of the Vindhyan range to the south of Malwa, from which rise the rivers Soṇa, Mahānadī, Narmadā, Śurasā, Kriyā, Mandākinī, Daśārṇā, Citrakūtā, Vipāśā, Mañjulā, Bāluvāhinī, Śunī, Tamasā, Pippalaśroṇī, Karāmodā, Paiśācikā, Citrotpalā, Suktimati, Sakuli, Tridivā and Krumu; Vindhya, i.e. the Vindhyan range extending from Gujarat to Bihar but sometimes used in a restricted sense with the exclusion of the portions covered by the Suktimat, Rkṣavat and Pāriyātra, from which rise the Tāpi, Payoṣṇī, Nirvindhya, Nisadhavati, Veṅvā, Vaitaraṇī, Sinivālī, Kumudvati, Brāhmaṇī, Mahāgaurī, Durgā and Antaḥśilā; and Pāriyātra or Pāripātra, i.e. Western Vindhya including the Aravali range, from which rise Vedasmṛti, Vedavati, Vṛtrāghnī, Sindhu, Parṇāśā, Candanā, Sadānīrā, Mātri, Parā, Lupī, Vidiśā, Vetravati, Śiprā, Avantī and Kuntī.

Although there are some errors in the Puranic lists of rivers quoted above (e.g. in certain cases one river is said to have been issued from different ranges), it is a fact that a good number of these rivers survive even to this day in their original Puranic name and address, and the writers of the Purāṇas were correct in locating their sources. This proves that although the writers of the Purāṇas resorted to imaginary conceptions so far as the world or cosmos was concerned, in the case of India-proper they were more objective. In describing the peoples and countries of India the writers of the epico-puranic tradition have also shown much objectivity, though in certain cases they were wrong. The Epics and the Purāṇas contain list of about 500 tīrthas or holy places sacred to different deities. Most of these tīrthas have been correctly located. These tīrthas form the subject-matter of the fourth volume of P.V. Kane's History of Dharmaśāstra which is appended by a long list of tīrthas<sup>1</sup> identified on the basis of Purāṇic and allied materials.

The Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa which is important especially for geographical information has a section called Kūrmavibhāga containing a list of countries and peoples of India arranged according to the position of the land conceived as a tortoise, as it lies on water resting upon Viṣṇu and looking eastwards. This arrangement is based upon earlier astronomical works like those of Parāśara or Varāhamihira which associated nine divisions of India with particular constellations focussing as if on the nine parts of the region shaped like a tortoise. The nine limbs of the tortoise are the back, head, right forefoot, right flank, right hindfoot, left flank, left forefoot and left hindfoot. This arrangement is elaborately found in the fourteenth chapter of Varāhamihira's Brhatsamhitā. Utpala in his commentary on the Brhatsamhitā has referred also to the contents of two other texts, the Samāśasamhitā and the Parāśara in connection with the peoples and territories of the ninefold Kūrma divisions. The topographical list of the Brhatsamhitā with proper identification of the peoples, countries, mountains, rivers, etc., contained therein was published by J.F. Fleet in Indian Antiquary for 1893. It was subsequently published by K.K. Dasgupta<sup>1</sup> in a book form who had given additional annotations on topics of more geographical interest. Chapter two of A. Mitra Sastri's India as Seen in the Brhatsamhitā of Varāhamihira deals with the geographical data contained in the Brhatsamhitā and other lesser works of Varāhamihira.<sup>1</sup>

Sanskrit literature, as we have stated above, abounds with geographical materials. The Kāvya-mīmāṃsā of Rājasekhara, composed about the beginning of the tenth century AD refers to the Puranic conception of the world consisting of seven drīpas surrounded respectively by oceans, the varṣa-parvatas beginning with Meru, the nine divisions of the Bhāratavarṣa, the seven kula-parvatas and traditional five parts of India, namely Pūrva-deśa, Dakṣiṇāpatha, Paścāddeśa, Uttarāpatha and Madhyadeśa. The Kāvya-mīmāṃsā states that the eastern country lies to the east of Banaras; to south of Māhiṣmatī is the Deccan; to the west of Devasabhā is the western country; to the north of Pṛthudaka is the northern country; and the tract lying between the confluence of the Gaṅgā and the Yamunā is called Antarvedī. Historical works like Bāṇa's Harṣacarita, Kalhaṇa's Rājatarāṅgiṇī, Bilhaṇa's Vikramāṅkadevacarita, Sandhyākara Nandi's Rāmacarita, etc. supply useful geographical information. Certain medieval Sanskrit lexicons such as Yādavaprakāśa's Vaijayantī, Hemacandra's Abhidhānacintāmaṇi, Keśava's Kalpadrakośa Purusottama's Trikāṇḍaśeṣa, etc., have geographical sections containing numerous place names and their identifications. The extensive Māhātmya literature which contains portions from the Purāṇas or Samhitās deals with the topography of different tīrthas or holy places. Their geographical importance is very great in the sense that evidence may be adduced from them to enable us to locate important sites. Tantric texts like the Śaktisaṅgama, Hevajra, Jñānārṇava, Kulārṇava, etc., are equally useful.

The Pīṭhanirṇaya or Mahāpīṭhanirūpaṇa section of the Tantracuḍāmaṇi mentions numerous Śakta-Saiva holy places called Pīṭhas. An important early list of the same type is offered by a pre-Gupta Buddhist work entitled Māhāmāyūrī. In D.C. Sircar's The Śakta Pīṭhas<sup>1</sup> the geography of the Tantras has elaborately been dealt with.

Apart from Sanskrit, the Tamil literature is also a mine of geographical information. So far as the earlier sources are concerned, besides the celebrated epics, Śilappadikaram and Maṇimekalai, reference may be made to the texts ascribed to the Saṅgama period. The origin of Telugu and Kannada literature cannot be attributed earlier than the eighth century AD. Other regional languages belong to a still later period. It should be observed that the development of literature in regional languages was due to the new religious movements which wanted to reach to the people directly through their own spoken languages. Both Lord Mahāvira and Lord Buddha preached in some forms of Māgadhī Prakrit. The Buddhists however subsequently resorted to an artificial language for recording the contents of their canon which came to be known as Pali. Like the Church Slavonic it was a clerical language which was never spoken by peoples, and its use was restricted only to the writing of the sacred texts. But the Prakrit tradition was continued by the Jains who were also interested in writing even in the derivatives of different Prakrits called Apabhraṃsas, which were the forerunners of the regional languages. The Brahmāṇa converts of Buddhism and Jainism did not give up their traditional Sanskrit study as a result of which there is also no dearth of Buddhist and Jain scriptural works in Sanskrit.

The Jain canonical literature contain numerous geographical and topographical references, especially in connection with the travels of Lord Mahāvira and the spread of Jainism. The Bhagavatī-sūtra (otherwise called Viyāhapaññatti or Vyākhyāprajñapti) gives a list of sixteen Mahājanapadas which consists of Aṅga, Vaṅga, Magaha (Magadha), Malaya, Mālava, Accha, Vaccha (Vaṃsa or Vatsya), Koccha, Paḍha, Lāḍha (Rāḍha), Vajji, Moli (Malla), Kāśi, Kosala, Avāha and Sambhuttara (Subhuttara or Sumhottara). The Jains divided the peoples of India into two groups—Ārya and Mleccha. The peoples mentioned above belong to the Ārya category, while there is another list of eighteen peoples belonging to the Mleccha category. Most of the works belonging to the Aṅga, Upāṅga, Prakīrṇa, Chedasūtra and Mūlasūtra groups as well as the vast commentarial works of the Jains contain copious geographical references. But there has been no serious attempt to study the vast mass of geographical data contained in the Jain literature from the viewpoint of historical geography. It is only in the fourth chapter of J.C. Jain's Life in Ancient India as depicted in the Jain Canon<sup>1</sup> that we find a serious attempt to trace and identify the place-names as recorded in Jain works, especially in connection with the travels of Lord Mahāvira. The Jambuddīvapaññatti, which is the sixth Upāṅga, contains a description of Jambudvīpa as well as that of Bhāratavarṣa. It speaks of seven varṣas or countries constituting the seven main divisions of Jambudvīpa. The Vividhārthakalpa of Jinaprabha Suri contains numerous geographical notices. The Tiloyapannatti, a post-Gupta work, contains details of Jain cosmography.

The Pali Tripiṭaka, especially the Vinaya and the Sutta contains incidental references to cities and places connected with the gradual spread of Buddhism. The Aṅguttara Nikāya contains descriptions of sixteen Mahājanapadas or great-settlements during the time of the Buddha. They were Aṅga, Magadha, Kāśī, Kosala, Vajji, Malla, Ceti, Vaṃsa, Kuru, Pañcāla, Mleccha, Śurasena, Assaka, Avantī, Gandhāra and Kamboja, each named after the people who settled at a particular place or colonised it. The Dīgha, Majjhima and Samyutta Nikāyas as well as the Jātakas and other texts of the Khuddaka Nikāya contain numerous names of settlements and territorial divisions. The Pali texts supply us with abundant information on Madhyadeśa or Middle country and the localities bordering it. The Milindapañho which is an important non-canonical Pali text contain many significant geographical notices. The Pali commentaries, especially those of Buddhaghōṣa, and the chronicles of Ceylon, namely, the Dīpavamsa and the Mahāvamsa, furnish us with chips of information as to the geographical knowledge of the Buddhists. The Sanskrit Buddhist texts also contain a lot of geographical information. The sixteen Mahājanapadas are also mentioned in the Mahāvastu with certain changes. This list differs from the Pali list in as much as it excludes Gandhāra and Kamboja and includes Śibi and Diśārṇa. The Lalitavistara and the Buddhacarita, dealing with the life of the master, describe numerous countries and peoples. The same holds good in the case of the Bodhisattvāvadānakalpalatā and the Aśokāvadāna. B. C. Law's Geography of Early Buddhism<sup>1</sup> attempted for the first time at presenting a geographical picture of ancient India drawn from the Pali sources. The same author had also written by way of a supplement to the above work, Geographical Data from Sanskrit Buddhist Literature which was published in ABORI, XV, 1934 and subsequently incorporated into his Geographical Essays<sup>2</sup>. G. P. Malalasekera's Dictionary of Pali Proper Names<sup>3</sup> mentions all the geographical names found in the Pali literature along with complete references to the original sources. B. N. Chaudhuri's Buddhist Centres of Ancient India<sup>4</sup> is also a valuable contribution to this field.

3. The Graeco-Roman Sources

Among the Greeks, the first attempt at sketching a map of the world was made by Aristagoras of Miletus who flourished about 550 BC. His kinsman Hecataeus (500 BC) corrected and enlarged this map and added a commentary, known as Ges Periodos or Periegesis of which only fragments are preserved in quotations. In such a fragment, the name of India, as well as that of the river Indus, and also tribes like the Gandari (occupying the Upper Indus and the Kabul Valley regions with their capital at Caspapyrus or Caspatyrus), the Calatians (also mentioned by Herodotus, but we have no clue to their position) and the Opians (cf. Alexandria Opiane at the foot of the Indian Caucasus, i.e. the Hindukush) are mentioned, Hecataeus also referred to an Indian city called Argante, but it has not yet been identified. The work of Hecataeus was much consulted by later historians and geographers and was apparently used to correct the chart of Anaximander. The surviving fragments, however, help us very little to understand the real extent of the geographical knowledge possessed by their author.

The geographical chapters in the Historiae of Herodotus (490-424 BC) compensate us to a certain extent for the loss of the original work of Hecataeus. He knows India as the twentieth strati of Darius. He had practically no idea of India proper lying to the east of the Indus, the region which he considered to be a sandy tract, uninhabited and unknown. To him India was the land of the Indus flowing towards the east and the rising sun. From the mouth of the Indus to the Arabian gulf there was a continuous sea. This idea was formed by Herodotus on the basis of an existing legend according to which Scylax of Caryanda in Caria undertook, at the command of the Persian king Darius Hystaspis, about 510 BC, a voyage to explore the coast of Asia from the Indus to the Red Sea, and composed a report of his voyage which is now lost. A city called Caspatyrus<sup>1</sup> in the land of the Pactyice<sup>2</sup> and tribes like the Padaeans who were still in their food-gathering stage are mentioned by Herodotus.

The Indica of Ctesias, of which fragments and extracts survive, is full of fables and absurdities. His geographical knowledge of India, to which he assigned an unthinkable extent, was little in advance to that of Herodotus. He was not acquainted with the name of the Ganges or with anything beyond the Punjab and the valley of the Indus. He says that the Indus was forty stadia broad in its narrowest part and 200 stadia in its greatest width and that it flowed for a part of its course through a hilly country. While residing at the Persian court, he accepted without hesitation the marvellous tales regarding the distant regions of the East. Thus he did not hesitate to describe Indian worms, seven cubits in length, devouring oxen and camels.

Alexander's expedition first opened up to the Greeks a real knowledge of the interior of India. Of the historians of Alexander, Arrian occupies the foremost position, though writing centuries after the events which he records. Arrian's narrative is based upon those of Aristobulus, and Ptolemy, the son of Lagus, both of whom accompanied Alexander throughout his expedition. It should be pointed out in this connexion that Arrian had a special turn for geography, as is evident from his report to the emperor Hadrian concerning the shores of the Euxine as well as from his elaborate abstract of the voyage of Nearchus. The geographical aspects of Arrian's narrative are entirely in accordance with that of Strabo. It appears that the latter had also depended on the authority of Aristobulus. On the other hand, Diodorus, Plutarch and Quintus Curtius followed the authority of Clitarchus who, though a contemporary of Alexander, was certainly not a writer of judgement and discretion.

Nearchus who, at the command of his master, conducted the fleet of Alexander along the coasts of Gedrosia and Carmania to the Persian Gulf, whence he sailed again to the mouth of the Tigris, wrote a detailed narrative of his voyage, a brief but useful reproduction of which has been transmitted to us by Arrian. The point from which the fleet of Nearchus took its departure is not known to us. The fleet proceeded as far as the sandy island called Crocala, and then a harbour (probably modern Karachi) which he named after Alexander. On reaching the mouth of the river Arabis (modern Purali) Nearchus proceeded along the coast of the Oritae and arrived at a place called Cocala, and sailing whence he made a good course on the mouth of the river Tomerus, corresponding to modern Muklow or Hingul, and then reached Malana, i.e. Capa Malan. From this place, going along the coast inhabited by the Ichthyophagi, the fleet reached Badis (near the modern town of Jask), stopping at the stations of Bagisara (the headland now called Arabah), Calama (probably on the river Kalami existing even today) and Mosarna (the promontory called Pasni).

Megasthenes who lived in Pāṭaliputra for a long time wrote a book on India, large extracts of which have been preserved to us especially by Arrian, Diodorus, and Strabo. His statement regarding the distance of Pāṭaliputra from the Indus which has been transmitted to us only by Pliny is certainly untrustworthy, but the principal points or stages in the general line of route may clearly be followed. Megasthenes was the first Greek writer who transmitted some account of the Ganges from personal observation. He enumerated as many as nineteen tributaries of the great river and held quite correctly that it took its rise in the Indian Caucasus (the Himālaya) and after flowing at first to the south, turned eastwards and followed an easterly course as far as Palibothra (Pāṭaliputra). But his information regarding the course of the river below Palibothra is imperfect. According to Megasthenes, the extent of India from the mountains on the north to the ocean of the south was about 20,000 stadia while that from the east to the west was 16,000 stadia. It appears that the knowledge of Megasthenes was confined to the plains of the Indus and the Ganges. Of the mountain ranges and table-lands of the interior he seems to have had no knowledge. It should also be stated that Megasthenes was probably the first man to obtain some positive information regarding the island of Taprobane or Ceylon. After Megasthenes, another ambassador named Daimachus was sent by Selucus to the Mauryan court of Allitrochades (Amitraghades, Amitraghāta, an appellation of king Bindusāra) who had also written an account of his journey which was, according to Strabo worthy of very little credit. Still less we know about Dyonysus, mentioned by Pliny, who was an ambassador of Ptolemy Philadelphus to the court of an Indian king.

The purpose of Eratosthenes of Cyrene (276-175 BC), the father of scientific geography, was to reform the map of the world as it had existed down to his time, but his ideas of the geographical position and configuration of India were in great measure erroneous. He believed rather wrongly, on the authority of Patrocles, an officer under Selucus and his son Antiochus who prepared a statistical account of the provinces under his master's rule, that the Caspian communicated with the ocean to the north or north-east in the same manner as the Persian Gulf did to the south. That the Indian ocean was continuous with the Persian Gulf was conclusively established by the voyage of Nearchus, but the Caspian was in no way connected with the Indian Sea, though Patrocles firmly believed that it was possible to sail round from India to Caspian Sea, and this belief was shared by Eratosthenes and Strabo. Eratosthenes thought that the ocean was situated to the east of India and that the Ganges flowed directly into it. He regarded the great mountain chain of Imaus as the continuation of the Indian Caucasus which was situated to the north of the Ganges and descended to the shores of the Eastern Ocean. He knew that in the southern extremity of India two sides were enclosed like the angles of a triangle, but was unable to reconcile this with his previously conceived notions. So in his square type map of India he shifted the southern triangle to the south-east, making the south-eastern angle enlarged and accentuated, in order to make it agreed with what he regarded as established conclusions.

Eratosthenes was severely criticised by another great astronomer Hipparchus (died about 125 BC) whose lost work is referred to by Strabo. Hipparchus had made considerable progress in making a correct map of the countries bordering on the Mediterranean, but regarding India he adopted the erroneous and greatly exaggerated estimates of its dimensions, given by some earlier writers, especially Diamachus, who was an ambassador in the court of Bindusāra. He assigned an enormous length to India from north to south, but unable to gain space for this unusual length he had to remove the Himalayan range much farther to the north, towards the North pole. The southern points could not be enlarged because he believed that the southern regions of India including Taprobane lay within the tropic. Hipparchus rejected the parallels of latitude assumed by Eratosthenes in view of the exaggerated extent he assigned to India. He maintained that the river Indus had its course towards the south-east and that the river Ganges fell into the Eastern Ocean.

The great historian Polybius who was a contemporary of Hipparchus, in the thirty-fourth of his voluminous historical work, made a systematic study of geography. This volume is now lost, but according to Strabo, Polybius spoke of Eratosthenes as the best authority concerning the Asiatic provinces from the Euphrates to the Indus. From the extant fragments we learn that Antiochus the Great came to India after crossing the river Erymanthus (the Helmund) and proceeded through Drangiana towards Carmania. The details in regard to his march are interesting from a geographical point of view.

Of other writers after Polybius, Agatharchides (2nd century BC) refers to the trade of the Sabaeans with India, but no geographical indication is preserved by him. Artemidorus, a junior contemporary of Agatharchides, on the other hand wrote something on India, but his account is described by Strabo as superficial and inaccurate. He measured the distance of the Indian Ocean from the mouth of the Ganges to Gades (Gadeira of Hecataeus, Herodotus and Scylax, the starting point of the voyage of Pythaeas) at 68,545 stadia and that from the mouth of the Ganges through India and Parthia to Myriandrus on the Gulf of Issus at 47,725 stadia. Regarding the course of the Ganges, however, Artemidorus was more or less accurate in his description.

The geography of Strabo begins with an evaluation of the works of his predecessors. In regard to Asia, Strabo adopted the map of Eratosthenes with little alteration and believed that the chain of mount Taurus divided Asia into two zones. The main chain itself branched out in different directions, one of which was connected with the great ranges of the Paropamisus or the Hindukush. The portion of Asia south to the Taurus comprised India, Ariana, Persia and the regions to the west of the Persian Gulf. His account of India which occupies the greater part of his fifteenth book is based upon information drawn almost entirely from Megasthenes, or from the still earlier writers like Nearchus, Onesicritus, Aristobulus and others who had accompanied Alexander on his expedition down to the Indus. Like all responsible geographers, Strabo takes into account the importance of the rivers. He deals with details the Indus and its tributaries, but regarding other rivers, he had vague and indistinct ideas. Exaggerated statements about the Ganges as to its size and width are found in his work, but he does not specifically mention any of its numerous tributaries. In accordance with the system of Eratosthenes he regards the great mountain chain of the north as a continuation of the Taurus, extending from west to east, the different portions of which were known by the local appellations of Paropamisus (the Hindukush), Emodus (the central chain of the Himalayas), Imaus (eastern portion of the range) and others. His description of the conquests of Alexander throws important light on the political geography of north western India. Regarding Taprobane, he had nothing to add to what he derived from Eratosthenes.

Hippalus, a Greek mariner who was engaged in trade with India, observed the regularity of the monsoons, and taking advantage of it ventured to steer a direct course from the promontory of Syagrus in Arabia to the coast of India. This was a remarkable achievement, according to Pliny. The writer of the Periplus Maris Erythraei also states that Hippalus discovered the direct course across the ocean and that the south-west wind was also called Hippalus after his name. Pliny's reference to Hippalus proves that the latter conducted his voyage before 77 AD, while Strabo's silence in this case evidently implies that the voyage took place sometime after 23 AD. The discovery itself clearly implies the previous existence of a considerable trade with India, otherwise no urge could be developed to shorten the way.

The Chorographica of Pomponius Mela written about 40-44 AD in Latin, contains a few notices of India. His general description of its geography was confined to a short account of the Ganges and the Indus and to a vague reference to the promontory of Collis that formed the south-east angle of Asia. This promontory is almost certainly the same with the Tamarus of Eratosthenes and Strabo, the supposed eastern termination of the chain of the Taurus, which had no real existence. Mela held that the whole extent of the shores of India was a voyage of sixty days and that Taprobane was not merely a large island, but the beginning of another world.

The geographical sections of Pliny's encyclopaedia are for the most part dry lists of names of cities, tribes, rivers and mountains. His knowledge regarding the geographical position and dimensions of India was derived mainly from Eratosthenes. Pliny received a fair idea of coastal India from the reports of commercial navigations but, strangely enough, he made no attempt to revise the conception of Eratosthenes on the basis of his latest sources of information. His account of the northern portions of India, and the interior from the Indus to the Ganges is taken wholly from the writers of the time of Alexander. The Indus itself he describes as flowing for 1,250 miles and receiving 19 tributaries. The distance from the Indus to the Hydaspes was 120 miles and that from the Hydaspes to Hypasis 290 miles. According to Pliny, the Indus originates on that spur of Mount Caucasus, called Paropamisus and forms at its mouth an extremely large island called Prasiane, and a smaller one called Patale (cf. Pattala of Alexander's historians). He substitutes for the Hydraotes a river called Cantaba or Cantabra, a name otherwise totally unknown. His enumeration of the tribes on the Indus and its adjoining areas is a mere collection of names. With regard to the Ganges, Pliny could not locate its source, but held that it received as many as 19 tributaries. He distinguished between the Erannoboas and the Sonus, without caring to know that they were the names of the same river, now called the Son. Of the peoples living on the Ganges and its neighbouring tracts, Pliny's enumeration is, as usual, a list of names, derived from a variety of sources, and recorded without discrimination or without any attempt at geographical arrangement. Regarding the island of Taprobane or Ceylon, Pliny depended on a new type of evidence collected from four Ceylonese envoys in the court of Claudius. According to Pliny, the side of the island facing India from the south-west was 10,000 stadia in length. It is an enormous exaggeration exceeding even the previous estimates of Eratosthenes who had given its dimensions as 700 stadia in length and 5,000 in breadth.

The Periplus Maris Erythraei is a valuable and trustworthy account of the early trade and maritime activities between India and the Western countries. The term Erythrean Sea denotes the Indian Ocean, including the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf. The author's name is not known, but internal evidence seems to indicate that he was an Egyptian/Greek and was probably himself actively engaged in trade in course of which he made the voyage from the head of the Red Sea to India. There is a great discrepancy among the scholars regarding the date of the Periplus, but it appears that it was composed about the eighth or ninth decade of the first century AD. The mention of Scythia in the Periplus undoubtedly refers to the country more distinctly characterised by Ptolemy as Indo-Scythia. The Indus is called Sinthus, which had seven mouths in all, but the middle one was navigable on which was situated the emporium of Barbaricum wherefrom merchants carried their commodities up the river to the metropolis of Scythia called Minnagara. Beyond the mouth of the Indus was a deep bay called Eirion (Sanskrit Iriṇa, Rann of Cutch) divided into a lesser and greater gulf of that name. Next comes the gulf of Baraca (Dvārakā) followed by another called Barygaza (Bhṛgukaccha, modern Broach). Proceeding onward from Barygaza the author of the Periplus makes the important remark that the coast of India thenceforth extends from north to south, an observation which shows him to have a more clear idea of the true configuration of India than any previous geographer. The adjoining coast beyond Barygaza extending in a straight line from north to south was included in the region called Dachinabadis or Dakṣiṇāpatha. The inland country back from the coast towards the east comprised many desert regions and great mountains, all kinds of wild beasts and many populous nations, as far as Ganges. The distance of the coast extending from Barygaza down to the confines of Damirica (Tamilaka, the Tamil land or the Draviḍa country) was no less than 7000 stadia. The author of the Periplus gave more or less a correct description of the western sea-coast of India from Barygaza to Cape Comari. After that his description becomes vague. He failed to understand the upward turn his ship took from the southernmost point of India. He described the western coast as still holding a direction from north to south, as far as a place called Colchi (modern Kolkos near Tutikorin on the north eastern curve). Beyond this Gulf of Colchi he placed another gulf with a low shore named after a place in the interior called Argaru (Uragapura or Uraiyur near Tiruchirapalli). He regarded the headland bounding the Gulf of Argaru as the southernmost point of the mainland, though it was really more than a few degree north of Cape Comorin. Then he described the coast as running directly (taking a slight bend) towards the east to a considerable range of distance and thence straight towards the north. The coast then turns to the east again, where lay the mouths of the Ganges. The description of the coast containing the mouths of the Ganges is so summary that we have no means to get a clear idea. The author of the Periplus considered, in accordance with the received view of all Greek geographers, that Ceylon lay altogether to the south of India, and in order to make it so, he was rather compelled to bring the ports and gulfs which he knew to be opposite to that island, quite out of their position. He described Ceylon as extending to the west almost as far as the opposite coast of Azania or Zanzibar.

Introduction

The geographical treatise of Marinus of Tyre is known to us only through Ptolemy who speaks of him as the latest writer of his time. It appears that, like Eratosthenes, his object was simply to correct and reform the map of the world. Marinus assigned to the known world unusual length and breadth. The method by which Marinus had represented the surface of the earth, with its meridians of longitude and parallels of latitude, was defective according to Ptolemy. The latter listed the following errors of Marinus: the exaggerated distance of 34,000 stadia from the Argaric Gulf (which followed Cape Cory, the southernmost headland of the peninsula of India according to Marinus) to the city of Couroula; that of 9,400 stadia between Couroula and Paloura; that of 13,000 stadia between Paloura and Sada; that of 3,500 stadia between Sada and Tamala; and that of 1,600 stadia between Tamala and Golden Chersonese; the circuit 19,000 stadia of the Gangetic Gulf; wrong estimate of the distance from Golden Chersonese to Cattigara and that between the former and Zaba; misplacement of the meridian of Cape Cory; wrong location of places in coastal India, and so on. However, Ptolemy freely admits that he made the work of Marinus the basis of his own, and adopted all his conclusions where he had no special reason for deviating from them.

Ptolemy, who lived and wrote at Alexandria about the middle of the second century AD, was one of the most accomplished men of science that antiquity produced, whose writings exercised a great influence over succeeding centuries. His object was not like that of the ordinary geographer to describe places, but to correct and reform the map of the world in accordance with the increased knowledge which had been acquired of distant countries and with the improved state of science. "The correct course," he says, "in drawing a map of the world is to lay down as the basis of it those points that were determined by the most correct observations, and to fit into it those derived from other sources, so that their positions may suit as well as possible with the principal points thus laid down in the first instance." But in spite of his best introduction, he could not do full justice to his scheme. There were many reasons. Hipparchus suggested that when the eclipse of the moon was seen from any two stations, the difference of time at which it was observed would give the difference in the longitude of the two places, and this difference of time could readily be converted into degrees. But this method could not be followed and had it been followed, it could yield no better result. So Ptolemy had to depend on the existing method of the observation of the places lying opposite to each other, and therefore on the same meridian. This means that he had to depend upon the experience of the navigators who sailed a direct course from north to south or from one point to another. But their accounts were mostly misleading. Thirdly, Ptolemy assumed the sphere of the earth to be 180,000 stadia in circumference, a degree of the equator being 500 stadia instead of 600 which is its real length, and estimated the length of the inhabited part of the world, as measured along the parallel of Rhodes which divided the then world into two almost equal parts, at 72,000 stadia and its breadth at 40,000 stadia. He calculated the longitudes from the meridian in the west which was that passing the Islands of the Blest (probably the Canary Islands), his most eastern meridian from that of Alexandria was estimated at  $119\frac{1}{2}$  degrees and the distance of the first meridian from the same at  $60\frac{1}{2}$  degrees thus making 180 degrees together. His estimate of the breadth he obtained by fixing the southern limit in the parallel of  $16\frac{1}{2}$  degrees of South Latitude, and by fixing the northern limit in the parallel of 63 degrees North Latitude he could include a space of nearly 80 degrees between the two parallels. His basic error was his acceptance of the conclusion of Marinus that a degree at the equator contained 500 stadia. The result of his application of this mode of graduation to the map of the Mediterranean and the surrounding countries was necessarily to extend them enormously from west to east. His second basic mistake was the erroneous determination of the primary meridian in the Islands of the Blest, regarding the position of which he had no real idea. As a result, all his longitudes became misplaced. His whole system of geography thus suffers from the basic mistakes of calculation referred to above. In general shape, his countries were narrowed at the north and enormously extended towards the south. Hence the eastern parts of Asia are carried a long way beyond their true distance from Europe and Africa. So far as India is concerned, Ptolemy's errors had the effect of distorting its entire map. The result as presented to us in the table of Ptolemy is a mass of utter confusion. He not only gave to the Indian coasts, from the mouths of the Indus to those of the Ganges, an undue extension in longitude but practically denied anything of an Indian peninsula, placing Cape Comorin only four degrees south of Barygaza, the real distance being over 800 geographical miles. According to Ptolemy's system Paithan should be located in the Bay of Bengal, the final course of the Ganges somewhere near Canton, the river Mahānadī in Siam or Cambodia and so on. The dimensions assigned to Ceylon by him would make it about fourteen times as large as the reality. Equally he distorted the regions beyond the Ganges. He possessed valuable information of the South East Asian countries, but his geographical arrangements were altogether wrong. His chapters relating to India supply a long list of places. Attempts have been made by a series of scholars to determine the approximate location of and even to identify such places. These have, however, been met with very little success.

It is said that towards the close of the first century Apollonius of Tyana visited India. All that is known of this visit is derived from his biography written by Philostratus about 217 AD which was based upon a note-book of Damis, a fellow-traveller of Apollonius. It contains a mythical description of the Indus region and its adjoining areas with a good number of cock and bull stories evidently adopted from Ctesias. But Damis was really an arrant story-teller who reproduced old popular stories and passed them on as witnessed by him. Apollonius did not visit India very possibly.

Dionysus Periegetes (close of the third century AD) wrote a geographical poem of 1200 lines of which 85 lines were devoted to the description of India. According to Dionysus, who evidently depended on earlier authorities, the shape of India was rhomboidal. On the west its frontier was determined by the Indus, on the south by the Erythraean Sea, and on the east by the Ganges. He mentioned a few tributaries of the Indus and also a few tribes. In fact, there is nothing to find that he had derived any additional information concerning India.

Nothing is known about the period at which Marcianus of Heraclea wrote his Periplus of the Outer Sea which was in reality a mere compilation from Ptolemy. In his work some light is thrown upon Ptolemy's Transgangetic India, but in such an attempt he could only exaggerate the gravest errors of Ptolemy.

Solinus (third century AD) re-arranged the work of Pliny, so as to present a general geographical description, inserting under the head of each country notices of its more interesting and characteristic productions. So far as India is concerned, he had no idea of the existence of the vast regions in the Indian sea beyond the Ganges. In fact, Ptolemy was unknown to him. Of the Indian rivers he mentions the Ganges and the Indus. According to him, the Ganges rises from uncertain sources and its breadth varies from twenty to eight miles. He refers to the Gangaride, the Prasian nation with their Capital at Palibotri, the mount Maleus beyond Palibotri and to the Pandaeon nation governed by the females.

Geographical literature of the Greeks during the three centuries that followed the publication of Ptolemy's work consisted of nothing but dry and meagre abridgements or clumsy compilations from previously existing materials. Contemporary Latin literature also gives us no better understanding. The decline in general spirit and tone of literature, which so strongly marked the third and fourth centuries of the Christian era, extended its influence on the science of geography also.

4. The Chinese Sources

The Chinese records are the most valuable sources for the understanding of the historical geography of ancient and early medieval India, because, unlike the Classical and Sanskrit accounts, these were written by pilgrims who came to India, the land of the Buddha, travelled extensively in different parts of the country, from one monastery to another, for the purpose of acquiring knowledge in scriptures and also for that of collecting sacred texts, and recorded their experiences of this country derived from personal observations. We are told by I-tsing who lived about 670 AD that 500 years before his time twenty men, or about that number, had found their way through the province of Sz'chuen to the Mahabodhi tree in India, and for them and their fellow countrymen a king called Śrīgupta had erected a temple, the ruins of which were seen by him.

The first Chinese traveller whose writings have come down to us is Fa-hian whose work Fo-kwa-ki is known to us through the translations of

Introduction

Remusat, Klaproth, Lan dresse, Beal, Giles, Legge and Li-yuang-hsi. Fahian started for India in 399 AD, and after crossing the Gobi desert he reached Shen-Shen (region around the Lob lake). From this place he came to Khotan after travelling through the country of the Wei (the Karashar region). From Khotan he came to Khalcha near Pamir whence he came to the land of Dards, and subsequently to Udyāna, Gandhāra, Takṣaśilā and Puruṣapura and then to Nagarahāra. From Nagarahāra he came to Madhyadeśa and travelled extensively in Mathurā, Śāṅkāśya and Kānyakubja, in the country of Kosala where he visited the famous Jetavana Vihāra at Śrāvastī, and in Vaiśālī, Vārāṇasī, Pāṭaliputra, Rājagṛha and Bodhgaya and arrived at the port of Tāmralipti whence by the sea-route he went to Ceylon and Java, and then went back to his own country. The period of his journey was no less than 14 years. Very naturally his account as recorded in the Fo-kwo-ki, is of much importance in regard to the historical geography of India:

In 518 AD Sung Yun and Hwei-Sang were sent by the Empress of the Northern Wei dynasty to collect sacred texts of Buddhism. They seem to have taken the southern route from Tun-hwang to Khotan, and thence the same route as taken previously by Fa-hian. The Ye-tha (Ephthalites or White Huns) were then in possession of the old country of the Yue-chi and they had also conquered Gandhāra. Sung Yun and Hwei-Seng eventually reached U-Chang or Udyāna (country on the Swat Valley) and travelled through the districts around it. The report of their travels is contained in the fifth section of the "History of the Temples of Lo-Yang (Honan Fu)", the translation of which is to be found in the first volume of S. Beal's Buddhist Records of the Western World.<sup>1</sup>

Most important from the geographical point of view is Hiuen Tsang's account of India which is known as Si-yu-ki. Through the Central Asian route he reached Kabul from north-west via Bamian, and after travelling extensively in the north western region he crossed the Indus near Chind in April 631. He stayed for a few months in Taxila and visited the Buddhist establishments of this region. Thereafter he went to Kashmir where he studied Buddhism for two years. After visiting the ruins of Sangal he stayed at Jālandhara for a few months, and then crossed the Sutlej in autumn 635, and travelled as far as Mathura. From Mathura he took a north-western route and went to Thaneswar, From this place he took a direct easterly route by which he came to Śrāvastī via Śrughna, Gaṅgādvāra, Ahicchatra, Śāṅkāśya and Kausāmbī. From Śrāvastī he went to Kapilavāstu and Kusinagara, and then taking a westerly route he reached Banaras. He again went to Vaiśālī from Banaras, from Vaiśālī to Nepal, from Nepal back to Vaiśālī, and then crossing the Ganges he came straight to Pāṭaliputra whence he visited Bodhgaya, Giriyeḥ, Kuśāgrapura, Rājagṛha and Nālandā where he stayed for fifteen months and studied scriptures. Towards the close of 638 AD he began to travel eastwards, visited Modāgiri and Campā, and then crossing the Ganges, reached Puṇḍravardhana or North Bengal and eventually Kāmarūpa or Assam. From Kāmarūpa he took south-western route, reached Samataṭa or Lower Bengal, wherefrom he came to Tāmralipti in the Midnapore district. From Tāmralipti he reached Oḍra or Orissa in 639 AD. Thereafter he went to Kaliṅga in the Ganjam region, and then taking a north-western route reached Vidarbha. From Vidarbha he came to Andhra where he stayed a few months for studying scriptures at Amarāvati. From this place he went to Kāncipura, the capital of the Drāviḍa kingdom. Then through Mahārashtra he reached Bhṛgukaccha or Broach via Koṅkan. Then he backed to Ujjayinī and eventually reached Multan towards the close of 641 AD via Valabhī and Sindhu. From Multan he suddenly changed his mind and rushed back to Nālandā because he had some doubts on certain scriptural issues which he wanted to clarify. This time he stayed at Nālandā for two months and went to Kāmarūpa for a second time. About AD 643 he returned to Pāṭaliputra, met the king Harṣavardhana and participated at the religious conference held at Kanauj. From Kanauj he went to Jālandhar, then to Ohind and then to Kapiśā in AD 644 via Lamghan, Bannu, Gajni and Kabul. From Kapsā through the Panjshir valley and Khawak pass he reached Anderab and returned to China through Kāshgarh, Yarkhand and Khotan.

Hiuen Tsang was undoubtedly one of the greatest travellers of the world of all ages to whom every inch of India was known personally. He had a wonderful power of observation and also of recording everything in detail. Though he was a man of religion, unlike Fa-hian or I-tsing, his observations were not confined only to religious institutions. He had interest in everything including even political matters. He had recorded the actual distance from one place to another, describing the extent and circumference, the geographical, climatic and allied features of the countries, cities and localities visited by him with great insight and exactness. Cunningham's Ancient Geography of India, the first serious work on Indian historical geography which was done on the basis of intensive site study, was based on Hiuen Tsang's account. In fact Cunningham travelled through the routes followed by this Chinese pilgrim and could identify numerous sites mentioned in the ancient texts which were otherwise unknown.<sup>1</sup>

The next important Chinese traveller who came to India was I-tsing whose observations on India have been translated in J. Takakusu's Record of the Buddhist Religion as Practised in India and Malay Archipelago.<sup>2</sup> I-tsing started from China in AD 671 and returned in AD 695. His range of travel was restricted mainly to the districts of West Bengal, Bihar and Uttar Pradesh. He arrived by sea-route and landed at Tāmralipti whence he visited such places as Gṛdhrakūṭa, Bodhgaya, Vaiśālī, Kusinagara, Kapilavastu, Śrāvastī, Mṛgadāva, Kukkuṭārāma, etc. From AD 675 to 685 he was a student of Nālandā. He took 400 Sanskrit manuscripts to China and translated a few of them into Chinese. Apart from his own account of Indian travels, he wrote on 60 Chinese pilgrims who visited India previously, and compiled a Sanskrit-Chinese dictionary. His account of India mainly deals with the functional role of Buddhism in this country. He did not want to see anything beyond the methods of observing the Vinaya rules in different monasteries, and hence his account of India is not so important for the purpose of historical geography as that of Hiuen Tsang.

5. Arabic and Persian Sources

Although a good number of Arabic writers like Sulaiman (AD 851), Ibn Khurdadba (AD 912), Abu Zaid (AD 916), Al Itkhari (AD 951) Masudi (AD 956), etc., were interested in India, their knowledge about this country was rather vague for the lack of direct experience. The conquest of Sind by the Arabs in 712 AD and that of Multan in 713 AD gave them a footing in this land. This region had very naturally drawn the attention of the Arabic writers. Thus Baladhuri (9th century AD) in his Kitab Futuh al-Buldan described al-Kikan (modern Kelat in Baluchistan) as part of the land of Sind where it borders on Khurasan, and the route of Muhammad ibn Qasim from Shiraz (the Capital of Fars) via Makran to the cities of Qannazbur (Fannazbur, modern Panj-gur), Armail (Armabil), Qanil (Qanbali) and Daibul, all of which apparently belonged to Sind. Mukaddasi (10th century AD) described al-Lahum, a city in Bamian as 'the trade port of Khurasan and the treasure house of Sind'. The topography of Sind is found in greater details in a late historical romance, variously known as the Chach-nama, Tarikh-i-Hind-wa-Sind or Fath-nama a Persian work composed about the beginning of the thirteenth century.

Apart from Sind and north-western India, which drew the attention of the Arab writers on political considerations, they were equally interested in Southern India mainly for commercial reasons. S.M.H. Nainar's Arab Geographers' Knowledge of Southern India,<sup>1</sup> deals with the accounts of the early Arab writers on this region. S. M. Ali's Arab Geography,<sup>2</sup> and S. M. Ahmad's 'Al-Masudi's Contribution to Medieval Arab Geography' in Islamic Culture vols. XXVII-XXVIII are also important contributions to this field. The latter's India and its Neighbouring Territories as described by Sharij al Idrisi,<sup>3</sup> should also be mentioned in this respect. The account of Pāṇḍya country or Ma'bar (the coast of South India from Quilon to Nellore) as given by Wassaf is very important from the viewpoint of commercial geography. It should be mentioned in this connection that the Venetian traveller Marco Polo visited the Pāṇḍya country about AD. 1293 and had given a nice account of it. See H. Yule The Book of Ser Marco Polo.<sup>4</sup> See also Buzrug ibn Shahriyar, Kitab Ajāyab-ul-Hind, Eng. trans.

Ferrand, Relations des Voyages et Textes Geographiques Arabes, Persans et Turks.<sup>2</sup> Among other works of geographical implications mention may be made of Abul Fida's Taqwim al-Buldan<sup>3</sup>, Abu Zayd's Silsilat al-Tawarikh<sup>4</sup>, Yaqui's Mujam al-Buldan<sup>5</sup>, the merchant Sulaiman's Voyage du Marchand Arabe Sulaiman in Inde et en Chine<sup>6</sup>, Gardizi's Account of India<sup>7</sup>, Amin Ahmad Razi's Haft Iqlim<sup>8</sup>, Hudud al Ālam,<sup>9</sup> etc.

Among the Arabic writers whose experience in regard to India and whose knowledge and sense of judgement belonged to an exceptional category was Al-Bīrūnī (973-1048 AD.). He had acquaintance with the Indian traditions of astronomy, cosmography and geography which he had admirably summarised in his Kitabul Hind.<sup>10</sup> In addition to this Al-Bīrūnī had given a detailed account of the regions of India<sup>11</sup> making Kanauj as the centre of measuring distance from one place to another. The unit of measuring distance was stated by him as farsakh or kuroh (krośa) which was equivalent to Four Arabian miles (2,186 yards each). His locations of different regions in four directions were more or less correct. The reason for making Kanauj the centre had also been explained by him in terms of the fact that it lay in the middle or centre from the geographical point of view in so far as it lay half way between the sea and the mountains, in the midst of the hot and cold provinces, and also between the eastern and western frontiers of India. As has been stated above, Al-Bīrūnī was interested in Puraṇic cosmography. He had noted the divergences in the Puraṇic traditions in respect of the order of the Dvīpas or island-continent and their names, their subdivision, their extent and other particulars. Apart from Al-Bīrūnī the only Muslim writer who had interest in Puraṇic geography was Abul Fazl, the author of 'Ain-i-Ākbarī (Eng. trans. H. Blochmann and H.S. Jarrett). It is interesting to note that both of them tried to locate the subdivisions of Bhāratavarṣa in the subcontinent itself: Indradvīpa—Mid-India (Al-Bīrūnī), between Laṅkā and the Mahendra range (Abul Fazl); Kaserumat—to the east of Madhyadeśa (Al-Bīrūnī), between the Mahendra and the Śuktimat (Abul Fazl); Tāmraparṇa—in south-eastern India (Al-Bīrūnī), between the Śuktimat and Malaya (Abul Fazl); Gabhastimat—south of the Madhyadeśa (Al-Bīrūnī), between the Ṛkṣavat and the

Introduction

Pāriyātra (Abul Fazl); Gāndharva—to the north-west of Madhyadeśa (Al-Bīrūnī); and Varuṇa—Western part of the tract between the Suhya and the Vindhya (Abul Fazl).

6. Tibetan Sources

Although Classical and Chinese accounts have been seriously utilised in the study of the historical geography of India, the Tibetan sources have as yet drawn our little attention. The Tibetan historical literature may be classified under the following categories: Chronicles (Lo-rgyus), Dynastic Histories (r-Gyal-rabs, Jo-robs, gDun-rabs) Monastery Chronicles (gDan-rabs). Histories of Incarnations (Khrūns-rabs), Chronological Treatises (bs Tan-rtsis) and Histories of Religion (Chos-byuñ). Books of the last category known as the Chos-byuñ series are important for geographical studies because these works are devoted to the history of the spread of Buddhism in India and outside. Among the best known works of this category Bu-ston's (1290-1364 AD) Chos-byuñ expounds successively (1) general introduction to the Buddhist creed, (2) history of appearance of the Buddhist creed on earth and of its development in India (3) spread of Buddhism in Tibet and (4) a systematic catalogue of literature translated into Tibetan.<sup>8</sup> The Deb-ther-snon-po or Blue Annals composed by Gos-lo-tsa-ba (1392-1481) expounds the genealogy of the Buddha, history of Buddhism in India, spread of Buddhism in Tibet and Mongolia and allied topics.<sup>9</sup> The Pag-

sam-jon-zan of Sumpa-mkhan-po (1704-88) also recounts the history of Buddhism in India in its first part. It was Sarat Chandra Das who published the Tibetan text of its first and second parts and translated selected portions from it. It is unfortunate that the geographical contents of the three works mentioned above, selected from numerous works of the Chos-byun series, have not been taken into consideration.

The most notable work of this series which deals exclusively with India is Lama Tāranātha's rGya-gar-chos-byun or History of Buddhism in India composed in the year 1608. Its latest English translation directly from the Tibetan has been made by Alaka Chattopadhyaya and Lama Chimpa, and the volume has come out from the Indian Institute of Advanced Studies, Simla (1970) under the editorship of Debiprasad Chattopadhyaya. It is gratifying to note that the geographical contents of this work have not escaped the notice of the editor who has treated the subject at length in a separate appendix.

Apart from the works of the Chos byun series there is a class of historico-geographical literature in Tibetan which is also divided into a number of categories. Works belonging to the dkar-chag-s category deal with the descriptions of monasteries or temples, and other holy places as also with the routes to various countries. There are also certain descriptions of a more general geographical nature, usually known as gnas-bsad-s. Specific works on geography are also found in works like Dsam-gliñ-spyibsad (General Descriptions of Jambudvīpa) by Sum-pa-mkhan-po. Another work under the same title is by Min-grol-sporul-sku which deals partly with the geography of Tibet and partly with that of India. One may also often find interesting geographical materials in the so-called 'travel notes' lam-yig-s. Tibetan sources mention some such works, namely : Description of a Route to India (rga-gar-lam-yig), to the country of Sambhala (sa-mbha-la-i-lem-yig), to Nepal (bla-yul-gyi-lam-yig), etc. Among these works, the book on Sambhala is by the third Panchen Lama (1738-1780). The text consists not only of a description of Sambhala but also that of India. It is interesting to note that the description of India given in this work is largely based on the reports of G. Bogle and A. Hamilton who were in the court of the third Panchen Lama in 1774-75, and on the accounts of the pilgrims, who had been sent to India by this famous Tibetan hierarch.

7. Epigraphical Sources

We have already had the occasion to refer to the importance of the epigraphic records in the study of the historical-geography of India. The copper-plate grants sometimes record the places of their issue and the gift-land or village is often mentioned therein along with the name of the district in which it was situated and the names of the villages lying on its boundaries. Certain place-names mentioned in the inscriptions have not been changed even to this day (e.g. Ālūr, Vānāvāsī, etc.). In a few cases the initial syllable has been dropped off or changed (e.g. Pasundi=Asundi). Sometimes we have omission of consonant or vowel (e.g. Cemula=Ceula)

Introduction

or change in the final syllable (e.g. Sullam = Sulla, Altage = Alta), while very often the place-names undergo much change (e.g. Venugrāma = Balgaum). But such changes do not create much difficulty in identification. Still a good number of place-names mentioned in the inscriptions do not offer any clue to their identifications. In such cases the findspot of the inscription should be taken into consideration, because inscriptions are mostly local in nature and the places mentioned therein should not be far from the sites where they had been set up.

Epigraphical sources have been utilised by all writers of political history for the location of countries and places, the reconstruction of the former being impossible in the absence of the latter. H.C. Raychaudhuri's Political History of Ancient India and H.C. Ray's Dynastic History of Northern India<sup>1</sup> are important works on historical geography of India as well. The method of studying historical geography on the basis of epigraphical materials as a necessary precondition for studying political history set up in such works has been followed by most writers working in the field of political history. Apart from this, study of historical geography in itself especially on the basis of epigraphical materials has become popular in recent times among a section of the Indologists. A good number of doctoral dissertations dealing with historical geography of different parts of India have been published, and such works have enhanced much of our knowledge. Mention may be made in this connection of the works of C.L. Chakravarti (North India), M.S. Pande<sup>2</sup>, D.K. Ganguly<sup>3</sup> P.K. Bhattacharyya<sup>1</sup>, A. Bhattacharyya<sup>2</sup>, etc. The Deccan College, Poona, had launched a special research project on integral studies in historical and cultural geography and ethnography pertaining to different regions of India. The earliest one in this series was on Gujarat by H.D. Sankalia which was published in 1949. The next one in this series was by Sumati Mulay on the Deccan (Maharashtra and Karnataka), published in 1972. Other works in this series still remain unpublished among which mention may be made of D.K. Borah's work on Eastern India, S. Gokhale's work on Madhya Pradesh, K.L. Lele's work on Rajasthan, M. Mathur's work on Uttar Pradesh, T. K. Shashadri's work on South India, based upon Pallava records, and B. Suresh's work on South India based upon Cola records. The source books of epigraphical studies have been mentioned in the bibliographical section of this work.

The earliest epigraphic records which mention Gandhāra and Sindhu are the Behistun, Persepolis, Hamadan and Naqsh-i-Rustam inscriptions of Darius who ruled in Iran from 522 to 486 BC.<sup>6</sup> But it is in the distribution of the inscriptions of the Maurya emperor Aśoka that we have a definite idea about certain sites which were already important in the third century BC. The principal inscriptions of Aśoka may be divided into four classes—
(1) The Fourteen Rock Edicts: These comprise a set of fourteen inscriptions found incised at eight different places. Two of these are replaced by two different inscriptions at Dhauli and Jaugada, both in ancient Kalinga, and hence they are usually referred to as Kalinga edicts. (II) The Minor Rock Edicts: This is a set of two inscriptions one of which is incised at ten different places. (III) The Seven Pillar Edicts : This set of seven inscriptions is engraved on a pillar originally situated at Topra, but now at Delhi Six of these inscriptions are incised on other pillars found in five different places. (IV) The remaining inscriptions, mostly engraved on pillars and cave walls, are records of a miscellaneous character which do not fall into distinct groups like the above.

In the post-Maurya period, the domain of the Śuṅgas and the Kānvas comprised Magadha proper, but in the south and south-east the Andhras and the Kalingas had already asserted their independence, while in the north-west the Indo-Greeks held sway whose territories are known from the findspot and distribution of their coins and some stray inscriptions. Epigraphical evidence suggests that the Śakas of East Iran established themselves in the valley of the lower Sindhu in the first century BC, when they also penetrated as far east as Saurāṣṭra and the adjoining regions. The Śaka Satrapial families continued to dominate over considerable parts of Western India as late as the time of the Guptas, till Candragupta II finally annexed their dominions to the Gupta empire. The inscriptions of the Kṣaharāta Satraps which have been discovered in the rock-cut caves at Nasik and Karle and the Junagarh Rock inscription of Rudradaman I are important from the viewpoint of historical geography since they refer to numerous countries and their administrative divisions. The inscriptions of the Kuṣāṇas who ruled in northern India from the beginning of the first century AD come mostly from the Mathura region which was their political and cultural centre. Epigraphic records of the reign of Kaṇiṣka himself prove his control over Uttar Pradesh, Punjab, NWFP and the Bahawalpur region north of Sind. The discovery of a large number of Kaṇiṣka's records at Mathura, with one from Sui-vihar and of an epigraph of one of his immediate successors at Sanchi, seems to suggest that Sind, Rajasthan, Malwa and Saurashtra also came under the sphere of Kaṇiṣka's influence. From the beginning of the Christian era the Sātavāhanas were powerful in Upper Deccan whose cave inscriptions at Nanaghat and Nasik refer to a number of territories ruled over by them. Important geographical data are also obtained from the Hathigumphā inscription which describes the territories conquered by the Kalinga King Khāravela who flourished towards the end of the first century BC. The Nasik inscription of the Ābhīra Īsvaraśena, the Nagarjunikonda inscriptions of the Ikṣvāku kings of the Krishna-Guntur region and the Kundamudi grant of the Bṛhatphalāyana Jayavarman give a significant picture of political geography of the Deccan after the Sātavāhanas.

From the beginning of the fourth century AD the imperial Guptas became the principal political power of India. From the testimony of the Allahabad pillar inscription of Samudragupta it appears that in his time the

Introduction

Gupta empire comprised nearly the whole of Northern Rajasthan, Sind and Gujarat, and included the highlands of Chattisgarh and Orissa with a long stretch of territory along the eastern coast extending as far south as Chingleput and probably even farther. The Śaka and Kuṣāṇa principalities of the north and north-west as also the southern territories conquered by him remained as feudatories of the imperial Guptas. Three inscriptions of the time of Chandragupta II (c. 376-414 AD) indicate his extermination of Śaka rule from Gujarat and Kathiawar while the Mehrauli iron pillar inscription says that he "defeated a confederacy of hostile chiefs in Vaṅga, and having crossed in warfare the seven mouths of the river Sindhu, conquered the Vāhlikas". At the time of the disintegration of the Gupta empire, regional powers began to gain ground, as is proved by the Mandasore inscription of the Mālava king Yaśodharman, the exterminator of the Hunas. Epigraphical evidence points out the emergence of independent kingdoms, after the break-up of the Gupta empire from the sixth century AD onwards, ruled over by the Maitrakas (Valabhī), Gurjaras (Rajasthan and Nāndipurī), Maukharis (Uttar Pradesh with Kanauj as capital), and Later Guptas (Malwa and Magadha) and those of Bengal, Assam, Orissa, Kashmir and Thaneswar. In the seventh century all these states maintained their independent existence. It was only during the reign of Harṣavardhana (606-47 AD) that there was some sort of political integration in Northern India. His kingdom comprised the present states of Haryana and Uttar Pradesh, though towards the close of his reign he had annexed Magadha and even pushed his conquests as far as Orissa and Koṅgoda.

Epigraphical evidence also refers to the existence of numerous independent territories in the Deccan during the Gupta period. In Central Deccan the main branch of the Vākātakas built up a big kingdom with their headquarters in the Nagpur district, and a junior branch of the same family ruled at Vastsagulma, modern Basim in the Akola district. Inscriptions of the Nalas have been discovered from the Koraput and Bastar districts where they set up a territory of their own. In Western Deccan, inscriptions of the Bhojas have been discovered in the Goa region, those of the Traikutakas in the Konkan region and those of the Kalacuris in northern Mahārashtra, Gujarat and parts of Malwa. The early Rāṣṭrakūṭas founded kingdoms in Mānapura near Bandhogarh in Rewa and also in Berar as known from the inscriptions discovered at Tiwarkhed and Multai in the Betul district of Madhya Pradesh. In Eastern Deccan, epigraphical evidence refers to the emergence of the kingdoms of the Ānandas, Sālaṅkāyanas and Viṣṇukuṇḍins in the Andhra region, those of the Piṭṛbhaktas, Māṭharas, Vāsiṣṭhas and Eastern Gaṅgas in the Kaliṅga region and those of the Sarabhapurīyas and Pāṇḍuvamśīs in the Dakṣiṇa Kosala and Mekala regions. From the middle of the sixth century the Cālukyas of Badami with their headquarters in the Bijapur district became masters of the Deccan, and a branch of them ruled independently in the region around Piṣṭapura, the extent of their dominion being indicated in the Kopparam, Timmapuram and Chipurupalle grants belonging to this family. In the South, the contemporaries the Cālukyas were the Pallavas of Kāñci, whose monuments and inscriptions associate them intimately with Tondamaṇḍalam, between the North Pennar and the North Vellar. The varying extent of the Pallava kingdom is indicated by their numerous inscriptions which have been chronologically assigned to three categories: Prakrit copper plates assignable to the period AD 250-350; Sanskrit copper plates to 350-600; and copper plate records from the seventh century onwards. Among other South Indian powers of the sixth-seventh centuries AD known from epigraphical materials were the Colas of Uraiyūr and Reṇāṇḍu, the Kaḷabhras who held part of the Pāṇḍya country the Pāṇḍyas of the far south with headquarters at Madura, the Western Gaṅgas in the south-west Karnataka region, the Kadambas of Kuntaladeśa, the Bāṇas whose territory comprised parts of Kolar, North Arcot and Anantapur districts, and the Āḷupas of the Tuluva country.

From the middle of the eighth century the Pālas consolidated their power in Eastern India, the Pratihāras in Western India and the Rāṣṭrakūṭas in Southern India. Subsequent history of India was characterised by the conflict of these three big powers for attaining political supremacy. Numerous epigraphic records of the Pālas, Pratihāras and Rāṣṭrakūṭas show the varying extent of their kingdoms from time to time and their overlordship of different feudatories. In the Orissa region there was political fragmentation, and inscriptions refer to a number of dynasties ruling in different parts of the country like the Bhauma-karas in Balasore, Puri and Cuttack districts, the Bhañjas in Khiñjali and Khiching, the Tuṅgas in Yamagarta-maṇḍala, the Mayuras in Banaimaṇḍala, the Śūlkis in Talcher and Dhenkanal, etc. Between 800 and 1000 AD, in the Central and Western India the Candellas established their power in Bundelkhand, the Kalacuris in western Saurāṣṭra, the Cālukyas in Junagarh, the Cāpas in Vardhamānapura and Anahilapāṭaka, the Caulukyas in Sarasvatīmaṇḍala, the Cāhamānas in Śakambharī and Nadol, the Guhilas in Mewar, and the Tomaras in Delhi. So far as the Southern India was concerned, epigraphical evidence points to the rule of the Eastern Cālukyas in Veṅgī, the Eastern Gaṅgas in the tract between the lower Gangetic area and the Godāvarī, the Somavamśīs in Dakṣiṇa Kosala, the Western Gaṅgas in the south-west of Karnataka, the Bāṇas in the north of Kolar, the Noḷambas in Chitaldrug, the Vaidumbas in the north Pennar valley, the Perumars in Kerala, the declining Pallavas in the Kavari region, the Pāṇḍyas in Madura and the Colas in Tanjore.

Between 1300 and 1000 AD we come across a redistribution of power. The Yamini dynasty was established in the Punjab region. Kanauj came under the Gāhaḍavālas and subsequently under the Turks. The Caulukyas became predominant in the Gujrat region. In Rajasthan and adjoining region numerous local powers came into existence. Inscriptions show that the Yadu kings ruled in Bayana Śrīpatha or Bharatpur region. the Kacchaghātas in Gwalior, Dubkund and Narwar, the Paramāras in Mt. Abu,

Introduction

Bagar, Jalor and Bhilmal, the Guhilas in Mewar and Śisodiyā, and the Cāhamānas in Śakambharī. Ranthambhor, Nadol, Jabalipur and Debar. In Central India, the Paramāras maintained their territory in Malwa, the Candellas in Jejākabhukti and the Kalacuris in Tripurī and Ratanpur. In Eastern India Kāmarūpa was ruled in its different parts by local chiefs. A Karnataka dynasty occupied Mithila, a Gupta dynasty in Monghyr region, a Sena dynasty in Plthī region near Gaya and a Khayarabal dynasty in Japila or Sahabad district. The Pālas became a declining power on the verge of extinction. A Yādava dynasty came to rule over Vaṅga or Eastern Bengal which was subsequently annihilated by the Senas who were basically the rulers of Western Bengal and later extended their area. Inscription also testify the existence of independent kingdoms in Paṭṭikera or the Mainamati hills region in Tripura, and in Samataṣa and Vaṅga ruled one Deva family. In the Central and Western region of upper Southern India the Rāṣṭrakūṣa power was supplanted by the later Cālukyas of Kalyāṇa. This area subsequently came under the Kalacuris of Kalyāṇa and the Yādavas of Devagiri. The Śilāhāras ruled sometimes independently and sometimes as feudatories of big powers in the Koṅkan region. In the eastern portion of Upper Southern India the Kākatīyas ruled between the Krishna and the Godavārī, the Eastern Cālukyas in Veṅgī and the Eastern Gaṅgas in Upper Andhra and Orissa and the Somavaṃśīs in Dakṣiṇa Kosala. Epigraphical evidence also testifies the existence of minor powers like the Chindukanāgas in the Bastar district, the Telugu-Coḍas in Cuddapa, Kurnul and Anantapur district, the Rāṣṭrakūṣas in Sambalpur, the Tailapas in Ganjam etc. In the South proper, the Hoysala power was extended in Nolambavāḍi and Gaṅgavāḍi (Citaldrug and South-Western Karnataka) and Koṅgudeśa (Salem and Coimbatore districts). The Pāṇdyas could also maintain their independent entity. From the beginning of the eleventh to the middle of the thirteenth century the Colas of Tanjore became master of almost the entire southern India compelling the powers noted above to maintain their existence only by becoming their subordinates. They conquered the eastern strip along the sea-coast up to Bengal and extended the sphere of their influence even beyond the sea as is attested by their inscriptions. But it was the Hoysalas and the Pāṇdyas that were able to maintain their independent existence for a longer period.

8. Territorial Terms

Abhiṣṭhāna, Adhiṣṭhāna : The capital, or headquarters of an administrative unit; a city or town; the chief city. cf. Ep. Ind. XXXIV. 219.

Abhoga : territorial unit, similar to Bhoga

Āghāṭa, Āghāṭana, Āghāṭi : boundary.

Agrahāra : Rent-free land given to Brāhmaṇas; rent-free village; Brāhmaṇa village; sometimes suffixed to names of localities especially in South India. It was primarily a 'rent free village in the possession of the Brāhmaṇas'; but there are occasional reference to dev-agrahāra (rent-free holding in the possession of a deity), vaiśy-agrahāra (rent-free holding in the possession of the Vaiśyas, etc.

Āhāra : Derived from Agrahāra the term denotes a district. From the beginning of the Christian era the unit Āhāra was prevalent throughout India. It seems to have been used originally to denote a fiscal unit, and in course of time denoted a territorial division. In Buddhist literature it denotes 'land for food'. References to such terms as gran-āhāra meaning 'a group of villages' or āhāra-ṣaya, meaning 'an āhāra converted into ṣaya' are frequently found.

Āharaṇī : A district or its subdivision. cf. Hastakavaprāharaṇī, Ep. Ind. XI. 109.

Āmnāya : Province based on religious differences according to the Tantras.

Amśa : A small territorial unit. Ep. Ind. XV. 297.

Anta : A state beyond the borders of one's territories, or a bordering district; also its people; cf. Pratyanta.

Antarīpa : An island.

Aranya : A jungle.

Aṭavī : Forest-folk

Avathā : A territorial unit.

Bāḍa : Kannada term for a town or village, or a small territorial unit like a Parganā.

Bandha : A dam on highway.

Beṭṭa : Kannada word signifying hill and suffixed to place-names (e.g. Kurumbēṭṭa).

Bhaṭṭavṛttimānya : Tax-free land given for the support of the Brāhmaṇas.

Bhoga : Literally, 'enjoyment', 'possession' (of property) etc. Later the term denoted a territorial unit which was generally the subdivision of a district, or district itself, or even a bigger unit in which a district was included. In the inscriptions of the Cālukyas of Badami we have references to the bhogas like Edevolal, Satimala, Śrīnilaya etc. in the sense of the subdivision of a district.

Bhukti : A province including a group of districts called ṣaya or maṇḍala, such as Puṇḍravardhana-bhukti, Tīra-bhukti, etc. The term is also used to denote smaller administrative divisions. In the Gupta period the empire was divided into a number of provinces styled deśa-s, governed by the goptrs. A deśa was divided into bhuktis ruled by the uparika-mahārājas. But in the Rāṣtrakūṭa records we come across bhuktis like Kolanūra, Koppāra, Majjantiya, Pratiṣṭhāna, Rāsiyaṇa and Sārakaccha which are mentioned as subdivisions of ṣayas or districts, perhaps corresponding to the bhoga of the Calukyan period.

Brahmadeya : Land or village given as gift (generally tax-free) to Brāhmaṇas.

Brahmapura : Also known as Brahmapuri, it denotes rent-free village in the possession of the Brāhmaṇas, same as Agrahāra.
Brahma-stamba : A settlement of the Brāhmaṇas.
Brahmottara : Bengali term for Brahmadeya.

Cakra : A district; same as maṇḍala.

Cakravarti-Kṣetra : The sphere of influence of an Indian imperial ruler lying between the Himalayas and the three seas, viz. Bay of Bengal, Indian Ocean and Arabian sea. Sometimes it is regarded as conterminous with Āryāvarta or Dākṣiṇātya.

Caturaka : A small territorial unit.

Caturaśīti : A territorial unit like a Parganā.

Caturvedimaṅgala : Same as agrahāra, a village owned by Brāhmaṇas, generally tax-free. It is also called maṅgala and written in Tamil as śaruppeti-maṅgalam. Sometimes it is suffixed to names of localities especially in the Tamil-speaking area.

Catuṣpatha : Place where four roads meet.

Cavaḍi : Same as Śāvaḍi or Uśāvaḍi, meaning an administrative unit or a territorial division.

Cheda : A quarter, area or subdivision.

Dalavāy-agrahāra : Village granted for military service.

Deśa : A territorial term meaning a small area or a group of villages in some cases but a kingdom, district, tract or country in others. In the Gupta period the provinces of the empire were called deśa. In the inscriptions of the Cālukyas of Badami we come across Cemulya-deśa and Khetāhāra-deśa implying administrative divisions containing several viṣayas or districts. Again in the Rāṣṭrakūṭa records Nāsikya is mentioned both as deśa and viṣaya implying that a bigger administrative division was reduced into a smaller. In certain cases, especially in the Deccan inscriptions deśa-s are mentioned as parts of viṣayas and maṇḍalas. In certain cases deśa, viṣaya and maṇḍala are synonymous.

Dhara-maṇḍala : A country.

Dohalikā-bhūmi : Land of which the ownership is doubted and hence taken by government. In certain cases however the term dohalika denotes land granted to Brāhmaṇas, Svāmins, Sādhus and others.

Draṅga : A town or watch-station; possibly also a station for the collection of revenue.

Droṇavāpa : An area of land requiring the droṇa measure of seed grains to be sown.

Eka-bhoga : A village under the sole possession of a single owner.

Gaḍḍe : Term signifying a hillock used as suffix to place names in North Kanara district.

Gaṇa, Gaṇage : Term signifying 'collection', 'mass', 'tribe', 'guild' or - 'corporation'. Gaṇa-bhoga denotes a tenure in which the village is held in common by a group of persons. In the Deccan inscriptions we have the word gaṇage having the same significance.

- Gaon* : Same as grāma.
- Gāvāṇa* : A Prakrit word meaning mound or peak. The suffix is found exclusively in the Yādava records. cf. Pimpalagāvāna.
- Geha* : Derived from the Sanskrit Gṛha meaning a house, a dwelling. It occurs as suffix to place-names.
- Ghoṣa* : Settlement of the milkmen.
- Giri* : A mountain. It occurs frequently as suffix to place names. cf. Devagiri.
- Gondrama* : Oriya term for a hill-fort or a state having its headquarters on a hill.
- Goḍu, Goḍe* : A derivative on guḍḍa, a Kannada word signifying a mountain or hillock.
- Grāma* : Term ordinarily used to denote any village and a very common suffix applied to place names and localities. Sometimes the term is used to indicate the number of villages in a territory or geographical unit.
- Gutti* : Kannada word meaning peak, mound. etc. cf. Māsaragutti (modern Mosarguppi in the Belgaum district).
- Halli* : A Kannada derivation of Palli meaning village.
- Hatta* : A market place.
- Jaladhi* : Sea.
- Janapada* : Tribal settlement. Eventually the term came to denote a territory named after a particular tribe or people.
- Jaṅghāla* : An embankment (JAS, Lett. XX. 204).
- Kaccha* : A field bordering on a stream. (Ed. Ind. XIV, 177).
- Kampana* : A territorial unit which means a 'circle'. Originally it might have been used to suggest a group of villages. In the records of the Cālukyas of Kalyani it has equated bhukti or Province. In the Yādava records we have reference to Kanhairikampana as the subdivision of Kanhairi-deśa.
- Katte, katta* : A raised structure of earth, used as a Kannada suffix to place names (cf. Arakaṭa)
- Karvāṭaka* : A market town.
- Khajjana* : Same as Marathi and Konkani khājan, area near seashore which is reclaimed and utilised for the purpose of agriculture. Ep. Ind. XXXIII. 53-54.
- Khalla* : Same as Oriya Khāl, low land.
- Khaṇḍa* : A territorial division; the subdivision of a Deśa; also mentioned as Khaṇḍala and khaṇḍalaka. Ep. Ind. XXXV. 135, 139.
- Khāṭika* : Mouth of a river. Ep. Ind. IV. 253

Introduction

Kheṭa Kheṭaka : A dialectic form of Kṣetra meaning a field. The term originally denoted an enclosure into which cattle were driven. Gradually it began to imply an agricultural village. Kheṭa is mentioned by Pāṇini as a place-name-ending. The term occurs in the records of the Cālukyas of Badāmi and Kalyāṇa and in those of the Rāṣtrakūtas and Yādavas (cf. Karañja-kheṭa, Tivara-kheṭa, etc.). Mānyakheṭaka the capital of the Rāṣtrakūtas has the suffix kheṭaka. Kheṭa is further changed to Kheḍa (cf. Vara-kheḍa, modern Varkhed in Khandesh district.)

Koṭa : Term signifying a mountain which is often used as place-name-ending (cf. Pānnaleya-koṭa, modern Panhala, Kolhapur).

Koṭṭam : Tamil term for a district or subdivision. It is sometimes described as a division of a rājya, subdivided into nāḍus. Koṭṭa and Koṭṭai means fort. There is also a term called Koṭṭa-viṣaya which means a district or viṣaya around a fortress, or a district with its headquarters in a fort. The term Koṭaka has also the same significance. Ep. Ind. XIV. 313.

Kṣetra : Land or landed property which conventionally denotes a sacred place. cf. Śrīkṣetra.

Kula, Kola : Kannaḍa word signifying 'pond' or 'tank'; often used as place-name-ending.

Kuṇḍa : Waterpond; the term is used as place-name-suffix (cf. Rūpa-kuṇḍa). In South India it is changed into guṇḍa or guṇḍi.

Kuṭṭam : Tamil term for a district or its subdivision. Sometimes it is equated with nāḍu, but sometimes it is described only as a part of a nāḍu.

Māgāṇi : An administrative unit.

Mahāgrāma : A small territorial unit composed of a group of villages.

Mahājanapada : Confederacy of tribal settlements under the administration of an elected or nominated chief or king marking a stage of transition from the stage of tribal habitations to that of organised state.

Mahānagara : Great city.

Māḷa, Māḷe : Kannaḍa word meaning a plain, an open tract of ground. The word is often used as a place-name-suffix.

Maṇḍala : An administrative unit, a district or province. In South Indian records the term is used in the sense of a province consisting of several Koṭṭams or Valanāḍus. Sometimes maṇḍala is mentioned as a bigger unit than a viṣaya and sometimes smaller than it; sometimes a viṣaya, is included in a maṇḍala, and sometimes a maṇḍala is included in a viṣaya; again, sometimes maṇḍala and viṣaya are identical. Sometimes a maṇḍala is smaller than the vithi or subdivision, and sometimes it is used in a wider sense to indicate a country (cf. Koṇa-maṇḍala, also called an avani-maṇḍala or deśa. Here maṇḍala means a kingdom or territory).

Manyavāntara-rāṣṭra : Same as nāḍu or district.

Modala-vāda : Kannaḍa term; the chief village in a Parganā consisting of a number of villages, i.e. headquarters; sometimes called rājadhānī.

Mukti-bhumi : A holy place where salvation is attainable on death.

Nā-bhū : Abbreviation of nāla-bhūmi, 'cultivated land'.

Nāḍ, Nāḍu <sup>1</sup> A district, the assembly of a district; the professional association and guild of a district; a country; a territorial division, a subdivision: the local assembly to govern the civil affairs of the division is also called nāḍu.

Nagara : City; palace; a commercial guild; a mercantile town; often spelt in Kannaḍa inscriptions as nakara or nakhara. In Telugu inscriptions the term also denotes the territorial assembly like the sabhā and ur. In some places the nagara and ur carried on their functions side by side. The word is sometimes used to indicate occupational groups like śāleyanagarattom. According to Wilson the word nagara might have been originated from the Sanskrit word naga meaning a mountain. The word also means a plough, indicating cultivation and then habitation.

Navara : Oriya term for nagara.

Nigama : Township.

Nilāya : Territorial unit like a Pargana; the inhabited area of a district.

Nivṛtti : Same as visaya or koṣṭam, an administrative division.

Nivartana : An area of land, which was not the same in different ages and localities.

Oṇi : A territorial division.

Paḍā, Pāḍā : Corrupt forms of Pāṣaka; part of a village; often suffixed to the names of localities.

Padra, Padraka : A village, often suffixed to the names of villages; inhabited area; common land. cf, sa-padr-āraṇyaka as an epithet of a gift village.

Palli, Pallikā : A hamlet; a village or its parts; often suffixed to the names of localities. According to Monier-Williams, Palli is derived from the Sanskrit pal or pall, meaning 'to go', 'to move', etc. Kittel thinks that it is a derivative form of the Dravidian pad, pay, pav, pal, meaning 'to lie down', 'to settle'.

Palola : Marshes or swamps.

Pargana : A territorial division; subdivision of a district; same as pratijāgaraṇaka of the Paramāra charters.

Pariceheda : A territorial term meaning a group of villages.

Parru : Tamil term for territorial unit.

Pāṣaka : Part of a village; a quarter; the outlying part of a village; a

Introduction

- hamlet; often prefixed to the name of localities; often modified to vāḷaka; same as Gujarati pādo, a street or the division of a town.
- Pathaka* : A group of villages; a territorial division like a pargana of later days.
- Pāthi* : A territorial unit, same as pathaka.
- Piḷḷa* : A territorial term meaning a group of villages; cf. apura-paḷḷa the western district'; also known as pāḷḷa, Ep. Ind. XXXIV. 235.
- Pattalā* : A territorial division; a district.
- Pattana, Paḷḷana* : A township; suffixed to the names of cities like Ananillapura-pattana.
- Peṭha* : A group of villages.
- Pradeśa* : A province or district.
- Pradvāra* : A suburb.
- Prāpa* : Subdivision of a district.
- Pratigaṇaka, Pratijagaranaka*: Subdivision of a district. The term is found mostly in the Paramara inscriptions.
- Pratyanta* : A state beyond the borders one's territories; a land outside one's dominions; also its peoples: cf. anta.
- Praveśa, Praveśya* : A small fiscal unit.
- Pukkoli* : Land inundated by floods. Ep. Ind. XXXV. 152.
- Pura, Puri* : Same as Nagara or town. Numerous places bear the term as suffise. In the RV, pura signifies' a rampart, a fort or stronghold. Its changed form is vura which is found especially in the south. cf. Siripura, Sirivura, Sirur. Puraka and Purika (corrupt form : pūḍikā) are also used as termination of place names.
- Rājadhānī* : The capital; sometimes used to indicate the headquarters of a chief or governor.
- Raja-āśraya* : The capital, same as rājadhānī.
- Rājya* : Kingdom; biggest administrative unit; district or province of a kingdom.
- Rāṣṭra* : State, a district or its subdivision; variously called deśa maṇḍala, sīmā, sthala, etc.
- Rāṣṭra-viśaya* : Originally a state, but later reduced to a district.
- Sainya* : An administrative unit, Ep. Ind. XXXI, 71.
- Sammāt* : Same as Samuta, an administrative unit.
- Samudāya* : Same as gaṇa-bhoga, a tenure in which land is enjoyed by a group of people.
- Samudra* : Sea.
- Sapādalakṣa* : Name of two territories so called with reference.
- Śāvaḍi* : A subdivision, same as uśāvaḍi or cavaḍi.
- Sīmā, Sīma* : Term used for 'country' in the areas on the banks of the Krishna and the Godavari; cf. Kona-sīma, also called deśa, maṇḍala sthala, etc.; Tamil : śimāi, śirmāi.

Šiman : A small territorial unit like a pargana; the subdivision of a district; sometimes used to indicate 'a province'; Kannada : sime.

Skandhāvāra : Camp; usually called Jaya-skandhāvāra, i.e. the victorious camp which indicates the capital of a king in some cases; cf. Kannada neleviḍu and Sanskrit sthira-śibira.

Sthala : Term suffixed to names of localities; a territorial unit like a pargana, a district or its subdivision; a holy place.

Sthāna : A residence; literally 'a place'; sometimes suffixed to the names of localities; cf. Kannada : thana, name of a geographical unit.

Talaka : A territorial division.

Tala-vāṭaka : A piece of land together with suburbs, gardens and homestead land.

Trikūṭa : A junction of three villages. Ep. Ind. XIII. 34; cf. tri-sandhi; also Telugu muggaḍa, 'a junction of three or more villages'.

Uddeśa : A territorial division.

Upakārikā : A territorial unit around the headquarters of an administrative unit. Ep. Ind. XV. 286.

Ur : The assembly of a non-Brahmana<sup>2</sup> village. Ur with its other forms ura, uri, uru is probably a non-Sanskritic Kannada suffix, meaning an 'inhabited place' or a 'town'. It may also be a Prakrit form of the term pura.

Vāḍa, Vāḍā : Corrupt form of Pāṭaka or Vāṭaka, which means 'part of a village; in some dialects it denotes a village; often suffixed to the names of localities.

Vāḍi : Same as vāḍa; often suffixed to geographical names.

Vaḷanāḍu : Tamil term for a province; a district consisting of subdivisions called kurram or nāḍu.

Vaḷita, Vaṇita : Kannada term for a small territorial unit like a pargana.

Vartanī : A district; often found suffixed to the names of districts in the Kaliṅga region.

Vāṭaka : Corrupt form of Pāṭaka : 'part of a village; often suffixed to names of localities.

Veṇī : A stream or river.

Vijaya-kaṭaka : 'The victorious camp'; the royal camp or capital.

Viṣaya : A district; often a kingdom or territory; sometimes a viṣaya was included in a maṇḍala and in some cases a maṇḍala was included in a viṣaya; at times maṇḍala and viṣaya were synonymous; same as nivṛtti or kottam.

Vithi, Vīthi : A street; a territorial unit; subdivision of a district.

Vyāmiśra-bhūmi : An area consisting of different kinds of land.

9. Suffixes, Elisions and Changes

The names of places are usually compounded with some suffixes which usually denote the nature of the place. Dr. Sumati Mulay in her Studies in the Historical and Cultural Geography and Ethnography of the Deccan Poona 1972, has made a detailed study of the place-names and has classified and grouped the suffixes according to their meaning into eleven categories.

Introduction

(1) Suffixes denoting city, town or village : GRĀMA (gāon, gaum, gāma, ggāme, gāmvu, gāva, gāve, gavā, gavi, gau, etc.), KHETAKA (kheṭa, kheda, kheḍ, keḍ, khalu, khala, etc.), NAGARA (nara, nera, nar, ner, etc.), PURA (puri, pur, por, puḍikā, vūra, etc.), UR (uri, ura, etc.) VOḶAL (poḷal, vole, vol, hole, hol, etc.).

(2) Suffixes denoting some sort of settlement, enclosure, resort or abode : BHAVANA, GRHA (geha, gāha, ghira, gir, etc.), NILAYA, KATTA (kaṭṭe, gaṭṭe, etc.), PALLĪ (pallikā, palli, balli, balli, vallikā, vullikā, valli, vali, bal. poli, oli, etc.), PĀṬAKA (pāḍaga pāḍā, pārā, vāṭaka, vāḍa, vāḍe, etc.), PAṬṬĪ (baṭṭi, hatti, etc.), PADRA (pahara, vedra, etc.), STHĀNA (thāna, tthāna, thān, than, etc.), STHALA (sthalī), VĀṬAKA (vāṭa, vāṭika, vāṭi, vāḍe vāḍḍe, vāḍā, vāḍi, vāḍo, vāḍi, vāḍagi, vara, etc.), VASATI; etc.

(3) Suffixes denoting field or plain : POLA (pole, vola, vala, vale, vole, poḷal, etc.), Māḷa (māḷe), etc.

(4) Suffixes denoting vicinity of water : KERE (kara, kera, gere), KUNḌA (kunda, gunḍa), ĀRU (aṛu, eṛu, eru), VĀPI (bāvi) KŪPAKA (kuppe, kupe, kuhe) DVIPA, KUNTE, KUḶA (koḷa, gola, guli, kuḷi), TAṬĀKA (taḍāga) etc.

(5) Suffixes signifying street or road : KERI (geri), PATHA (pat), etc.

(6) Suffixes denoting hills, forts, etc : BETTA, DOṄGARĪKĀ (duṅ-gara) GĀVĀNA, GIRI, GOḶU (goḍe), GUTTI, KOṬA (koṭe, goṭa, goḍ), TIPPA (tippe) etc.

(7) Suffixes signifying rock or stone : KALLA (kal, kallu, kalu, gal, gala, galla, galu), PRASTARA, etc.

(8) Suffixes of the wooden region : BĀGA (bage, bagi, bāgu) PATRA, PIPPALA, VADA (vaṭa), VANA, etc.

(9) Suffixes signifying collection : GAṆA (gaṇage), GUMMI, KUPPA (kuppa, koppa), etc.

(10) Suffixes denoting religious places or auspicious foundations : AGRAHĀRA (agāhāra, āhāra) ĪSVARA, NĀTHA. ŚIVA, KṢETRA, MAṄGALAM, TĪRTHA, etc.

(11) Miscellaneous group of suffixes : pāl, satti, manti, vanti, varti, vatti. dvāri, etc.

According to Dr. Mulay the following are the common Sanskrit suffixes : agrahāra, bhavana, dvāri, dvīpa, grāma, giri, īsvara kṣetra, khetaka, koṭa, malaya, maṅgalam, nagara, nātha, nilaya, padra, palli, pāṭaka, pattana, patra, pura, prastara, sthala, sthalī, sthāna, vasati, tīrtha, tatāka, valli, vana, vāṭaka, etc. The following endings seem to be derived from the original Sanskrit : āhāra, agāhāra, dāla, doṅgārikā, ggāma, gami, gāmvu, gāva, geha, kheda, manti, pippala, satti, taḍā, thāna, vāḍa, vāḍi, vāḍo, vāḍe, vaṭa, vatti, varti, etc. The common suffixes of place-names in the south are aṛu, bāl, balu, beṭṭa, bole, dige, gāl, ga, gere, ge, gi, godu, gol, golu, guḍḍa, guppe, hāl, hālu, haḷli, haṭṭi, kal, kallu, kara, kaṭṭa kätte, kere, keri kuḷa, kunda, kuppe, māḷa, māle, pāl, palli, pāṭi, paṭṭi, pola, puṇuse, ura, uri, vala, voḷal, vāḍgi, vura, etc. (A good number of articles on the place-name suffixes have been referred to in the bibliography of the present volume).

The first parts of the place names are also worthy of study. As the suffix denotes, to a certain extent, the nature of the place, the first part is indicative of its origin. Certain place names begin with Dharma or Deva or are known after the names of deities like Śiva, Viṣṇu and his incarnations, Brahmā, Indra, Nāga, Nandi, Yama, Sūrya, Candra, or goddesses like Durgā, Lakṣmī, Śrī, Kālī, Pārvatī, Ambā, etc. Again there are certain places which are named after stars, demons, great men or ancestors, tribes, castes, designations, professions, kinship-relations, trees, fruits, forests, plants, creepers, colours, animals, rocks, precious stones, wealth, metals, numerals, events, parts of body, collection, sky, light eatables, etc. Certain place names belong to the descriptive category, being descriptive of the geographical situation or environment, that is named after physical features of the place. In this we have names after mountains, hills and highlands, names suggesting nearness of water, names suggestive of the size, names descriptive of the condition of the village and eulogistic place names.

In the Deccan and South India certain territorial divisions are affixed by numerical appellations like Banavāsī 12000, Gaṅgavāḍi 96000, Beḷvala 300, etc. These are variously interpreted. According to one view<sup>1</sup> the numerical designations attached to the ancient divisions refer to their revenue capacity or to the numbers of their nāḍas or subdivisions<sup>2</sup> Aiyangar<sup>3</sup> thinks that the numbers seem to denote either the revenue paid or the value of the produce or sometimes the quantity of the seed required while Vaidya<sup>4</sup> suggests that the number may indicate the amount of land produce paid as government share. Fleet<sup>5</sup> and Altekar<sup>6</sup> hold, that the figures are grossly exaggerated. The latter holds that the figures basically represented the villages and hamlets comprised in the division concerned.<sup>7</sup>

The restoration of the altered derivatives to their genuine originals is quite possible. It is due to the fact that most of the changes are found to have taken place under certain linguistic rules. N. L. Dey has shown that, barring names displaced by new ones by some cause or other, they appear in most cases to be governed by the rules of Prakrit grammar. Some of the principal rules of change are given below.

Vati into auti, e.g. Laksmanāvati : Lakhnauti.

bal, e.g. Carmaṇvati : Chambal.

wa, e.g. Vetravati : Betwa.

According to Dey, many of the aforesaid changes, which are formed by a process of contraction may be accounted for by the application of the well-known rule of elision of the Prakrit grammar. The consonants ka, ga, ca, ja, da, pa, ya and va when non-initial and non-compounded are elided (ayuktasyānādau kagacajātadapayavām prāyalopah). Thus Kauśikī is transformed into Kusi or Surpāraka into Supāra (elision of ka) or Bhṛgukaccha into Bharukaccha (elision of ga). Besides the above, Final or initial vowels are often elided, such as Pura : Pur, Nagara : Nagar, Grāma : Gram, Iraṇa : Ran, Udaṇḍapura : Dandapur etc. Elision of non-initial ma (e.g. Āramanagara : Ara, Kumāri : Kuārī), or compound ra, r and la (e.g. Varendra : Varenda, Trikaṅga : Tikaṅga, Pṛthudaka : Pihoa, Mudgala-giri : Mudga-giri) is quite frequent, and so also is the initial and compound ha like Huṣkapura : Uskur, Haṣṭakavapra : Astakapra Praṇahitā : Praṇitā, etc. The sibilants śa, ṣa, sa, are often elided especially when compounded with another consonant, e.g. Śālvapura : Alwar, Piṣṭhapura : Pithapur, Kāṣṭhamaṇḍapa : Katmāṇḍu, Puṣkara : Pokhra, etc.

There are certain other rules in regard to the change of consonants. Very often tenues are changed into corresponding mediae, e.g. Sākala : Sagala, Aciravati : Ajiravati, Lāṭa : Lāḍa, Tāmalipta : Dāmalipta, Vātāpi : Bādāmi, Goparāṣṭra : Govaraṣṭra, Parṇāsā : Varṇāsā, or mediae into corresponding tenues (as in the case of the German pronunciation of tag, und, etc.) e.g. Pauḍanya : Potana, Sammeḍa : Sammeta, Tripadī : Trirupati, etc. Unaspirated surds are aspirated, e.g. Kustana : Khotan, Yaṣṭivana : Jethian, Śrāvastī, Sāvatti, etc. The reverse also takes place where the aspirated surds are unaspirated, e.g. Khetaka : Kaira or Mūlasthāna : Multan. Sometimes unaspirated sonants are aspirated (e.g. Śṛṅgagiri : Singheri, Jejabhukti : Jajhoti, Puṇḍarikapur : Paṇḍharpur, Varadā : Wardha, Vidiśā : Bhilsa) and sometimes just the reverse (e.g. Meghanāda : Megna, Ghargharā : Gagra, Vasāḍhya : Besad, Sairindha : Sarhind, Bhuṣkara : Bokhara, Sābhramati : Sabarmati, Ālambhika : Ālavi, Bhāgaprastha : Bagpat, etc.) Dentals often change into corresponding, cerebrals, e.g. Pattana : Paṭṭana, Tilodaka : Tilāḍa, Virūdhaka : Viruḍhaka, etc. There are also changes of nasals, e.g. Kṛṣṇapura : Kriṣṭapura, Nirañjanā : Nirañjarā, Temasā : Tonse, Suṃha : Subba, etc.

In the case of the change of aspirates very often ha predominates, e.g. Videgha : Videha, Madhupuri : Maholi, Tirabhukti : Trihut, etc. while in that of the compound letters cch is changed into ch (e.g. Maccherī : Macheri) kṣ into kh, kkh, c, ch, cch, (e.g. Kṣīragrāma : Khiragrāma, Dakṣiṇa

Introduction

Dakkhina, Kṣetra : Cchatra, etc.), tt into t (Mārttaṇḍa : Martand, dy into j or jj (Vidyānagara : Biranagar, Udyānaka : Ujjanaka) dhy into jhh (Madhyadeśa : Majjhimadesa), st into t and tth (Suvāstu : Swat, Śrāvastī : Sāvasthi), sm into sv (Aśmaka : Aśvaka) sv into ss (Aśvaka : Assaka) and so on. Certain compound letters are frequently dis severed, e.g. dm into dum, tn into tan, bhr into bhar and rr into ray (Padmapura : Padampur, Ratnapura : Ratanpur, Sābhramatī : Sabharmati, Pūrvasthali Puravsthalī). Sometimes letters are transposed, e.g. Dehalī : Delhi, Vārāṇasī : Banaras, Tāmṛā : Tamor. Besides, there are cases of contractions of bigger names, synonyms and structural improvement in names by changing or altering certain letters especially when the original name appears to be vulgar.

10. Cunningham on the Measures of Distance

According to Sir Alexander Cunningham the length of India was reckoned by the classical writers from west to east, of which the part extending from the Indus to Palibothra (Pāṭaliputra) had been measured by schoeni along the royal road, and was 10,000 stadia or 1149 British miles in length. From Palibothra to the sea the distance was estimated as 6000 stadia or 689 British miles, thus making the whole distance from the Indus to the mouth of the 'Ganges 16,000 stadia or 1838 British miles. According to Pliny VI. 21), the distance of Palibothra from the mouth of the Ganges was only (637.5 Roman miles, but it should be 737.5 Roman miles or 678 British miles. The distance from the banks of the Indus to Patna, according to the military route books current in Cunningham's time, was 1148 miles, or only 6 miles less than the measurement of the royal road from the Indus to Palibothra, as given by Strabo on the authority of Megasthenes. Beyond this the distance which was estimated by the voyages of vessels on the Ganges at 6000 stadia or 689 British miles, was only 9 miles in excess of the actual length of the river route.

The eastern coast from the mouth of the Ganges to Cape Comorin was reckoned at 16,000 stadia or 1838 British miles, and the south-western coast from Cape Comorin to the mouth of the Indus at 19,000 stadia or 2183 British miles. In the former case it was 238 miles and in the latter case 350 miles more than the actual length. It is probable that the difference was caused by including in the estimate the indentations of the coast line, especially in the western coast the deep indentations caused by the gulfs of Cambay and Kutch. According to Strabo (XV. 1.12), Megasthenes estimated the distance from Southern Sea to the (Indian) Caucasus at 20,000 stadia or 2298 British miles, the actual distance from Cape Comorin to the Hindukush being about 1950 miles.

The variations in the length of the current Indian measures of distance must have puzzled the Chinese pilgrims. That is why Fa-hian used the greater measure of the yojana, while Hiuen Tsang recorded all distances in his native li. The krośa or kos which is the common Indian measure of length was not used by any of them. Hiuen Tsang mentioned that the yojana according to tradition, was equivalent to 40 Chinese li, but that the measure then in use was equal to only 30 li. Hiuen Tsang described the yojana as equal to 8 krośas or of 5,000 dhanus or 'bow-lengths of 4 cubits each. The yojana would therefore be only 24,000 feet or a little more than 4.5 miles. But in the Indian texts the yojana is reckoned at 4 Krośas, either of 1000 or 2000 dhanus or bow-lengths. The former value agrees with the length of the yojana as stated by Hiuen Tsang and the latter is the double measure of about 9 miles which gives the common krośa of 2.25 miles that is in use in many parts of India at the present day.

Strabo, on the authority of Megasthenes said that along the royal road to Palibothra there were pillars set up at every 10 stadia, or 6067 feet apart to mark the distance. Taking this valuation of the krośa, the yojana would be little more than 24,000 feet or 4.5 miles. Thus Hiuen Tsang's equation of 30 li with 1 yojana would mean only 800 feet or a little more than one-sixth of a mile for 1 li. According to M. Vivien de Saint-Martin, in China at the time of Hiuen Tsang the li was equal to 329 metres which agree very nearly with the value of one-fifth of an English mile or 1056 feet. According to Cunningham it must have been the actual li which the Chinese pilgrim used in estimating the length of his marches in India. But from a comparison of the recorded distances of the Chinese pilgrim with the actual measured road distance between well ascertained places it would appear that the value of his li in reality corresponded to one-sixth of the mile. This difference was probably due to the old zigzag cart-tracks on which he had to travel.

Cunningham had equated 10 Greek stadia (6067 feet) with one Indian krośa. The length of the krośa varies from one place to another. Cunningham had taken into account three standard krośa-measures: (1) the short kos, generally known as Padshahi or Punjabi kos common in north-west India and the Punjab (1.25 miles); (2) the kos of the Gangetic provinces (2.25 miles); and (3) The Bundela kos which was used in the southern provinces of the Yamunā and in parts of south India (4 miles). The first of these was originally just nearly one-half of the second, the two measures forming parts of the same system. According to Wilson the value of the krośa or kos was either 4000 or 8000 cubits, the former one (4000 cubits = 10 stadia = 6067 feet = 1 krośa) being used in Magadha in the time of Megasthenes. The lowest unit of the krośa measurement was anṅula or finger which was little less than three quarters of an inch. 24 or 25 anṅulas made the hasta or cubit and 4 hasta constituted the dhanu or bow-length. 4000 hastas or 1000 dhanus constituted the krośa (the shorter one, the longer one being its double consisting of 8000 hastas or 2000 dhanus).

A

Abastanoi A people mentioned by Arrian. Diodorus calls them Sambastai, Curtius Sabrae and Orosius Sabagrae. They were settled on the lower Akesines (Chenab) apparently below the country of the Malloi, but above the confluence of the Chenab and the Indus (31°32' N, 72°-73' E). Their name represents the Sanskrit Ambaṣṭha (q.v.).

Abbalūr A village, same as modern Ablur, about two miles west of Kod, the chief town of the Kod taluka in the Dharwar district (15°-15° 30' N, 75°-76° E), Karnataka. Ep. Ind., V, 213 ff.

Abbinagarī Same as Dvārakā (22°30' N, 69°4' E), also known as Vanamālinī and Dvāravatī. The name is found in the Trikāṇḍaśeṣa.

Abhipendaṇḍurū Name of a village mentioned in an Eastern Cālukya grant of Vijayāditya II. It lay in the Guntur district (15°50'-16°40' N, 79°45'-80°25' E), Andhra Pradesh. SII, I no. 35.

Abhīra, Ābhīra A people whose territory lay somewhere near the Sarasvatī in the Punjab region (Patañjali, I. 2-3, Mbh., VII.19. 6; IX.37.1). Associated with the Śūdras (Sodrai of the Classical Accounts), the Ābhīras had different settlements in different epochs. One notable settlement mentioned by Ptolemy (VII.1.55) and the writer of the Periplus was Aberia, or Abiria, a part of Indo-Scythia, which is represented by the country between the lower Sindhu valley and Saurashtra. (21°-24° N, 72°-73° E). Other settlements were in Abiravān between the Herat and Kandahar, and Ahirawada between the Pārvatī and the Betwa in Madhya Pradesh. In the third quarter of the second century, Ābhīra chieftains figured as generals of the Śaka rulers of Western India. After the fall of the Sātavāhanas the Abhiras could establish a powerful kingdom in North-western Deccan. The Ābhīras are named among tribes subjugated by Samudragupta (CII, III, 14). The Bṛhatsamhitā, XIV. 12; XIV.18 locates them in the southern and south-western division. In the Purāṇas they are grouped among western and southern peoples (Mārkaṇḍeya, LVII. 35-36, Vāyu, XLV.126). In the Jayamaṅgalā, Com. 249 on Kāmasūtra the country of the Ābhīras is located in the Śrīkaṇṭha-Kurukṣetra (q.v.) region. The Kumārapālacarita IV, describes Ābhīra-viṣaya as lying on the opposite bank of the river, Narmadā or Revā. There were several Ābhīra settlements in different parts of Western, Central and Southern India. The most important section of the people lived in the Northern Konkan and the adjoining part of the Maratha country. The Ābhīras who came under Gupta influence about the middle of the fourth century might, however, be those of Central and Western India.

Abhisāra A kingdom which according to Strabo was situated among the mountains above the Taxila country. It was probably part of Dārvābhisāra (cf. Mbh., VII.91.43) which included the whole tract of the lower and middle hills lying between the Jhelum and the Chenab. Roughly speaking, it corresponded to the Punch and some adjoining districts in Kashmir with a part at least of North-western Punjab (34°-35' N, 74°-75' E). The BrS, XIV, 29 mention Abhisāra as a people of north-east division.

Abhisūra-Vātaka A village lying to the west of the river Trisrotā or Tistā (26°30' N, 88°30' E) mentioned in the Tezpur grant of Vanamāla. KS, 54-70; JASB, IX.766 ff., XLIV.283.

Abhradvasukalmādi Name of the village mentioned in an Eastern Cālukya grant of the reign of Bhīma II found at a mound near a temple at Kola-vennu in Bezwada (16°28' N, 80°42' E), Andhra Pradesh. SII, I, no. 37.

Abiria Same as Ābhīra (q.v.) located in Perip., XLI in the land adjoining Scythia and to the north of the Kathiawar peninsula. Ptolemy, VII.1.55 locates the country of Ābhīras above the region called Patalene or Pātāla formed by the bifurcation of the river Indus towards its mouth (24°-25° N, 67°-68° E). The dominions of the Ābhīras referred to in the Purāṇas, however, lay in the north-west region of the Deccan and might have sometimes included the Northern Konkan as far as the Broach area in the north.

Abjaka A holy place on Godāvarī. Brahma, CXXIX.137.

Abour One of the inland cities of the Paralia of the Soretai or Soringoi (Cola). Ptolemy, VII.1.91.

Acalā A river in Kashmir, near Anantahrada and Kārkoṭahrada. Hara-caritacintāmaṇi, X.256.

Acalagarh A site on Mount Abu (24°45' N, 72°42' E) at the height of 4,668 feet. It was basically a hill-fortress. It contains a decorated Jain temple made of white marble. Below, there is a tank named Mandākinī on the bank of which is the temple of Acaleśvara Śiva which was erected about ninth century AD. There are also a few more temples dedicated to different deities and also a very interesting decorated cave which is known as Bhartṛhari-gūhā.

Acalapura-Viṣaya A district mentioned in a Rāṣṭrakūṭa record of S. 722. It is identified with Achalpur (21°18' N, 77°33' E) in the Amraoti district, Maharashtra. Ep. Ind., XXIII.13.

Acchā The capital of Varāṇā territory according to Jain Prajñāpanā 37.

Acchodā River issuing from Acchoda lake (q.v.) in Kashmir. Matsya, CXXI. 7; Vāyu, XLII.5-7; Brahmāṇḍa, II.18. 6; III.13.80.

Acchoda-Sarovara A lake in Kashmir, ten km from Mārtaṇḍa. Its present name is Acchabal. There is a vivid description of this lake in Bāṇabhatta's Kādambarī. The Purāṇas describe it as situated below the Mount Candraprabha. Vāyu, XLVII. 5-6; LXXVII.76; Matsya, XIV.3; CXXI.7; Brahmāṇḍa, III.17.77.

Aciravati A tributary of the Sarayu which has its origin in the Himalayan range. It has been identified with modern Rāptī. Also known as Ajiravati or Airāvati (Pāṇini, IV.3.119; Avadānaśataka, I.63, II.60), it has been mentioned by Hiuen-Tsang as A-chi-lo flowing south-eastwards past Śrāvasti (Watters, I, 398-99). The Jain texts call it Eravai. Vinaya, II.239; Saṃyutta, II.135; V.297; Aṅguttara, IV.101; Vissuddhimagga, I.10; Milinda, 110, Varāha, CCXIV.47.

Acyutasthala See under Yugandhara. Vāmana, XXXIV.47.

Adamgarh A centre of microlithic culture situated at a distance of four km from the city of Hoshangabad (22°46' N, 77°45' E) on the Narmadā in Madhya Pradesh. Some eighteen trenches have been dug within and outside its rock shelters. Excavation in trench no. 1 seems to show that prior to the development of microlithic industry this area was occupied by the Early Palaeolithic people. Some of the caves contain paintings in colour, depicting themes of hunting, fighting, group dance, etc. From the viewpoint of their content, style and technique it is difficult to call them primitive.

Adanur A town in the Tanjore district (10°-11° N, 78° 50'-80° E) mentioned in Sekkiḷār's Periya Purāṇam which describes it as within Merkā-nāḍu on the river Kollidam (Coleroon). It was the birth-place of the Śaiva saint Nandanār.

Ādarśa Country, most probably identical with Adarśana or Vinaśana, the western boundary of Āryāvarta, mentioned in BṛS, XIV.25. It is represented by modern Sirhind (30°38' N, 76°29' E) in the Patiala district, Punjab.

Adarśana Same as Vinaśana (q.v.) or the region around the Kurukṣetra, where the Sarasvatī lost herself in the sands, the western boundary of Āryāvarta, mentioned in Baudh. D.S., I.1.2.9. See under Ādarśa.

Ādayāra Modern Ada, situated at a distance of about seven miles from Bhadrak railway station, Orissa. CII, III, 125, JGJRI, 1970, 55ff.

Āḍḡānaka-Desa Country around Wadhwan (22°43' N, 71°43' E) including Limbdi (22°34' N, 71°53' E), in Surendranagar district, Northern Gujarat, named after the Cāpa king Aḍḡaka. The modern village Haḍḡāla on the old road from Dholka to Dhandhuka in East Kathiawar wherefrom the Haḍḡālā grant of Vināyakapāla is discovered has been identified by Bühler with the original centre of the Aḍḡāna country. Ind. Ant., XII. 190-95; XVIII.90.

Addisthan See under Adhiṣṭāna.

Adeisathroi People of the region of the Sahyādri, i.e. the Western Ghats above the Coimbatore gap running almost parallel to the west coast from the Cape Comorin to the Tāptī Valley. Ptolemy, VII.1.71.

Adeisathron Same as the Sahyādri range or the Western Ghats. It is the source of river Khaberos (Kāverī). The region under this range was occupied by the Badiamaioi people who had a city called Tathilba. Ptolemy VII.1.23, 35, 75.

Aḍḡadu A village in Kanhairi-deśa mentioned in the Purusottampuri copper plate, a Yādava record of S. 1232. It is modern Adgaon in the Chalisgaon (20°33' N, 75°10' E) taluka, Aurangabad district, Maharashtra. Ep. Ind., XXV.209.

Adhahpattana-Maṇḍala A subdivision of Puṇḍravardhana-bhukti (q.v.) mentioned in the Belava copper plate of Bhojavarman. The find-spot of the inscription was the northern boundary of Rugganj P.S., Narayanganj sub-division, Dacca district. (JASB, NS, X.121-31. Ep. Ind., XII.37-43; IB, 14-24). It included the Kausāmbi-Aṣṭagaccha-Khaṇḍala, probably a fiscal division. This Kausāmbī has been identified by some writers with Kusumba in the Rajshahi district, Bangladesh.

Ādhem A village, modern Adhi, eight miles south-west of Karhad, Satara district (17°-18° N, 73° 30'-75° E) Maharashtra, mentioned in a Rāṣṭrakūṭa record of S. 800 (Karnad copper plate). Ep. Ind., IV, 281.

Adhicchatra : See under Ahicchatra.

Adhirajamangalīyapuram * Also known as Adigaimānagar, it is Tiruvādi on the north bank of the Gedilam, in the Cuddalore taluka, fourteen miles west by north of Cuddalore (11°43' N, 79°49' E) and one mile south of Panruti railway station, South Arcot district. Tamil Nadu. Ep. Ind., XXVII.98.

Adhirājendravalanāḍu A division of Jayañkoṇḍa-śora-maṇḍalam mentioned in an inscription dated in the third year of Maduraikoṇḍako-parakeśarīvarman (Rājendra Cola) found on a stone on the floor of the courtyard of the Virincipuram temple. The inscription also refers to a constituent district of this division, namely, Miyarai-nāḍu (cf. Miyagarai-nāḍu of another Virincipuram inscription SII, I, no. 131) and a village called Gaṅgamārtanḍapuram. From the contents of the record it appears that Adhirājendravalanāḍu comprised the south-western part of the Western Cālukya territory, which was vanquished by the Colas, and was situated on the bank of the river Perāru or Pālāru, modern Palar (12°-13° N, 78°-80° E) SII, I, no. 127.

Adhiṣṭhāna Another name of Śrīnagara (q.v.) in Kashmir (34°6' N, 74°51' E) Al-Bīrūnī called it Addistan and described it as situated on the Jhelum covering a space of fifteen miles.

Adichanallur, Adittanallur Archaeological site in the Tāmraparṇī valley, about twenty km south-east of the Tirunevelli (8°44' N, 77°44' E) town in Tamil Nadu where a large number of antiquities including iron swords, daggers, gold and bronze diadems, gold vessels and animal figures, etc., were found along with a large amount of red-and-black pottery, some-time painted with white in dotted lines, forming the accompaniments of burials. The area covers about 114 acres of waste land concealing hundreds of urn burials.

Aḍigaman People occupying Tagaḍur [Dharmapurī (12°8' N, 78°13' E) in Salem district, Tamil Nadu] mentioned in the Madras Museum plates of Pāṇḍya Neḍuñjaḍaiyan (AD 765-815).

Ādinagara A city mentioned in the Cola records where Rājendra I had defeated Indraratha which led to the surrender of the countries of Oḍra (q.v.) and Dakṣiṇa Kosala (q.v.). It lay on the north of the river Godā-varī, i.e. somewhere in the region constituted by the present Koraput district of Orissa and Bastar district of Madhya Pradesh. SII, I, no. 67; Ep. Ind., IX.233.

Ādīpāla A hill near Gayā. Vāmana, CVIII.65.

Adisdara Ahicchatra in the Bareilly district, U.P. It has been wrongly placed by Ptolemy (VII.1.53) in the Prasiake or Prācyā division.

Ādittahaur A city about thirty-four miles north-west from Kanauj mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī.

Ādityatirtha Holy places on the Sarasvatī (Mbh., IX.49.17) and on the Sābhramatī near its confluence with sea. Padma, VI.167.1.

Adraistai A people of the Bari Doab (30°-31° N, 72°-74° E) whose territory lay during Alexander's invasion on the eastern side of the Hydraotes or the Ravi. Their stronghold was Pimprama. Their name recalls probably the Adrijas of Mbh., VII.259.5.

Adrijā A river issuing from the Ṛksa and the Vindhya mountains. Mbh., XIII.165.

Adris Also known as Rouadis, it is same as the Irāvātī or Ravi, flowing from Mount Imaos to the Indus. Ptolemy, VII.1.26-27.

A-Fan-Tu The Avanta country which comprised the lower Sindhu valley. Hiuen-Tsang noticed the existence of the Sāmmitīyas (a Buddhist sect) in this region.

Agalassoī A people whose territory during the time of Alexander's invasion lay near that of the Siboi (q.v.). The Greek writers do not give any clue to their identification.

Agara A town of the Bettigoi (people living below the Malaya range, i.e. the southern fringe of the western ghats). Ptolemy, VII.1.67.

Agarā Modern Agaria in the Sihora tehsil, about twenty miles north-east of Jabalpur, mentioned in the Jabalpur plate of Jayasimha (K.E. 918). CII, IV.326-27.

Agara-Paṛṇu An administrative division which contained a district called Āndī-nāḍu, and a village called Veppambattu mentioned in an inscription dated Śaka 1328 found on the west and south walls of the Virupākṣeśvara temple at Veppambattu near Velur (12°15' N, 79°11' E). The division probably lay in the same region. SII, I, no. 55.

Āgāsiyaka A village in Western Malwa mentioned in the Ingonda stone inscription of Paramāra Vijayapāla. Ind. Ant., VI, 49-50, 55-56.

Agastya-Āśrama Hermitage of antiquity supposed to have been situated at Akolha to the east of Nasik, Maharashtra. (Mbh. III.96.1-3; Padma, VI. 5; Bhāgavata, VI.3.35, X.79.16, Matsya, I.12; Yoginī, II.7.8). There were other Agastya-āśramas near Puṣkara (Viṣṇu D.S., LXXXV.29; Mbh., III.19.198) Prayāga (Mbh., III.87.20), Gokarṇa (Mbh., III.88.18) Janasthāna (Rām., III.11.38-42; Baghu, XIII.36) and in the Pāṇḍya country (Mbh., I.216-3).

Agastya-Malai A hill in Kerala which is the source of the river Tāmraparṇī.

Agatterippattu A village mentioned in an inscription dated Śaka 1347 found inside the front Gopura of the Virincipuram temple. It lay in the North Arcot district. SII, I, no. 56.

Aggālave A shrine at Ālvī (q.v.) which the Buddha had honoured by his visits as it lay on the way between the capitals of Kosala and Magadha. Cullavagga, VI.17.

Āgbāta Ahar (q.v.) in South-east Rajasthan, on the Banas Valley (26°13' N, 76°13' E) which flourished as a seat of Chalcolithic culture between c. 2000 and 1000 BC. In historical period it was a centre of Guhilot power and functioned as the capital of Medapāṭa (Mewar) since the middle of the tenth century.

Agnideśa Qura Shahr in Central Asia, particulars of which, especially in relation to Buddhist culture, were given by Hiuen-Tsang.

Agnimāla Arabian coast near Aḍen or portion of the Somali coast. Suppāraka Jātaka (no. 463).

Agnipura Same as Māhiṣmatī (q.v.). Mbh., XIII.2543; Raghu, VI.42.

Agniprabha Holy place on the Gaṇḍakī. Varōha, CXLV.52-55.

Agnitirtha Holy places on the southern bank of the Yamunā, in Vārāṇasī, on the Godāvarī, on the Sarasvatī and on the north bank of the Sābhramatī. Mbh., IX.47-12-14; Matsya, CVIII.27; Padma, I.45.27; VI.134.1; Kūrma, 1.35.7; Brahma, XCVIII.1.

Agratya, Agrodaka Republican tribe mentioned in coins and identified with modern Agroha in the Hissar district, Haryana. JNSI, IV, 54.

Agrinagara A town to the east of the river Namados or Narmadā. Ptolemy, VII.1.63.

Agrohā A village situated on the metalled road in Haryana between Hissar (29°10' N, 75°46' E) and Fatehabad (29°13' N, 75°30' E) at a distance of fourteen miles from the former where excavations have yielded coins, beads, fragments of sculptures and terracottas. (MASI, 61). It appears to have been mentioned by Ptolemy who calls it Agara.

Abadāpāda A village in the Khaṇḍagahāpattalā corresponding to a part of the Shahdol (23°-24°N, 81°-82°E) district in Madhya Pradesh mentioned in a Rewah grant of the reign of Haihaya Jayasimha. Ind. Ant., XVII.224-27.

Ahar (Banas) Suburb of Udaipur in South-east Rajasthan on the Banas valley (26°13' N, 76°13' E) which flourished as a seat of Chalcolithic culture between c. 2000 and 1000 BC. From their distinctive pottery, of some seven kinds, spread over the Banas Valley, the Aharians seemed to have formed a distinct ethnic group. Next to pottery, the most important aspect of Ahar culture was the copper implements made from the copper ore smelted from deposits in the Aravallis. Sankalia emphatically calls this culture as the Copper Age culture in contradistinction to the Chalcolithic, because of the complete absence of microliths. At Ahar stone-and-mud houses are found, the foundation walls of which were built with schistic stone. The copper artefacts include flat celts, bangles, sheets, etc.

Abalyātirtha Holy places situated on the Godāvarī and the Narmadā. Padma, I.18.84; Matsya, CXCI.90-92; Kūrma, II.41.13.

Ahicchatra Capital of Northern Pañcāla (q.v.), modern Ramnagar near Anola in the Bareilly district (28°-30°29' N, 79°-79°40' E), Uttar Pradesh (Mbh., I.138.73-74). It was also known as Chatrāvati. Excavations at this place have yielded remains of numerous buildings and of two big temples and the existence of Painted Grey Ware (PGW) and Northern Black Polished Ware (NBPW) ceramics. In recent years further evidence has been found of the co-occurrence of iron and PGW. The objects of iron associated with PGW are of indeterminate shape. In the Pabhosa cave inscription, Bahasātimitra appeared to be the king whose coins were discovered at Ramnagar. We learn from another Pabhosa inscription that Āṣāḍhasena belonged to the royal family of Ahicchatra about the beginning of the Christian era. (Ep. Ind., II.432, Lüders List, 90,905). The Allahabad pillar inscription of Samudragupta refers to a king named Acyuta whose coins have also been found. Hiuen-Tsang described Ahicchatra as 3000 li in circuit. Its capital was 17 or 18 li in circuit (Watters, I, 331). Its old name Adhichhatra is nearer to the Greek form of Adisadra of Ptolemy (McCrindle, 133).

Ahicchatra-Bhukti A province of the Gupta empire which corresponded to the Rohilkhand region, Uttar Pradesh.

Ahicchatrapura Capital of Jāṅgludeśa which according to Ojha lay in the region now known as Bikaner and Northern Marwar. It is probably the same as Nāgapura, modern Nagaur (27°11' N, 73°40' E) in Jodhpur, Rajasthan. JRAS, 1913, 264; JASB, 1922, 289.

Āhuka A people of Uttarāpatha or the northern division mentioned in the Purāṇic lists of Janapadas. The lexical work Vaijayantī identifies them with the people of Khāṇḍavaprashtha (q.v.) or Jayantīpura.

Ahvara A fortress of the Uśīnaras (q.v.). Ind. Ant., 1885, 322.

Aihole, Ayyāvole A village in the Bijapur district, Karnataka (16°50' N, 75°57' E), situated about a distance of nineteen km from the Katgeri railway station on the bank of the river Malaprabhā. Ancient name is Ayyāvole or Āryapura. It is famous for a number of temples erected during the period of the Cālukyas of Badami. These temples are important from the viewpoint of architectural history of India because they reveal a mixed style in which the Nāgara-Śikhara pattern of Northern India has been amalgamated with the Draviḍa pattern of the south. Also a few Jain temples are here. Hucchimalliguḍi, Ladkhanguḍi and Meguti, etc., are significant from the viewpoint of temple architectural technique. The structure which is known as Durga temple is actually on a durga or fort. It is rectangular, the back portion of which is rather semi-circular, recalling to a certain extent the structure of a Buddhist caitya-hall. The temples of Aihole are made of reddish stone. The sculptural elements reveal Hindu mythology. Specially interesting are anantaśayana and a few incarnation forms of Viṣṇu. Śaiva images along with Lakulīśa, and those of other gods including Brahmā and a few mithuna figures are also present. The celebrated Aihole praśasti of Pulakesin II recording the defeat of the famous North Indian king Harṣa on the bank of Revā, composed by the Jain poet Ravikīrti, is inscribed on the wall of the Meguti temple.

Allāpatra A holy place in Kashmir mentioned in the Nīlamata Purāṇa, 1118. It has been identified with modern Ailapatur.

Aimbundi A village, same as modern Ammundi in the North Arcot district, Tamil Nadu, mentioned in the inscriptions on the Perumal temple at Poygai near Virincipuram. SII, I, no. 59, 130-31.

Aloi People having territory in the western coast with Kottiara as the metropolis, Komaria as port, and Melkynda, Elangkon and Bammala as market towns. Ptolemy, VII.1.9.

Airāka Same as Iraq mentioned in the Śaktisaṅgama-tantra which locates the country in the northern part of Khurāsāna (Khurasan).

Airāvata Territory some times identified with Uttara-kuru (Mbh., VI.6.37). The Purāṇas also describe it as a Varṣa or subcontinent.

Airāvati River, same as the Irāvati or Ravi in the Punjab, the Hydrotēs of Arrian. Matsya, CXV.18-19; CXVI.1 ff.

Airāvatta-Maṇḍala A subdivision of Paṭodā-viṣaya. It has been identified with Ratāgarh in the Banki P.S. (20°21' N, 85°33' E), Cuttack district, Orissa. Ep. Ind., XXVI.78; JBORS, XVII.4.

Airikiṇa A viṣaya or district during the period of the Guptas. It corresponded to Eran in Eastern Malwa, now represented by the Saugar district (23°50'-24° N, 78°50'-79°30' E), Madhya Pradesh.

Airrhadoi The Kirāta people and their territory in the Gangetic Gulf on the coast beyond the mouth of the Ganges called Antibolei. Ptolemy, VII.2.2.

Aiṣika A southern people mentioned in the Puraṇic lists of Janapadas.

Aitavāde A village in Koppāra-500-bhukti (q.v.) mentioned in the Samangad copper plate of Rāṣṭrakūta Dantidurga. It is modern Aitavade in the Walave taluka of Satara district Maharashtra. (17°-18°20' N, 73°30'-74°50' E). Ind. Ant., XI.111.

Aja A tribe defeated by the Tṛtsus under Sudās mentioned along with the Yakṣus and Śigrus, RV, VII.18.19.

Ajabila A holy place on the Śrīparvata (q.v.). Linga, I.92.153.

Ajanta Rock-cut Buddhist caves, situated about sixty-three miles north-east of Aurangabad (20°32' N, 75°45' E) containing world famous mural paintings illustrating scenes from the life of Buddha and the Jātaka stories as also secular themes. It is about thirty-four miles from the Jalgaon railway station, readily approachable from the Fardapur village wherefrom the caves are only four miles away. A nice description of Ajanta is found in Hiuen-Tsang's account, but subsequent travellers are silent about it. These caves were rediscovered at the beginning of the nineteenth century. These are made by piercing and excavating the side of the upper portion of a mountain situated semi-circularly covering a space of about 550 metres or 600 yards. Different caves were excavated at different times and hence there is lack of uniformity in construction. Cave no. 8 is situated below while no. 29 is on the top. Previously all the caves were connected by steps with the river Waghora flowing below. The total number of caves is thirty, among which five (no. 9, 10, 19, 26, 29) are caitya-grhas and the rest monasteries. These were made in two periods, the difference between the earlier and later periods being four centuries. Cave no. 10 is the oldest which belongs to the second century BC. Among the caves of the earlier period no. 9 and 10 are caityas and the others monasteries. The Caitya-grhas contain rock-cut stūpas which were objects of worship. At that time worship of Buddha images did not develop. Caves of the second period began to be excavated from fourth century AD onwards. Most of them were made during the reign of the Vākāṭaka kings. Caves 7 and 11 were experimental in regard to the style of construction. Subsequently a standard was set up. Along with a balcony in the front, every pillared hall maintains series of rooms on its three sides. The central room on the back portion of the hall contains Buddha's image. Cave no. 6 is two-storeyed. Caves 1, 2, 16 and 17 are burdened with sculptures and paintings. Cave 16, one of the most beautiful monasteries, was the gift of Varāhadeva, minister of the Vākāṭaka king Hariṣeṇa (475-500 AD), and cave 17 was also the gift of a vassal of the Vākāṭakas. Cave 19 which is a grand combination of the decorative art and graceful proportions is the finest specimen in which a perfect balance is achieved of all the elements. In cave 20 the flight of steps with a carved balustrade leading to a verandah and the pillars with capitals of elegantly sculptured strut figures of girls, the threshold of the shrines recalling the ancient terana serve as aids to understand the evolution of domestic and socio-religious architecture of India. In cave 26 the most notable sculpture on the walls is the large and crowded composition representing the temptation of the Buddha by Mara. The wheel of life, flying gandharvas and apsarases, figures of birds, monkeys, wild tribes, aquatic animals, men of different social ranks, ladies and monks as well as the majestic figure of the Buddha on the wall on the left of the corridor are presented in subtle grace and effective display. Cave 29 is unfinished. Almost all the caves belonging to the second period are painted. The painter's art like the chisel-work centre round the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas, episodes from Gautama's life and the Jātakas. The paintings on the ceiling are remarkable for their rich decorative patterns, bearing the best expressions of grace and loveliness.

Ajanābha A name sometimes applied to Bhāratavarṣa in the Purāṇas.

Ajayameru Same as Ajmer (26°27' N, 74°42' E). The city according to Prthvīrājaviṣaya, was named after its founder Ajayarāja, the Cāhamāna king. Ind. Ant., XVI.163.

Ajikulā-Pāṭaka An administrative subdivision in Eastern Bengal mentioned in the Mādhyapādā grant of Viśvarūpasena. IB, 178-79.

Ajiravatī Same as the river Aciravatī (q.v.) Pāṇini, VI.3.19.

Ajjaloṇi Western boundary of Vatanagaraviṣaya (q.v.), identified with modern Ajande in Malegaon taluka (20°30' N, 74°40' E), Nasik district, Maharashtra, mentioned in the Rāṣṭrakūṭa records. Ep. Ind., X:85; XI.157.

Ajodaha Name of Ayodhyā (24°48' N, 82°14' E) in the Fyzabad district, Uttar Pradesh, as recorded by Al-Bīrūnī.

Ajudhan Ancient town situated on the bank of the old Sutlej, twenty-eight miles to the south-west of Depalpur (30°38' N, 73°34' E) and ten miles from the present course of the river. Cunningham. AGI, 245.

Ākara Generally coupled with Avantī or West Malwa, Ākara denotes Eastern Malwa with Vidiśā (23°32' N, 77°51' E) as its capital. The BrS., XIV. 12 locates it in the southern division. The name apparently occurs in one of the Nasik inscriptions (ASWI, IV, 109) and in the Junagarh inscription of Rudradāman (Ind. Ant., VII, 262). Precisely Ākara may be identified with Agar, thirty-six miles north-east of Ujjain (Ep. Ind., XXIII.102).

Akour One of the inland cities of the Pandionoi (Pāṇḍya). Ptolemy, VII.1.89.

Akrura Name of a hamlet between Mathura (27°28' N, 77°41' E) and Vṛṇḍāvana (27°33' N, 77°44' E). Varāha, CIV. 4-5.

Akrureśvara-Viṣaya An administrative division mentioned in the Hansot grant of the Cāhamāna king Bhartṛvaddha. It has been identified with the Anklesvar taluka (21°38' N, 73°03' E) of the Broach district, Gujarat. Ep. Ind., XII.197-204.

Akṣasaraka A subdivision of Hastavapra (modern Hathab, q.v.) mentioned in a charter of Dhrūvasena I of the year 207. Ep. Ind., XXXVII.167 ff; JOI, XII.51ff.

Akṣavāla Modern Achabal, a large village at the west foot of a ridge which lines the Kutahar subdivision in Kashmir. RT, I.338.

Akṣaya A people of the eastern division. Rām., IV.40.

Alagu A village in Kolanura-bhukti (q.v.) mentioned in Konnur Copper plate, a Rāṣṭrakūṭa record of S.782. It has been identified with modern Alagwadi, twenty-four miles south-west of Konnur, in the Navalgunda taluka Dharwar district, Karnataka, Ep. Ind., VI.29.

Al-Ahwar City, same as Lahore (31°37' N, 74°26' E) mentioned by the Arab writers. KFB, II.210; Elliot, I.116.

Alakanandā River in the Garhwal Himalaya representing the upper course of the Ganges. Its upper tributary is constituted of the Piṇḍā and another stream at the confluence of which is situated Śrīnagara in Garhwal (30°15' N, 79°30' E). Mandākinī is one of its tributaries which may be identified with Kālī-Gaṅga or Mandāgni rising in the mountains of Kedāra in Garhwal. The Bhāgīrathī-Gaṅga is joined on the left side by the Alakanandā at Devaprayāga. The Purāṇas trace the course of Alakanandā to the Gandhamādana mountain. Brahmāṇḍa, III.41.21; III.56.12; Bhāgavata, IV.6.24; Viṣṇu, II.2.34-36; Vāyu, CLI.18; XLII.25-35.

Alakanda, Alasanda Indian form of Alexandria.

Alaktaka-Nagara A village in the Kuṇḍi-viṣaya or Kundi 1000 (q.v.)—mentioned in the spurious Alta copper plate of Pulakeśī. It is modern Alta, twelve miles north-east of Kolhapur (16°42' N, 74°16' E) in Maharashtra. Ind. Ant., VII.211.

Alaktaka-Viṣaya, Alatge-700 A district, bound on the north by the river Warna, on the east by the river Krishna and on the south by the river Dudhagaṅga. Its western boundary has not been defined. Its centre was modern Alta in Kolhapur (16°42' N, 74°16' E), Maharashtra, and it comprised at least a part of the Walve taluka. Alalte is the Kannada form of Alaktaka. In the early Cālukya period it was included within Kuṇḍi Viṣaya (q.v.), but eventually it formed a separate unit of administration. Later inscriptions place it in the Kuṇḍi-viṣaya which is suggestive of territorial changes in administrative divisions from time to time. It is mentioned in the inscriptions of the Cālukyas of Badami, Rāṣtrakūṭas and Cālukyas of Kalyāṇi found at Alas, Kolhapur, Khavtheni, and other places. Ep. Ind., VI.209; Ind. Ant., XVI.21; JBBRAS, NS, X, 21.

Alamgirpur Chalcolithic site in Meerut district on the river Hindon in Uttar Pradesh, about forty-four km to the north-east of Delhi, where excavations have revealed four cultural sequences. Period I yields a late variety of the Harappa culture consisting of burnt bricks, wheel-made pottery, terracotta objects depicting figures of various animals, ornaments of semi-precious stones, etc., the pottery is characterised by geometric and decorative designs in black on red. In period II iron objects comprising a spear-head, a barbed arrow-head, nails and pins occur throughout the 137 cm thick deposit of Painted Grey Ware and associated cultural assemblage. Wheeled terracotta objects, dice, styli, pins, arrow-heads of bone, glass beads are also met with. This period is also characterised by the existence of mud-built house. Period III marks the advent of the Northern Black Polished Ware (NBPW) and the finds are in conformity with the contemporary historical period I of Rupar and Hastinapur. Period IV reveals Mughal elements after which the site is named.

Alampundi A village in the Senji division of the Tindivanam taluka (12°14' N, 79°42' E) of the South Arcot district, Tamil Nadu. Ep. Ind., III.224.

Alampur Site in Andhra Pradesh on the west bank of the Tuṅga-bhadra (15°54' N, 78°11' E) where there is a group of six temples. The best preserved monuments of the Alampur group is represented by what is known as the Viśva-Brahma temple.

Alamvimahāpura An administrative division on the Ganges in Gorakhpur region (26°45' N, 83°24' E) of Uttar Pradesh mentioned in an inscription of Gāhaḍavāla Govindacandra. Ep. Ind., XVIII.218-24.

Alanda A village in Pova-viṣaya in the (southern) Kosala-deśa mentioned in a Cuttack grant of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya. It is modern Alanda three miles east of the central place (20°40' N, 83°30' E) of the Bolangir district, Orissa. Ep. Ind., III.345-51; LI.189.

Alanda-Tirtha A village belonging to Śrīnilava-bhoga (q.v.) on the south bank of the river Bhīmarathī (q.v.), mentioned in a Cālukya record of AD 617-618 (Satara copper plate), which may be identified with modern Alundah, five miles north-east of Bhor (18°09' N, 73°54' E) and thirty-five miles north of Satara, Maharashtra.

Alandiya-Grāma A village, modern Alandi-Chorachi in the Haveli taluka of the Pune district, Maharashtra, mentioned in a Rāṣṭrakūṭa copper plate dated S.690 found at Talegaon. Ep. Ind., XIII.275.

Alāpa-Pattalā An administrative division mentioned in the Don Buzurg grant of the reign of Gāhaḍavāla Govindacandra. It may be identified with Salempur pargana, Gorakhpur district, Uttar Pradesh. Ep. Ind., XVIII. 218-24.

Alappakam A village in Cuddalore taluka (11°43' N, 49°79' E), South Arcot district, Tamil Nadu. Ep. Ind., XVIII.97.

Alasanda A city in the Yona territory. Geiger identifies it with the town of Alexandria founded by Alexander near Kabul in the Paropanisadae (q.v.) country. King Milinda (Menander) was born in its suburb called Kalasigāma (Milinda, 82-83; Mahāvamsa, XXIX.40; Geiger's tr. 194). According to Tarn, it stood on the west bank on the united Panjsir-Ghorband rivers near the confluence facing Kapisa on the east bank represented by modern Begram.

Alasu-Nāḍu A district in Tulu-nāḍu or Northern Kerala, the country of Tuluvas, mentioned in an inscription dated Śaka 1296 found on the south wall of a maṇḍapa at the base of the Tirumalai rock. SII, I. no. 72.

Aḷatti The region from Nangili to Tuṅgabhadrā, mentioned in the Coḷa records. SII, I, 73.

Ālavī, Ālabhīya, Alavaka Country of the Ālavakas which was situated near the Ganges and was probably identical with the Chanchu territory visited by Hiuen-Tsang and identified by Cunningham and Smith with the Ghazipur region (Watters, II.61.340). The name is derived from the capital Ālavī (Sanskrit Aḷavi, Aḷavika). or Ālabhiya which according to the Jain Uvāsagadasāo, II, 103 stood close to a large forest, identified by Cunningham and Hoernle with Newal or Nawal in the Unao district of Uttar Pradesh and by Dey with Airwa (A-le of Fa-hian), twenty-seven miles north-east of Etawah. In the Abhidhānappadīpikā Ālavī finds a place in a list of twenty famous cities. From the Buddhist source it appears that the township of the Ālavakas lay on the way between Śrāvastī and Rājagṛha. Vinaya, II. 170-75; III.224 f., IV.16ff.; Aṅguttara, IV.216-20; Samyutta A, I.207, Suttanti A, I.4-5:

Al-Bailaman Territory mentioned by the Arab historians as conquered by Junayd. It probably refers to the circle of states mentioned in a Ghatiyala inscription as Vallamaṇḍala. It may also stand for Bhilmal or Bhinmal (25°00' N, 72°19' E), Rajasthan.

Al-Daibal Port near Karachi (24°51' N, 67°04' E) which was according to Al-Bīrūnī, about 150 miles south-east from Makran. See under Daibal. Sachau, I, 198 ff.

Alexandria (S) Cities founded after the name of the Macedonian conquerer. These were Alexandria-sub-Caucasum (modern Charikar or Opian near Kabul) Alexandria-amongst-the-Arachosians (modern Kandahar), Bucephala and Nicaca (on the banks of the Jhelum), Alexandria (at the confluence of the Chenab and the Indus) and Sogdian Alexandria (in Northern Sind).

Alexandria-Under-Caucasus A city supposed to have been founded by Alexander at the foot of the Hindukush. Its exact site is exceedingly difficult to determine, but it appears that it lay in the broad valley of Koh Daman where near the modern village of Charikar, are found ruins indicating the former existence of an important city. Some scholars are inclined to locate it at Beghrām, the position of which is decidedly less favourable. The abundance of the ancient remains at Beghrām may be explained by supposing that locality to have been the site of Nicæa (q.v.)

Alina Tribe of North-east Kafiristan mentioned in RV, VII.187.

Alinā A village, surviving in the same name, situated about fourteen miles north-east of Nadiad (22°41' N, 72°55' E), the chief town of the Nadiad taluka in Gujarat. It is the find-spot of a copper plate of Śilāditya VII.

Alispur Modern Ellichpur or Achalpur (21°18' N, 77°33' E) which according to Al-Bīrūnī, was about seventy-five miles to the south of Dhar. Sachau, I.198 ff.

Alitirtha Holy place on the Narmadā. Kūrma, II. 42.57.

A-Li-Ya-T'I-Sha Āryadeśa, Chinese name of India.

Al-Jurz The Gurjara state of Western India referred to by Arab historians. KFT, II.226-27.

Al-Kikan Modern Kelat (25°21' N, 64°03' E) in Baluchistan. It was also known as Kizkanan, as recorded by the Arab historians.

Al-Kiraj Territory mentioned by the Arab historians as conquered by Junayd. It has been identified by Elliot with Cutch (22°35' N, 69°49' E). KFGB, II. 226-27; Elliot, I.126.

Alkuka-Viṣaya A district mentioned in the Elapur copper plate of the Cālukyas of Badami. It included two villages, Bahamanavaṭagrāma and Tambaḍagrāma. The former is identified with the modern Bammigati, twenty miles south of Dharwar, and the latter with Tambur two miles west of Bammigati in North Kanara district. Although the boundaries of this district cannot exactly be settled, it must have been situated on the south-west of Dharwar in Karnataka. IHQ, IV.428.

Al-Lahum A city in Bamiyan in Afghanistan, mentioned by the Arab geographer Mukaddasi as 'the tradeport of Khurasan and the treasure house of Sind'. LEC, 418.

Allakappa Territory of the Bulis (q.v.) which is stated to be situated on the way from Masar in the Shahabad district to Vaiśālī. It was ten leagues in extent. Dhammapada A, I. 161.

Allosygne A mart in Maisolia, i.e. the Masulipatam (16°04' N, 81°13' E) region. Ptolemy, VII.I.15.

Alluru Buddhist site in the Krishna district (16°46' N, 80°26'), Andhra Pradesh, situated at a distance of four miles from the Yerrupalem railway station on the Vijayawada-Hyderabad line. A stūpa excavated here, shows the existence of a Buddhist establishment of about the second century AD. The site has yielded four limestone images of Buddha. An inscription discovered here records a gift of land to a school of the Pūrvaśailas of Buddhism.

Al-Mahfūzah A city in Lower Sind established by al-Hakam ibn Awānah, an Arab governor. The name means 'the guarded'. KFB, II. 228-29.

Al-Malibah Country mentioned by Arab historians. It is taken by Murgotten as Malabar, by Elliot as Malwa or Malabar and by R. C. Majumdar as Eastern or Western Malwa. JDL, X.21-22.

Al-Mandal Country mentioned by the Arab historians as conquered by Junayd. Elliot identified it with Okā-mandal in Gujarat. According to R. C. Majumdar it is probably Mandor.

Al-Manṣurāh The first viceregal seat of the Arab governors of Sind. The city developed in the suburb of Bahmanabad (near Hyderabad, 25°20'N, 69°38' E) and eventually it became the centre of a country of the same name. According to Masudi, it was about 600 miles to the south of Multan. Towards the north it extended as far as al-Rur which was included within its boundary. The estates and villages dependent on Mansurah amounted to 300,000, which is however a fantastic exaggeration. In the time of Ibn Haukal the limits of Mansurah in the west appeared to have touched the borders of Mukran. Istakhri said that the city proper was about a mile long and a mile broad, and that it was surrounded by a branch of the Mirhan (Indus). KFB, II.223, Elliot, I.24, 27, 38.

Almatti Middle Palaeolithic site in North Karnataka.

Aluṃgāṃvu A village in the Seuna-deśa (q.v.) mentioned in Paithan copper plate, a Yādava record of S.1193. It is modern Avalgaon in the Aurangabad district, Maharashtra.

Āluka See under Ālupa Āluva. The name is spelt as Āluka in the Marutura grant of Satyāśraya and Mahākuṭa pillar inscription, and as Ālupa in Aihole Praśasti. The Ālupas are also mentioned in the Gudnapur inscription as subordinates of the Kadamba ruler Ravivarman. The name seems to be preserved in that of the modern town Alupai on the Malabar coast. Ep. Ind., VI.6ff.; Śrīkaṇṭhikā, 63; MAR, 1936, 72-78; Bhandarkar, EHD, 60.

Ālupa, Āluva A tribe whose territory comprised the Tuluva (the region around the South Kanara district of Karnataka) country with capital at Udayavara, south of Uḍipi. Their country was referred to by Ptolemy as Oloikhora (Āluvakheḍa).

Ālūr A village in Padināḍu, identical with Alur in the Camrajnagar taluka in Mysore district, Karnataka. SII, III.425-27.

Āluvakheḍa See under Ālupa.

Amakatis A city of the Kaspeiroi or Kashmirians. Ptolemy, VII.1.48.

Āmalaka Holy place on the Sahyādri range. A village of the same name was situated on the north bank of Tamraparṇī. Varāha, CXLVIII. 67 ff.

Amalakataka Same as Amod, twelve miles to the south-west of Amti in Vadodara (Baroda) district, Gujarat.

Amarakaṇṭaka Source of the river Narmadā (22°30' N, 82°00' E) in the Maikal hills, district Shahdol, Madhya Pradesh. It is about forty-eight km from the Pendra Road Railway Station. It is an ancient site since relics of Palaeolithic culture have been found here. Amarakāṇṭaka and the Mekhala hills are sacred in Indian religious tradition. Amarakāṇṭaka is probably Āmrakūṭa of Kalidāsa's Meghaduta, I.17. The Mārkaṇḍeya, LVII, calls it Somaparvata and Surathādri. According to Matsya, XXII.28; CLXXXVI.12-34, etc., this sacred hill is superior to Kurukṣetra. The Padmapurāṇa, CXXXIII.21 mentions a holy place named Candikātīrtha at Amarakāṇṭaka. Ruins of certain temples revealing a structural transition from the purely Nāgara style of North India are found. They bear no epigraph but on stylistic consideration ascribed to the period between ninth to eleventh century AD. Each of them is saptaratha in plan and consists of seven segments along the vertical axis.

Amarakuṇḍa A town in Andhra Pradesh containing Jain antiquities.

Amarapura Same as Ambar, a subdivision of Jaypur district, Rajasthan. Previously it was the capital of Jayapura state.

Amarasaṇḍika-Maṇḍala An administrative division of the Pāla empire attached to the viṣaya of Sthālikkata mentioned in the Khalimpur grant of Dharmapāla. JASB, LXXIII.39 ff; Ep. Ind., IV.243 ff.; GLM, 9 ff.

Amaranātha A place of pilgrimage in Kashmir, about thirty miles (forty-eight km) from Pahlgam. It is a cave in which the phallic form of Śiva is enshrined. The phallus is made of ice heaped on a dolomite stone. The cave is 5182 metres (17,000 ft) above sea level. It is fifteen metre in width and eight metre in height. A rivulet called Amaraṅgā flows to the west of the cave.

Amarāvati Buddhist centre in the Guntur district, Andhra Pradesh (16°34' N, 81°21' E) on the right bank of the Krishna. The ancient name of Amaravati was Dhānyakaṭaka (q.v.) represented by the present Dharanikota, about half-a-mile from the site. Evidence of numerous inscriptions found in this place proves that it was a flourishing Buddhist centre from about the second century BC to fourteenth century AD. But now it exists in ruins only. Throughout the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries the structural materials were plundered by the local people for the purpose of making their own houses. In this massive plunder the local zamindars were personally involved. The site was first visited by Colonel Mackenzie as early as in 1797. When he revisited the site once again in 1816 for the purpose of sketching the details of entire complex he found most of the structures damaged beyond recognition. It is only from his drawings which represented certain hypothetical reconstructions and from the reports of subsequent archaeological explorations and excavations as well as from some five hundred pieces of sculptured stones salvaged from time to time and sent to different museums that one may form some idea about its shape, dimensions and compositions. The site was first excavated rather haphazardly from the western gate by W. Elliot in 1845. Subsequently it was excavated by R. Sewell in 1877 and by J. Burgess in 1881 who found a large pit, roughly circular with extensions at four cardinal points. In the beginning of the present century Alexander Rea excavated the immediate precincts of the Mahācaitya and exposed a few ruined structures. Subsequent excavations undertaken by the Archaeological Survey of India revealed the existence of the lower portions of certain small stūpas, wall made of brick, portions of a building consisting images of the Vajrayāna pantheon and numerous stray articles which are now preserved in the site museum. From conjectural reconstructions made on the basis of the extant findings it may be observed that the nucleus of the main Stūpa, called Mahācaitya, which formed the principal focus of the Buddhist establishment, went back to the third century B.C. In the second century AD the Mahācaitya was rejuvenated and embellished. With later additions at subsequent ages, it was a gigantic structure characterised by sculptured marbles, encircled by outer rails, the interior and exterior of which contained decorative scenes and symbols, depiction of Jātaka stories and episodes from the Buddha's life as well as varied scenes of secular and religious life. Centring round the Great Stūpa, there were numerous small Stūpas, maṇḍapas temples, residences, etc., constructed at different periods, relics of which are still visible. The images found at Amarāvati belong to the Mahāyāna group. The discovery of a good number of stone and bronze images of the Buddha and also the stone figures of the Buddhist deities like Muñjuśrī, Maitreya, Lokeśvara, Vajrapāni, Heruka, etc., testifies the gradual transformation of Buddhism into the Tantric Vajrayāna form in this region.

Ambagāma (Āmragrāma) A village on the high road from Vaiśālī (q.v.) to Kusinagara (q.v.) where the Buddha stayed during his last journey. Dīgha, II.122-26, Suttani, 194.

Ambājanma Holy place to the east of Saraka mentioned in Mbh., III.83.81.

Ambaka-Grāma A village in the Vaṭanagara-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Rāṣṭrakūṭa copper plates. It has been identified with modern Ambwani, six miles south-west of Wani, in Dindori taluka of the Nasik district. Ep. Ind., X.85; Ind. Ant., XI.157.

Ambakheri Late or degenerate extension of the Harappan in the Saharanpur district, Uttar Pradesh. The site has yielded ochre colour ware sherds with intact slip without any traces of paintings, remnants of a brick kiln and terracotta articles.

Ambalaṭṭhika A royal park midway on the road between Rājagṛha and Nalanda. It was surrounded by a rampart and the royal rest-house which was adorned with paintings. It was sanctified by several visits of the Buddha. Dīgha A, I.41-42; Vinaya II.287.

Ambāpātaka Also known as Āmrapura, it is same as Amaḍpur, situated on the Purāvī or Pūrṇā, about five miles from Navsari (27°07' N, 73°40' E) in Surat district, Gujarat.

Ambarnath A municipal town in the Thana district, Maharashtra. It is thirty-eight miles from Bombay on Bombay-Pune railway line. To the east of about the town there is a stone temple which was erected in AD 1060 by Mambānirāja who was a vassal of the Cālukyas of Kalyāṇa. The temple is divided into two parts and the pillars therein resemble those of Ajanta. The outer side of the temple contains sculptural embellishment of typical Calukyan style.

Ambasaṅgam A Brahmin village to the east of Rājagṛha. The place was so called owing to the existence of mango grove. Sumaṅgala, III.697.

Ambaṣṭha Corresponding to the Abastanoi (q.v.) of Arrian, the Ambaṣṭhas were a people who settled on the lower Asikni in Alexander's time. Their settlement was below the country of the Malloi (q.v.), but above the confluence of the Chenab and the Indus. The word Ambaṣṭha first occurs in the Ait. Br., VIII.21. The Mbh., II.52-14-15 mentions them along with the Śibis (q.v.), Kṣudrakas (q.v.), Mālavas (q.v.) and other north-western tribes. The Purāṇas mention them as Ānava-Kṣatriyas and kinsmen of the Śibis (AIHT 108-09). In the Bārhaspatya Arthaśāstra (ed. Thomas 21) the country of the Ambaṣṭha is mentioned in connection with Sind. The Ambaṣṭhas were at first a tribe of warriors of North-western India, but subsequently they migrated to different parts of India and took different occupations like farming, leather work, washing, medicine, etc. In later times they were found in South-eastern India near the Mekala range and also in Bihar and Bengal. cf. Ambastae of Ptolemy, VII.1.66 ff., BrS., XI.19; XIV.7, 17; XVI.22; Bhāgavata, X.83.23; Brahmāṇḍa, III.74.22; Matsya, XLVIII.21; Vāyu, XCIX.22; Viṣṇu, II.3.18; Pāṇini, VII.3.97.

Ambātagrāma A village in Cīprarūlana-ṣaya mentioned in the Cālukya records. It is modern Ambad, eight miles north-east of Narvan and fifteen miles southwest of Chiplun in the Ratnagiri district, Maharashtra. QBIM, X.12.

Ambatittha A village in the Cetiya (Cedī) Janapada) modern Bundelkh- and the adjoining region in Madhya Pradesh. Vinaya IV, 108-10; Āṅguttara A, I.178.

Ambattur-Nādu Village in the Saidapet taluka, (13°02' N, 80°16' E) Chingleput district, Tamil Nadu SII, III.287.

Ambavādi-Ṣaya An administrative division, Ambavalli in Parlakimedi (18°47' N, 84°08' E), Ganjam district, Orissa, mentioned in the records of the Eastern Gaṅgas. Ind. Ant., XVIII.167-74.

Ambilakuṇḍi Modern Amblihonda near Gudnapur in North Kanara district mentioned in the Gudnapur inscription of Ravivarman. Śrīkaṅṭhikā, 63-64.

Ambipāṭaka Modern Amkuhi, eight miles north-east of Bilahri in Jabalpur district, mentioned in the Bilahri inscription of Yuvarāja II. CII, IV.208-09.

Ambriḷika Modern Amreli (21°31' N, 71°31' E) in Gujarat mentioned in the Sorath copper plate of Dharasena II AD 572. It was also known as Amaravalli. Ind. Ant., VII.68.

Ambivale A village near Jambrug, to the north of Karjal Railway Station, Kolaba district, Maharashtra, which contains a Buddhist cave. Four pillars supporting the verandah are of the same pattern as those of Nasik, the second of which contains a short Pali inscription. The cave is now converted into a Brahmanical temple.

Ambuāli-Pattalā An administrative division, situated on the bank of the Daivāha (apparently, modern Dehao which according to Thornton's Gazettur is another name of the river Gogra) mentioned in the Bengal Asiatic Society's grant of Gāhaḍavāla Jayacandra's reign. Ind. Ant., XVIII. 137-39; Ep. Ind., VIII.150.

Ambudvīpa Modern Anjdiv island near the west of Karwar in Karnataka mentioned in the Honavar plates of Kaikeya Citrasena. Ep. Ind., XXXVII.33ff.

Amdhāpatiya Andhrāpatha, i.e. the Andhra country between the Godavari and the Krishna, mentioned in the Mayidavolu copper plate of Śivaskandavarman. Ep. Ind., VI, 88; SII, I.113.

Amghavasati See under Candanāpuri.

Amkoṭṭaka A village in the Akṣasaraka subdivision of Hastavapra (q.v.) mentioned in a charter of Dhruvasena I, year 207. It has been identified with Akota at the outskirts of the city of Vadodara (q.v.) on the right bank of the Viśvamitrī river. Ep. Ind., XXXVII.167 ff, JOI, XII.51 ff.

Amohaka Holy place on the Narmadā. Matsya, CXCI.105, Padma, I.18.96-99.

Amra Chalcolithic site at Haler in the Saurashtra region of Gujarat where excavations have yielded Harappan pottery along with the black-and-red ware.

Āmra-Deśa An administrative division mentioned in a Yādava record of S.1150. This region was around modern Ambe, the find-spot of the record, lying on the bank of the river Manjara. Its chief town was Āmrapura (q.v.) which is identified with Ambe-Jogai, (Mominabad) in Bhir district, Maharashtra. The region also included a place called Laghubadadhi which has not as yet been identified. SMHD, 1.62.

Āmrakā A city of the Traikutakas, in all probability Pardi, about fifty miles south of Surat, wherefrom king Dharasena issued a copper plate grant in AD 455. Another copper plate discovered at Banaras which was issued from Śāntanapura by king Harirāja of the Sura dynasty, records the grant of land at Āmraka-nagara, and it is not improbable that this Āmraka-nagara is not different Āmrakā of Surat district, Gujarat.

Āmrakagartikā A village situated in the Ankiṣṭha-bhoga (q.v.) mentioned in the Malhara plates of Adityarāja. The Goras grant of Dhruvasena II refers to the place as Āmragartā. It has been identified with Amajhiri in the Melghat taluka of the Amraoti district. A similar place name is found in the Mallasarul grant of Vijayasena which has been identified with Ambanula in Burdwan district, West Bengal. JIH, LIV.3, 11, 12; Ep. Ind., XIII.160; CII, III.129; JBBRAS, 1.56.

Āmrapura See under Āmra-deśa.

Āmravāṭaka Modern Amboli in the Chiplun taluka of the Nasik district. In the inscriptions found around Chiplun it is mentioned as belonging to the Avaretikā-viṣaya CII, III.129, IV. Ivii, Ep. Ind., III.50, JBBRAS, XX.41.

Amreli Archaeological site situated near the town Amreli (21°36' N, 71°15' E) which is the headquarters of the district of the same name in Gujarat. The excavated trenches in the habitation area have revealed the existence of two culture-complexes. The one in the lower levels belongs to the chalcolithic period and the other in the upper levels to the Iron Age. There is a definite stratigraphic break between them and therefore the two cultures were hardly generically related.

Amri A village one mile west of the Indus in the Dadu district of Sind to the south of Lakhi mountain and nearly 100 miles south of Mohenjo-daro and some 300 miles north of Karachi where was found for the first time a culture antedating and different from the Harappan. Two mounds demonstrate stratigraphically and culturally five periods, the first three of which constitute Pre-Harappan, Harappan and Main Harappan. The pre-Harappan period has a fourfold sequence, in the earliest of which we have handmade, mostly rimless, pottery with geometric motifs, Togau sherds, few wheel-thrown pots and also chert blades and copper scraps. The Harappan elements were subsequently imposed and in the third period of Amri culture we have their fullest development.

Amrithamangalam Archaeological site situated in Chingleput district, Tamil Nadu. It is extended over a vast lateritic field in which more than 250 urn-burials have been discovered. The grave goods include black-and-red ware and iron implements.

Amṛtabhavana A viḥāra located in the village of Anantabhavana near Vicharnag about three miles to the north of Srinagar. RT, III.9.

Amśumatī A river mentioned in RV, VIII.96.13-15. According to the Bṛhaddevatā, VI.110. it was in the Kuru country. Rām, II.55.6 place it near the Yamuna.

Amūrū Name occurring as a kottam (division) and nāḍu (district) of Jayankonḍa-Soṛa-maṇḍalam (q.v.) in a Cola inscription inside the Geṅgonda Maṇḍapa at Mamallapuram on the left wall. Amūrū, both kottam and nāḍu, also appearing in other inscriptions, is represented by modern Amur or Ambur, a town in the Velur subdivision of the North Arcot district, Tamil Nadu. SII, I. no. 89, Ind. Ant., XIII.132; Sewell, Lists, I.163.

Amvaranta-Viṣaya Name of a district mentioned in the Sanjan copper plate. The name is a corruption of Aparānta, and in another inscription it is described as Avaretika-Viṣaya (q.v.). Its area roughly corresponded to the western coastal region from Mahi to Goa. JBBRAS, XX, 42.

Anagwadi Lower and Middle Palaeolithic site, situated on the Ghataprabhā in Karnataka at a distance of thirteen km. north-west of Bagalkot (16°12' N, 75°45' E) and five km from Kovalli.

Anahila-Pāṭaka, Vāḍa Ancient city, situated on the river Sarasvatī, 105 km to the west of the Ahmedabad in Gujarat. Its present name is Patan (12°52' N, 72°10' E). From epigraphic references it is also proved that the region around the city also served as an administrative division under the same name. The city was established by the Cāpa king Vanarāja in AD 745 as his capital. In AD 940 the Caulukya king Mūlarāja occupied Gujarat and maintained the city as the capital of his kingdom. Anahila was the capital of Gujarat even in the thirteenth century during the reign of the Vāghela kings. It was only after the establishment of Ahmedabad in 1412 on the Sabarmati by Ahmed I that the capital of Gujarat was shifted from Anahila.

Anaimalai A hill in the Madura district, running from north-east to south-west nearly parallel to the Madura-Melur Road. It is also known as the 'elephant hill'.

Āṇaippāḍi Name of a village mentioned in a fragmentary inscription found in the Gaṅgeśvara temple at Gāṅganūr near Velur. It lay in the North Arcot district, Tamil Nadu. SII, I.no.104.

Anandanagara, Pura Modern Vaḍnagar in the Kheralu-kad region of Vadodara (q.v.) in Gujarat. Ep. Ind., I.295, 316-18; XIX.236 ff.

Anandapura A city mentioned in the Harsola grant. It may be identified with modern Vaḍnagar. Ep. Ind., XIX.236.

Ānanduru Headquarters of Ānanduru-300 mentioned in the Akkalkot inscription of Sīlāhāra Indaraśa. It is same as modern Anaduru, twenty miles to the north of Akkalkot (17°31' N, 76°15' E) in the Osmanabad district. Ep. Ind., XXVII.71.

Anantagocara Country of Ananta, i.e. kingdom of the Cāhamānas, comprising portions of Rājasthan, Punjab and Gujarat, so called after the name of its second prince. The name is especially mentioned in the Harṣa stone inscription of the reign of Vighararāja II, found at Haras in Sikar (27°36' N, 75°15' E), Jaipur. Ep. Ind., II.116-30; Ind. Ant., 1913, 57-64.

Anantanāga A holy place at the foot of the western extremity of the Mārtaṇḍa plateau in Kashmir. It is now known as Islamabad. Other names were Anantabhavana and Anantahrada.

Anantatirtha Holy place in Mathura. Varāha, CLV.1.

A-Nan-T'o-Pu-Lo Same as Ānandapura, modern Vaḍnagar in Gujarat, mentioned by Hiuen-Tsang.

Anar A city about fourteen miles to the west of Kanauj mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī. Sachau, I.198 ff.

Anarghavalli A village mentioned in the Peṅḍrabandh plates of Pratāpamalla. It corresponds to modern Janjgir, Bilaspur district, Madhya Pradesh. Ep. Ind., XXIII.3.

Anarka Name of three holy places situated respectively at Kurukṣetra, on the Narmadā and to the west of Yamunā. Vāmana, XLI.22-24, Matsya, CXIII.1-3, Kūrma, II.41.91-92, Padma, I.27.56.

Ānarta Territory around Dwaraka (22°14' N, 69°01' E) Mentioned in the Junagarh rock inscription of Rudradāman (Ind. Ant., VII.262-63). According to some Ānarta may designate district around Vaḍanagara (BG, I, i, 6). The BrS, XIV.17, 33; XVI.31 locates it in the south-west division.

Anarudra-Viṣaya An administrative division in Southern Tosali, Orissa, mentioned in the Chaurasi grant of Śivakara. The findspot of the grant is Chaurasi. Antarodh Pargana, Nimapara, Puri district. JBORS, 1928, 292-306.

Anauoi A tribe living in Farah, an eastern province of Parthian empire comprising a portion of Herat, mentioned by Isidore of Charax.

Ānava, Anu Tribe mentioned with the Yadus, Turvaśas, Druhyus and Purus in RV, I.108.8; VII.18.13-14; VII.4.1; VIII.10.15. They dwelt on the the Paruṣṇī.

Andha A river, probably same as Chāndan or Andhelā which falls into the Ganges in Bhagalpur. Bhāgavata, V.19.18; Devī Bh., VIII.11.16.

Andaka A city of the Aspisians, situated on a tributary of the Kabul river, mentioned by Arrian (Chinnock 230-31).

Andhaka A clan of the Yādavas living in the Dwaraka (22°14'N, 60°01'E) region. The Bhāgavata Purāṇa, I.11.10 places them in Dwaraka along with the Kukuras and Vṛṣṇis. In Mbh., II, 183.32, Andhakas are associated with Daśārnas and Kukuras and are described as a branch of the Yādavas. In Viṣṇu, IV.13.1. and in Vāyu, XCVI.94-96, the Andhakas are described as a branch of Sātvatas. They are referred to also by Pāṇini, VI.1.114, VI.2.34 along with the Vṛṣṇis. The Mbh., XII.81.25, refers to their republican constitution.

Andhakavinda A village on the Sappini river in Magadha not far from Rājagṛha. Aṅguttara, II.138-39; Vimānavatthu A, 185-86; Petavatthu A, 105-09.

Andhapur Capital of the Andhras on the river Telavāha mentioned in Śrivāṇij Jātaka. Bhandarkar identified Telavāha with the modern Tel or Telingiri (Ind. End., 1918, 71). There is also a river called Ter in the South India. (Ep. Ind., XXII.29). If Seri or Śrī Rājya refers to the Gaṅga kingdom of Karṇāṭaka (Rice MCI, 38), Telavāha may have been another name of the Tuṅgabhadra-Krishna and Andhapura may be identified with Bezwada or some neighbouring city. The name Telavāha or oil-carrier reminds one of the epithet taila-snehopalabdha-saralatva (with a smoothness caused by oil) by which the Krishna is characterised. Ep. Ind., XII.153.

Andhavana A forest near Srāvastī which served as a resort to Buddhist monks. Jāt., I, 128 ff., Samyutta, IV, 105-07, V.302; Aṅguttara, III, 358; Thera A, I, 39; Dhammapada A, II.49, 52.

Andhra Southern People mentioned in the Ait. Br., VII.18. They are now represented by the large population speaking the Telugu language who occupied the deltas of the Godāvarī and the Krishna. P.T. Srinivas Iyenger argued that extension of Andhra power was from the west to the east down the Godavari and Krishna valleys (Ind. Ant., 1913, 276-78). Pliny, quoting probably from Megasthenes, says that the Andare (Andhras) possessed numerous villages, thirty towns defended by walls and towers, and supplied their king with an army of 100,000 infantry, 2,000 cavalry and 1,000 elephants (Ind. Ant., 1877, 339). The earliest capital Andhapura (q.v.) was situated on the Telavāha river which is either the modern Tel or Telingiri or may represent a portion or an affluent of the Krishna. The Mayidavolu plates of the early Pallava ruler Śivaskandavarman prove that the country of the Andhras embraced the lower valley of the Krishna and had its centre at Dhañṅakaḍa or Dhānyakaṭaka, i.e. Bezwada (Vijayavāḍā), or Dharaṅikoṭā or some neighbouring city on the south bank of the Krishna. Hultsch identified the city with Amarāvati (Ep. Ind., IV.86). Burgess suggested Dharaṅikoṭā which lies about eighteen miles to the westward from Bezwada, on the right bank of the Krishna. Fergusson, Sewell and Watters prefer Bezwada itself (Watters, II.216). Hiuen-Tsang applies the name An-to-lo (Andhra) to the district round Ping-ki-lo (Veṅḡipura) in Krishna district. In later times the Andhra territory extended from the Godavari to the borders of Kalinga and included Piṭhāpurī on Piṭhapuram (Ind. Ant., XX.93; Ep. Ind., IV.315). The Andhras along with the Palidas, Bhojas and Rathikas are mentioned as vassal tribes in the inscriptions of Aśoka. One recension of the Rock Edicts of Aśoka has been discovered in the Kurnool district (IHQ, 1928, 791; 1931, 817 ff; 1933, 113 ff; Ind. Ant., 1932, 59) which falls within the present Andhara area. Subsequent discoveries of Aśokan epigraphs include, besides the Yerragudi inscriptions (Kurnool district), two rock edicts at Kopbal, on the Gavimath and the Palkigundu hills. The Mbh., XII, 207.42. points out that the Andhras were settled in the Deccan. The Rām., IV.41.11. connects them with the Godāvarī. The Mārkaṇḍeya, LVII.48.49 and the BrS., XIV.8 mention the Andhras as a southern people. The Sātavāhanas are claimed by the Purāṇas to have been Andhras or Andhrabhṛtyas. In mediaeval Sanskrit literature and epigraphs the Andhras and their country are mentioned as Tiliṅga, Telaṅga, Tailaṅga, Triliṅga, etc. In a copper plate of 1358 the Tiliṅga or Andhra country is described to be bound on the north by Kānyakubja, on the south by Pāṇḍya, on the east by Kalinga and on the west by Mahārāshṭra.

Andhra Khimḍi Maṇḍala A district occupied by the Kalacuris of Tuṃmāṇa mentioned in a stone inscription found at Ratanpur in Madhya Pradesh. It is same as Kimedi or Khimide in the Ganjam district, Orissa.

Andhrāpatha Capital of the Andhra country mentioned in the Mayidavolu plates of the early Pallava ruler Śivaskandavarman (Ep. Ind., VI.88). It was apparently Dhañṅakaḍa (Dhānyakaṭaka) at or near Bezwada.

Andi-Nāḍu See under Agara-parru.

Aṅga Country of the Aṅgas, originally an eastern people mentioned in AV, V.22.14 in connection with the Gandhāris, Mujavats and Magadhas. They are also mentioned in the Gopatha Br., II.9; Ait. Br., VIII.22; Pāṇini, II.4.62; VI.1.20 and BrS., XIV.8. The Baudh. D.S. I.1.19 mentions them as peoples of mixed origin, the Mbh., VIII.22.18.19. calls them mlecchas or outlandish barbarians while the Matsya, XLVIII.60. characterises them as of demoniac origins. The Vāyu, LXII.107-23 connects them with the Niṣādas. The kingdom of the Aṅgas was known to the writers of the epics, in which absurd legends have been furnished in regard to its origins (Mbh., I.104, 53-54; Rām., I.23.14). The Buddhist and Jain texts refer to Aṅga as one of the sixteen Mahā-janapadas (Aṅguttara, I.213; IV.252, 256, 260; Mahāvastu, I.34; Bhagavatī XV.1). The country of the Aṅgas was to the east of Magadha and it was separated from the latter by river Campā, probably the modern Chāndan. According to Pargiter (JASB, 1897, 25) Aṅga comprised the modern districts of Bhagalpur and Monghyr in Bihar, and also extended northwards up the river Kauṣiki or Kosi and included the western portion of the district of Purnea. In Mbh., II.30.20-22, however Modāgiri or Monghyr and Kauṣikī-Kaccha had rulers who were distinguished from Karṇa the ruler of Aṅga. The Aṅga dominions, however, at one time included Magadha and probably extended to the shores of the sea. For, the Vidhura Paṇḍita Jātaka (no. 545) describes Rājagṛha as a city of Aṅga and the Kathāsrīsāgara, XXV, 35; XXVI.115; LXXXII.3-16 says that Viṭaṅkapura, the city of the Aṅgas was situated on the shore of the sea. Subsequently, however, the glory of Aṅga vanished. The capital of Aṅga was Campā, situated on the river of the same name and the Ganges. It was also known as Mālinī or Malina (q.v.).

Aṅgarāyan-Kuppam A village mentioned in an inscription found inside the back Gopura of the Mārgasahāyeśvara temple at Viriñcipuram. It is the modern Angarankuppam six miles north of the temple. SIL, I. no. 123.

Angia Lower Palaeolithic site situated on the river Bhukhi at a distance of about 5 km to the south-east of Nakhtarna and to the west of Bhuj (23°15'N, 69°49' E) in Kutch district, Gujarat.

Aṅgulaka Modern Agigula in the Baudh-Khondmals district, Orissa, mentioned in a seventh century copper plate grant of Netrabhañja. JGJRI, 1970, 55ff.

Anhilvara Same as Anahilapura-pattana modern Patan (23°52' N, 72°10' E) in Gujarat which, according to Al-Bīrūnī was about 225 miles to the south-west of Bazana (Bayana in Bharatpur district).

Animeṣa A site in Bodh Gaya where the Buddha is said to have spent the second week after the enlightenment. It is mentioned by Fa-hian and Hiuen-Tsang. Jat., I.78; Beal, BR, II.123.

Añjanagiri Ancient name of the Sulaiman range. Rām., IV.37-5; Mārkaṇḍeya, LVIII.11; Jat., V.133; Āvaśyaka Cūrṇi, 516. The BrS., XIV.5. locates Añjana in the eastern division.

Añjanavana A deer-park in Sāketa (q.v.) where the Buddha stayed for sometime. Samyutta, I.54; V.73 ff.

Añjanavanti A village in the Acalapura-viṣaya (q.v.) which is identified with the modern village Anjanvati, about forty miles south-east of Ellichpur (21°18' N, 77°33' E) in Amraoti district. It is mentioned in a Rāṣṭrakūṭa record of S.722 (Anjanvati copper plate). Ep. Ind., XXIII.13.

Anjira Site of a transitional lithic culture lying between two arms of the Anjira river, a tributary of Upper Mula in Baluchistan.

Aṅkiṣṭha-Bhoga An administrative division comprising a part of the Akola district mentioned in the Malhara charter of Ādityarāja. JHI, LIV.3 ff.

Añkola Holy place on the Narmadā mentioned in Matsya., CXCI.118-22. It is probably the modern town of Ankleswar (21°38'N, 70°05'E) in Broach district, Gujarat. Cunningham identifies Akruresvara with Ankleswar on the left bank of the Narmada. AGI., 322.

Añkulagobbi A village in Miriñjadeśa (q.v.) mentioned in a copper plate of the Śilāhāras dated AD 1037 found at Kolhapur. It may be located somewhere in the Satara district, Maharashtra SMHD, I.33.

Añkuleśvara-Viṣaya An administrative division in the Gujarat region which comprised the Ankuleswar and Peta talukas of Hamsot. CII, III.22.

Anmakonḍa-Viṣaya An administrative division which was the territory round Hanamkonḍa, in Warangal taluka (17°58' N, 79°40' E), Warangal district.

Annadevavaram A village in the Visari-nāḍu situated at the junction of the rivers Pinnasāni and the Godāvarī.

Anṇigere A village in the Beḷvala-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the spurious Kurtakoti copper plate of Vikramāditya, dated S.532. It was same as modern Anṇigeri in Gadag taluka (15°25' N, 75°42' E) of the Dharwar district. Karnāṭaka. The Nilgunda inscription of S.788 also refers to this village. Ind. Ant., VII.219; Ep. Ind., VI.102.

Anoma Mountain near the Himalayas. Apadāna, 345.

Anomā A river identified with the Auni in the Gorakhpur district. It may also stand for the river Kudawa in Basti district, Uttar Pradesh. Its Chinese name was Ho-nan-no-ch'iang. The Buddha after leaving Kapilavastu proceeded to the bank of this river. Dhammapada A, I.85.

Anotatta A lake which may be identified with the Rawanhrad or Laṅga. Its Chinese name was A-nou-ta. According to the Shui-ching-chu the lake was otherwise known as Anavatapta, meaning 'unheated'. The origin of four streams are attributed mythically to it—Gaṅgā to the east, Sindhu to the south, Vakṣu to the west and Sītā (Tarim) to the north. This lake was supposed to have been visited by the Buddha many times. Aṅguttara, IV. 101.

Añsumati A river in Kurukṣetra mentioned in the RV, VI.27.5-6; VIII.85-13.

An-Ta-Lo-Fo Same as Andarab, part of the old Tu-ho-lo or Tukhāra country, mentioned by Hiuen-Tsang.

Antar-Maṇḍali-Viṣaya An administrative division, also known as Purṇā-mindhola, in Gujarat which comprised partly the region around Navsari. CII, III, 22.

Antarāla-Pattalā An administrative division containing the village Karaṇḍa mentioned in the Bengal Asiatic Society's grant of Gāhaḍavāla Govindacandra. The find-spot of this grant is unknown. JASB, XXXI. 123-24.

Antargiri A mountain region mentioned indefinitely in the Mbh., II.27.3,

BrS., XVI.2, Matsya., CXIII.44 etc. It is also mentioned as an eastern janapada in the Purāṇas. It may be identified with the Rajmahal hills in the Santal Parganas and with the hilly country between the Rajmahal and the Hazaribagh ranges.

Antarvedī Same as Madhyadeśa (q.v.) or Middle country, the land between the Ganges and the Yamunā and between Vinaśana (i.e. Sarasvati) and Prayāga (Vinaśana-prayāgayoh gaṅga-yamunāyośca antaram), according to Rājeśekhara. In BrS., LXIX.26 it is mentioned as gaṅgā-yamunāntrāla and in the same sense the term is used in the Indore grant of Skandagupta (CII, III.69). In the Gupta inscriptions, Antarvedī is sometimes mentioned as a viṣaya, a district or administrative division. Precisely, as a district Antarvedī denoted the Bulandsahr region of Uttar Pradesh.

Antasilā River rising in the Vindhya. Vāmana, XLV.103.

Antibole One of the five mouths of the Ganges mentioned by Ptolemy. The term literally means 'thrown back'. It is regarded by some as identical with Old Gaṅgā that flows past Dakka in Bangladesh.

Antikā Modern Amti in the Padra taluka (22°15'N, 73°07' E) of the Baroda district Gujarat.

An-To-Lo Same as the Andhra country with capital in Ping-ki-lo, i.e. Ping-ki-pu-lo or Veṅgipura near modern Eluru in west Godavari district, mentioned by Hiuen-Tsang.

Anumakonda Modern Hanmankonda near Warangal (17°50'N, 79°35'E), Andhra Pradesh, mentioned in Telugu legends about Mādhavavarman of the Viṣṇukunḍin family.

Anupa District around Māhiṣmatī on the Narmadā in Madhya Pradesh. It formed part of Gautamīputra's dominions as is indicated by the Nasik record of Gautamī Balaśrī. Anupa-nivṛt, denoting the same region, i.e. Māhiṣmatī, or Māndhāta in Nimad, or Maheśvara, occurs in the Junagarh rock inscription of Rudradāman as one of his subjected territories.

Anūpā River rising from the Ṛkṣavata mountain. Brahmāṇḍa, II.16.28.

Anupiyā A township in the country of the Mallas (q.v.) situated to the east of Kapilavastu (q.v.) and thirty leagues distant from Rājagṛha (q.v.) on the river Anomā. It was otherwise known as Anopiya. Jāt, I, 65-66, 140; Dīgha, III.1 ff. Dīgha A, III.816; Thera A, I.41; Udāna A, 161.

Aornos A fortress of the Assakenoi (q.v.), identified with the height of Una between the Swat and the Indus.

Apācya Western tribe mentioned in connection with the Nicyas in the Ait. Br., VIII.14.

Apagā A river on the bank of which stood Śākala (q.v.) the capital of the Madras (q.v.). It created a tract of land known as Śākaladvīpa (Mbh., II.26.5), apparently corresponding to a part of the Rachna Doab. Cunningham (AGI, 211-12) identifies the Āpagā with the Ayak rivulet which rises in the Jammu hills and joins the Chenab.

Āpaṇa A township in Aṅga, situated on the river Mahi. Vinaya, I.190; Majjhima A, II.586.

Apara-Mandāra Southern Rāḍha, containing portions of Hooghly,

Bankura and Midnapore districts of West Bengal. The Rāmacarita (II.5) mentions Lakṣmīśūra as king of this region in the degenerating period of the Pāla empire. The Kendupatna plates of the Gaṅga king Narasiṃha II hold that Coḍaganga defeated the ruler of Mandāra (JASB, LXV.239-41). The name Mandāra survives in mediaeval records as the province of Mandāran or Madārūn. Reference may also be made to the fort of Māndāran (Garh-Māndāran) which was situated in Arambagh, Hooghly district, West Bengal.

Apara Matsya A branch of Matsyas mentioned in the Mbh., whom Pargiter places on the hill tracts on the north bank of the Chambal.

Aparanandā A name of Alakanandā (q.v.). Mbh., I.215.7; I.110.1; XIII.166.28.

Aparānta Traditional name of the Western division of India. According to the Kāvyamīmāṃsā 93 it was the country lying to the west of Devasabhā. It was actually the western sea-board of India, the Ariaka of Ptolemy, more precisely the Northern Konkan region with Śūrpāraka or modern Sopara as its centre, though its boundaries varied from time to time. The Aparāntas are referred to in Aśoka's RE V as belonging to his empire. Aśoka classed the Aparāntas with the Yavanas, Kambojas and Gandhāras. (Ind. Ant., XX.240-41). From the Nasik record of Gautamī Balaśrī (ASWI, IV.109), it is known that her son Gautamīputra Sātakarṇi extended his sway over Aparānta which was reconquered later by the Śaka Satrap Rudradāman as evidenced by his Junagarh Rock inscription of AD 150. Ind. Ant., VII.262). The BrS., XIV.20 mentions Aparānta with Koṅkana together with Northern Gujarat, Kathiawar, Kutch and Sindh (JRAS, 1910, 417). In the Purāṇas Aparānta is called Paścāddeśa or western country consisting of the following Janapadas: Śūrpāraka, Kolavana, Durga, Tālikaṭa, Puleya, Surala, Rūpasa, Tāmasa, Turamina, Nāsikya, Kāraskara, Uttara Narmadā, Bhārūkaccha, Māheya, Sārasvata, Kacchīya, Surāṣṭra, Ānarta and Arbuda. The inclusion of Nāsikya suggests that Aparānta was not confined to the coastal region, while Kolavana and Tālikaṭa would point the extension of Aparānta towards the south. The Periplus and Ptolemy place Ariaka (Aparāntaka) immediately to the north of Kerala whereas Kālidāsa's Raghuvamśa mention the Murala river as the boundary between Kerala and Aparāntaka (JIH, XLIII, 348). In a narrow sense therefore Aparānta indicated the Northern Konkan, but in wider sense Western India.

Apayā A river flowing between the Sarasvatī and the Drśadvatī mentioned in RV, III.24.4. Some have identified it with the Āpagā as a name for the Ganges. Zimmer regards it as a tributary of the Sarasvatī which flows past Thaneshwar. Others think it as a branch of the Chitang river. This river is also mentioned in the Mbh., III.83.68.

Apokopa Same as the Aravali range (26°N, 74°E), also called Poinai Theon (punishment of the gods) mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.19.

Appeyavāda A village, modern Akkalkhop in the Satara district

Maharashtra, mentioned as belonging in the Mirāñja-deśa (q.v.) in a Kolhapur copper plate of the Śīlāhāras dated S.1037. SMHD, I.33.

Apsur A town in Kannakara or Karnāṭaka mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī, Sachau, I.198 ff.

Arabaka Territory of the Arabs. Jambudvīpaprajñpati, 52.

Arachosia Greek name of Kandahar.

Arachosli People of the Kandahar region placed in the country inland from Barygaza or Broach in sec. 47 of the Periplus.

Arachoti A tribe of the Argandal valley of Southern Afghanistan.

Arāmikagāma Also known as Pillindagāma it was a village near Rājagṛha. Vinaya, I, 207-8; III.249.

Arammi Territory to the east of Nagpur mentioned in the Vākātaka records. It was an administrative division of the Vākātakas represented by modern Chindwara district, Madhya Pradesh. It is also mentioned as Arammi-rājya.

Aramya A town in West Bengal which was destroyed by the Gaṅga king Anantavarman Coḍagaṅga. It is modern Arambagh in the Hooghly district, West Bengal.

Arang Temple site in Raipur district, Madhya Pradesh.

Araṇipadra Modern Ranod in Madhya Pradesh mentioned in an inscription found at the same place. It was read by Kielhorn as Raṇipadro. Ep. Ind., I.354 ff; XXXVII.117 ff.

Arantuka Boundary of Kurukṣetra mentioned in Mbh., III.84.4 ff. It was also known as Marantuka after the Yakṣa-dvārapāla of the same name.

Arappakkam A village which survives in the same name near Velur in the North Arcot district, Tamil Nadu, mentioned in an inscription of the time of Sadāśiva of Vijayanagara found at the same place, SII, I. 43; Sewell, Lists, I.165.

Arapunse A village in the Beḷvala Viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in an inscription of the time of the Cālukya Kīrtivarma dated S.677. Ep. Ind., III.44.

Arasiyakere A village in Nolambavāḍi 32,000 (q.v.) mentioned in a Yādava inscription found at Gaganarasi. It is modern Arasikeri in the Devanagere taluka, Chitaldurg district, Karnataka. Ep. Car., II. Dg. 87.

Āraṭṭa People of the Punjab region mentioned in the epics and Purāṇas.

Aratti Āraṭṭas of the Punjab placed in sec. 47 of the Periplus in the country inland from Baryagaza.

Arbuda Mount Abu (24°45' N, 72°42' E) in the Aravalli range in Sirohi district, Rajasthan. Megasthenes and Arrian identify it with Capitalia which attaining an elevation of 6,500 ft rises far above any other summit of the Aravalli range.

Arabudādri, Arbudagiri Same as Mount Abu.

Arbuda-Manḍala An administrative division in the Mount Abu region. It is mentioned in a stone inscription of Pūrṇapāla discovered at Bhadund, about a mile and a half from Nana in Jodhpur, Rajasthan. JBBRAS, XXIII.78 ff; ASI, We, 1908, 50.

Ardhakila A holy place at the junction of the Sarasvatī and Aruṇā. Mbh., III.83.153-57.

Ardin Same as Ujjayinī which according to Al-Bīrūnī, was about thirty-five miles from Bhilsa in Madhya Pradesh. Sachau, I.198 ff.

Areia Greek name of Herat.

Argalur A territory in Salem district Tamil Nadu which was the stronghold of the Bāṇa chieftains during the Cola period.

Argaru Greek name of Uragapura, modern Uraiyur near Tiruchirapalli (10°50' N, 78°46' E) which was previously a province or an independent kingdom in Damirica (Tamilakam, Dravida) mentioned in the Periplus, 59.

Ariake Same as Aparānta (q.v.) or Northern Konkan country mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.82, which comprised Malippala, Sarisalis, Tagara (modern Ter in Osmanabad district) Baithana (modern Paithan in Aurangabad district), Deopalli, Gamaliba and Omenogara. It is mentioned also in the Periplus 41, which describes it as the beginning of the kingdom of Mambarus whose capital was Minnagara. Ariake of the Pirates mentioned by Ptolemy corresponds to South Konkan.

Ariana A vague term roughly indicating the eastern districts of the Persian empire and portions of North-western India. The name appears to be associated with Iran and apparently also with Aria (q.v.), i.e. modern Herat region. Ariana usually embraced the Provinces of Parthia (Khorasan), Aria, the Paropanisadae (Kabul region), Arachosia (district round Kandahar), Drangiana (Seistan), Gedrosia (Baluchistan) and Carmania (Kirman).

Aricit The Ariśil or Araśālār, an affluent of the Kāverī, mentioned in the Bahur plates of Pallava Nṛpatuṅgavarman.

Arigacum A city of the Aspasiens, on a tributary of the Kabul river, mentioned by Arrian. Chinnock 230-31.

Arikameḍu Archaeological site on the eastern coast of India about two miles to the south of Pondicherry (11°56' N, 79°53' E) which has revealed traces of megalithic culture. Excavations in this place have also yielded Roman artefacts.

Arimardanapura Indian name of Pagan in Burma which is said to have situated in the land of Tattadeśa and in the kingdom of Tāmradvīpa. SGAMI, 319-20.

Ariṣṭapura, Aritthapura Capital of the Śibi (Śivi) kingdom mentioned in Pāṇini, VI.9.100. It is also mentioned in Ummadauti Jātaka (no.527).

Ariṭhapatti A village in the Pāṇḍya country where relics of Buddhist monuments have been discovered on the high range of hills called Kalugumalai, Ind. Ant., XI, 211.

Arjika, Ārjikya, Ārjikiyā River and land or people around it mentioned in RV, VIII.7.29; VIII.64.11; IX.65.23; IX.113.2; X.75.5. Ārjikiyā may stand for the Upper Indus, or the Vitastā (Jhelum).

Arjunadevigrāma A village in Akruśvara-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Hansot grant of the Cāhamāna king Bhartṛvaḍḍha. It lay in the Broach district, Gujarat. Ep. Ind., XII.197-204.

Arjunakoṣaraṇa A village mentioned in the Ratanpur stone inscription of Jajalladeva I. It has been identified with Arjuni fourteen miles west of Janjgir in Bilaspur district, Madhya Pradesh, CII, IV.77.

Arjunavāḍa A village in Kuṇḍi-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the spurious Alta copper plate of Pulakeśi. It is same as modern Arjunwada, sixteen miles east of Alaktaka-nagara (q.v.) or Alta, in Kolhapur (16°42' N, 74°16' E), Maharashtra. Ind. Ant., VII.211.

Arjunāyana People inhabiting the region lying west of Agra and Mathura about the Bharatpur and Alwar districts of Rajasthan. Their coins belonging to the closing decades of the first century BC bear the legend ārjunāyanānām jayah. They submitted to the Guptas about the middle of the fourth century. In the sixth century Varāhamihira refers to them as an important people of the northern and north-western division of India. BrS., IV, 25; XI.59; XIV.26; XVI.22; XVI.19; CII, III.14; THAI, 17-27.

Arjunyā River, probably same as Bāhūdā.

Arjunonḍhika A village in Śrīnagara-2500 (q.v.) mentioned in an inscription found at Saṅgamner which is dated S.922. It is identified with modern Rajapur in the Saṅgamner-taluka, (19°35' N, 76°16' E) Ahmednagar district, Maharashtra. Ep., Ind., II.217.

Arkakṣetra Same as Koṣārka (19°53' N, 86°08' E) in Orissa.

Arkatos Country of the Sorai between Mount Bettigo and Adeisathron with capital at Sora, mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.68. The Sorai is suggestive of Śabara, a general name attributed to tribes living on hunting. It may indicate a Cola tribe or the Kuḍiyas of South Karnataka. Arkatos may be the same as Arcot which later became famous as the seat of the Nawabs of the Carnatic. It should be pointed out that besides the town of Arcot near Vellore, there is one in Tanjore which corresponds best with Harkatu of Ibn Batuta.

Arki-Grāma A village in Tulumva-khanda mentioned in a Cuttack grant of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya. It is modern Turun on the Mahānadī, twenty-seven miles south of Sambalpur, Orissa. Ep. Ind., III.345-51; LI.199.

Arakkāḍu A city in the Cola country which may be same as Arkatos (q.v.) of Ptolemy and may be identified with modern Arcot. In early Tamil poems (cf. Narrinai, no. 190) it is described as the site of the residence of prince Alise which was surrounded by paddy fields. Ārkkāḍ means "forest of Ar" (bauhinea racemosa).

Arama'il City same as modern Armabil in Baluchistan on the sea-coast of Makran. According to Baladhuri it was a part of as-Sind (q.v.). It belonged to that territory which Hiuen Tsang called Lang-ka-lo.

Arouarnoi Same as Aruvā-nāḍu or the Kāñchipuram (12°50'N, 79°45'E) region mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.14.

Ārppākkam A village in the Kāñchipuram subdivision of Chingleput district, Tamil-nāḍu mentioned in the Cola inscriptions. It survives in the same name.

Ar-Rūr Modern Rohri (27°41' N, 68°57' E) on the Indus, not far from the Rajasthan border, which was originally the capital of the Rai dynasty of Sind. Subsequently it came to be known as Alor.

Arsa The territory between the Indus and the Bidaspes mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.45. Its Sanskrit form is Urasa. (Ind. Ant., 1884, 348). It included the cities of Ithagouros and Taxila.

Arsakes A principality mentioned by Alexander's historians which is represented by the Sanskrit Urasa, modern Hazara district, NWFP.

Arttani-Viṣaya An administrative division in Koṅgoda-maṇḍala is Dakṣiṇa-kosala (q.v.) mentioned in a Ganjam grant of Daṇḍimahādevī. Ep. Ind., VI.140-42.

Arugolanu A village in the Tadipalliguden taluk, West Godavari district, Andhra Pradesh where ruins of a large Buddhist monastery have been found.

Arugūr A village mentioned in an inscription of the time of Sadāśiva of Vijayanagara. It is modern Ariyur near Velur in the North Arcot district, Tamil Nadu. SII, I. no. 44.

Arumbaritti A village which survives in the same name near Velur in North Arcot district, Tamil Nadu, mentioned in an inscription of the time of Sadāśiva of Vijayanagara. SII, I. no. 45.

Aruṇā A tributary of the Sarasvatī flowing past Kurukṣetra. It meets the Sarasvatī at Aruṇāsaṅgama, three miles north-east of Pehoa, i.e. ancient Pṛthudaka (q.v.).

Aruṇācala Mythical mountain to the west of the Kailāsa range.

Aruvā Nāḍu A territorial unit in the Cola country which comprised the lower valley of the Pennar, just north of the Kāverī delta country. It was originally settled by a tribe called Aruvālar who were uprooted by Karikāla Cola. It was apparently the same as the Arouarnoi of Ptolemy.

Aryāvarta Country between the Yamuna and the Gaṅgā. In a wider sense Āryāvarta was the land east of Vinasana (q.v.), west of Kālakavana (q.v.), south of the Himalaya and north of the Pāriyātra or Pāripātra mountains. (Baudh. D.S., I.2.9., Vas. D.S., I.8.). Manu (II.22) defines Āryāvarta as the region between the Vindhya and the Himālaya, the two ranges which seem to be the boundaries of the Aryan world in the Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad (II.13) also. See under Madhyadeśa.

Asanapura A village near Draksharam in the Godavari district mentioned in a Viṣṇukunḍin record.

Āsandivat Capital of king Janamejaya Pārikṣita (Śat. Br., XIII.5.4.2; Ait. Br., VIII.21). It was apparently in the Kurukṣetra and probably identical with Nūgasāhvaya (Hastināpura) which was abandoned by Nicākṣu, a descendant of Parikṣit, on its being washed away by the Ganges.

Āsapalli A village mentioned in the Caulukya records. It is identified with Ahmedabad (23°03' N. 72°40' E). Ind. Ant., VI.210-13; Bom. Gaz., I.ii.205. Modern Asāval near Ahmedabad Ras, I.103.

Asi Dry river (Suṣkanadī being another name) giving its name to the second part of Vārāṇasī. The first part was named after Varnā.

Asi A town about sixty-five miles to the south-west of Kanauj mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī. Sachau, I.198 ff.

Asii, Asiani A nomad tribe that drove the Greeks out of Bactria, according to Strabo. Also called Asiani they have been identified with the Yuch-chi.

Asika A people mentioned in BrS, XI.56. Their territory on the Kṛṣṇaveṇā, i.e. the river Krishna, is mentioned in a Nasik inscription (ASWI, IV.109). Their name recalls Ārṣika of Patañjali, IV.2.2.

Āsikā A territory ruled by the Guhilaputras mentioned in the Hansi stone inscription of Śākambharī Cāhamāna Pṛthvirāja II. It is same as Hansi, the find-spot of the inscription, in Hissar district of Haryana. Ind. Ant., 1912, 17-19.

Asika-Nagara The Prakrit original of Rṣika-nagara (q.v.), a city on the Kṛṣṇaveṇā (i.e. Krishna) mentioned in the Hathigumpha inscription of Khāravela.

Asiknī River, same as Chandrabhāgā (q.v.) or Chenab, mentioned in RV, X.75. It is same as Arrian's Akesines and the Sandabaga or Sandabal of Ptolemy. It appears to flow just above Kishtwar as confluence of two hill streams. From Kishtwar to Rishtwar its course is southerly. It flows past Jammu, wherefrom it flows in a south-westerly direction forming a doab between it and Jhelum. The Candra and the Bhāga issue on opposite sides of the Bāra Lacha Pass in the Kangra district.

Āsmaka Same as the Assaka (q.v.) of the Buddhist texts, it was a territory on the Godāvarī. Its earliest mention is found in Pāṇini, IV.1.173. As the name signifies, "the stony region" can hardly refer to Āśvaka, the land of the Assakenoi in the north-west. The commentator Bhaṭṭasvāmin identifies Āsmaka with Maharashtra. It is described as one of the sixteen Mahājanapadas in the Buddhist texts lying between Mulaka and Kaliṅga (see under Assaka) with capital at Potali, Potana, Podana or Paudanya, to be identified with Bodhan (18°39' N, 77°50' E) on the Godāvarī. In BrS, XIV.22 the Aśmakas are located in the north-west division. Aśmakas are mentioned in inscriptions from Nasik and Ajanta (ASWI, IV, 109, 131).

Aśmakāvanti See under Avantī.

Aśmanvatī River mentioned in RV, X.53.8. Its identification with Oxus is doubtful.

Aśoka A Himalayan tract mentioned in Apadāna, 342.

Asokārāma A Buddhist establishment at Pāṭaliputra supposed to have been built by Aśoka. Mahāvamsa, V.80 163, 236, 276, XXIX.36, Samantapāsādikā, I.48-49; Milinda, 17-18.

Aspasian, Aspasioi People living in the Alishang Kunar-Bajaur valley mentioned by the classical writers. Their territory lay to the north of the Kabul river watered by the Khoes, possibly the modern Alishang, and the Euaspla, apparently the Kunar. The name of the people is derived from the Iranian aspa, i.e. the Sanskrit aśva or Aśvaka, and as such they might have been the western branch of the Aśvakas or Assakenoi (q.v.). Andaka and Arigaeum were their main cities (Chinnok, Arrian, 230-31).

Aspionus Same as Aria or Herat.

Assaka Aśmaka (q.v.) on the Godāvarī with capital at Potana (q.v.) or Potali to be identified with Bodhan (18°39' N, 77°50' E). (Cullakāṅga Jātaka, no. 310; Pariśiṣṭaparvan, I.92). The country of the Assakas was regarded as one of the sixteen Mahājanapadas (Aṅguttara, I.213; IV, 252, 256, 260; Mahāvastu, I.34). From Suttanipāta 977 it is clear that the territory was situated between Mulaka (district near Paithan) and Kaliṅga. In the Sonanda Jātaka (no. 532) Assaka has been associated with Avantī which suggests that Assaka might have included for some time Mulaka and some neighbouring districts and that its territory approached the southern frontier of Avantī.

Assakenians, Assakenoi People mentioned by classical writers who lived in parts of Swat and Buner. Their territory stretched eastwards as far as the Indus, and had its capital at Massaga (q.v.) which was situated not very far to the north of the Malakand Pass. The name of the Assakenians probably represented the Sanskrit Aśvaka, 'land of the horses', not Aśmaka, "the land of stone". The territory subsequently came to be known as Suvāstu (q.v.) and Udyāna (q.v.).

Assapura, Aśvapura A township in Aṅga, Jāt., III.460.

As-Sind Greater Sind which, according to the Arab writers, comprised the whole of the lower Indus Valley from Multan down to the sea, including nearly the whole of modern Baluchistan. LEC, 231; KFB, II.210.

Astakapra Same as Hastakavapra, modern Hathab, mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.60.

Aṣṭāpada A Jain tīrtha, identified with the Kailāsa mountain, which is mentioned in the Vividhārthakalpa.

Aṣṭāvakra Holy place four miles from Hardwar. Mbh., XIII.25.41.

Asthipura A village to the west of Thaneshwar and south of Aujasa-ghat.

It is said that here the bodies of the warriors slain in the Bhārata war were collected and cremated. Padma, I.27-62.

Aśunapadraka Modern Usunāpadara in the Puri district, Orissa mentioned in the Jayarampur copper plate inscription of the time of Gopacandra. OHRJ, XI.206-33.

Asurābhaka-Viṣaya An administrative division mentioned in the Jhusi grant of Trilocanapāla. The region might have been near the find-spot of the grant which was on the left bank of the Ganges opposite Allahabad. Ind. Ant., XVIII.33-35.

Asureśa-Pattalā An administrative division mentioned in the Fyzabad grant of Gāhaḍavāla Jayacandra. Ind. Ant., XV.10-13.

Asvagrāma Name of a mountain on which a temple of Lakulīśa was raised by Kuśika and other sages as recorded in the Ekaliṅgajī stone inscription of the Guhilaputra king Naravāhana discovered in the temple of Nātha, fourteen miles north of Udaipur (27°42' N, 75°33' E), Rajasthan. JBRAS, XXII.166-67.

Aśvatīrtha Name of three holy places of which one was situated near Kanauj and the others were on the Narmadā and the Godāvāri. Mbh., III.95-3; Matsya, CXCV.3; Padma, I.21.3; Brahma, LXXXIX.43.

Aṭavi Forest tract of Mid-India, perhaps Ālavī of the Buddhist texts, also mentioned in Aśoka's RE XIII.

Ātavika Forest states mentioned as subjugated territories in the Allahabad and Eran inscription of Samudragupta. The Ātavika-rājyas undoubtedly included the realm of Ālavaka (Ghazipur) as well as the forest kingdoms connected with Dabhālā or the Jabbalpur region. CII, III.114; Ep. Ind., VII.284-87.

Athaka Vāḍa A village, modern Atkal in Murtizapur Tehsil, Akola district, Maharashtra, mentioned in the Sirso copper plate of Rāṣṭrakūṭa Govinda III dated S.729. Ep. Ind., XXIII.206.

Atranjikhera A site on the Gaṅgā plains in Etah district, Uttar Pradesh, which has unfolded a long archaeological sequence. Period I has yielded the Ochre Colour Ware, Period II the Black-and-Red Ware, Period III the Painted Gray Ware and Period IV the Northern Black Polished Ware. Period III, marked by the PGW, reveals the use of iron. The C-14 date for the middle levels of the PGW at Atranjikhera is 1025±110 BC.

Aṭṭabhāsa A mountain in the Himalayas regarded sacred for funeral rites. Vāmana, XXIII.291; Matsya, XXII.68. It is also the name of a Śākta Pīṭha near Labhpur in Birbhum district, West Bengal.

Attirampakkam Lower and Middle Palaeolithic site on a small stream called Budida Manku Vanka in the Kortalar valley near Madras.

Ātumā A town in Kosala (q.v.) twice visited by the Buddha. It lay between Śrāvastī and Kuśinagara. Vinaya, I.249-50; Dīgha, II.131-32.

Audrahādī-Viṣaya An administrative division mentioned in the Kalvan plates of Yaśovarman. The find-spot of the plates was in the north-west of the Nasik district, Maharashtra. Ep. Ind., XIX.69-75.

Audumbara People inhabiting the area formed by the eastern part of the Kangra district as well as Gurdashpur and Hoshiarpur districts, i.e. the valley of the Beas or perhaps the wider region between the Upper Sutlej and the Ravi. They represented one of the six sections of the ancient Śālva (q.v.) tribe, the others being the Tilakhalas, Madrakāras, (or Bhadrakāras, probably related with the Madras), Yugandharas, Bhuliṅgas and Saradandas. The BrS, XIV 4 locates them in the Middle country. Coins issued by this people have been found in Punjab. THAI, 38f.

Audumbarika-Viṣaya An administrative division (viṣaya) mentioned in the Vappaghoṣavāta inscription of Jayanāga as included within the Kaṅkag-rāma-bhukti in Northern Rāḍhā. According to Abdul Fazl the Sarkar of Audumbar stretched from the southern boundary of Purnea to Murshidabad and Birbhum. It included Akmahal (modern Rajmahal) and may have embraced Ka-chu-wen-ki-lo or Kajaṅgala-maṅḍala mentioned by Hiuen-Tsang and Sandhyākara Nandī. In the time of Jayanāga the Audumbara-viṣaya apparently formed part of Karnasuvarṇa.

Aulikara A branch of the Mālavas (q.v.) that flourished at Dasapura, modern Mandasor (24°03' N, 75°08' E). They (especially their king Yaśodharman, 532 AD) were responsible for the name Mālava being applied to a wide region of Central and Western India including the old janapadas of Avantī (district round Ujjayinī and Ākara or Daśārṇa (district near Vidiśā).

Aurangabad Headquarters of a district in Maharashtra (19°52' N, 75°17' E), famous for Buddhist caves belonging to the sixth-seventh century AD. Situated about two miles to the north of the town proper, the caves are in three groups in a range of hills. The first group is constituted by five caves, the second by four and the third by a few plain unfinished cells. "These caves are particularly interesting for the inspired orgy of the sculptural magnificence, surpassing, in subtle grace and plastic treatment and effective display of varied coiffure, even the best of Ajanta. The soft and sensuous modelling and the dignified bearing of the large-sized female figures and Bodhisattvas, either as attendants to Buddha or in the role of door-keepers, endow them a quality seldom found in the reliefs of the contemporaneous Buddhist caves. The caves were originally painted, patches of painting still lingering at places." Mitra, 178-79.

Auśanāsa An eminent holy place on the Sarasvatī which is the same as Kapālamocana (q.v.) Mbh, III.83.135; Matsya, XXII.31; Padma, I.27.24-26; Vāmana, XXXIX.1.

Avamukta A territory in the Dakṣiṇāpatha (q.v.), ruled by one Nīlarāja, which was subjugated by Samudragupta as is known from the Allahabad inscription. It can not be satisfactorily identified, but the name of its king Nīlarāja reminds one of Nilapalli, an old sea-port near Yanam in the Godāvāri district. The Brahmapurāṇa, CXIII.22-23 mentions an Avimukta Kṣetra on the bank of the Gautamī or Godāvāri.

Āvalā A village in the Madhya-maṅḍala mentioned in a grant of the time of the Tuṃmāṇa Kalacuri king Pṛthvīdeva II found at Amoda, forty miles south-east of Bilaspur, Madhya Pradesh. Āvalā has been identified with Aurābhātā in Lapha, Bilaspur district, Madhya Pradesh. IHQ, 1925, 409-11.

Avañcapali A village in Amvaranta or Avarctika (q.v.) Viṣaya (the western region from Māhi to Goa) mentioned in the inscriptions of the Cūlukyas of Badami. Ep. Ind., III.51; JBBRAS, XX.42.

Avaniya A river in Tumkur (Holli) taluka of the district of the same name in Karṇāṭaka mentioned in a land grant obtained at Melekote EC, XVI.65, 77; MAR, 1916, 16.

Avanti One of the sixteen Mahājanapadas which corresponded roughly to the modern Malwa, Nimar and adjoining parts of Madhya Pradesh. Due to its geographical position, it served as a great commercial centre. Three main routes joined together in Avanti: from the western coast with its sea-ports Śurpāraka (Sopara) and Bhṛgukaccha (Broach); from Dakṣiṇāpatha; and from Śrāvastī. In the Vinaya, I.195; II.298. Avanti is mentioned as Avanti-dakṣiṇāpatha. Originally it corresponded to the Ujjain region together with a part of Narmadā valley from Mandhata to Maheshwar and certain adjoining districts. Late Jain writers include within its boundaries Tumbavana or Tumain in the Guna district (Parīśiṣṭha parvan, XII.2-3), about fifty-miles to the north-west of Eran (Ep. Ind., XXVI.115 ff). Avanti was divided into two parts by the Vindhyas. The northern part drained by the Śiprā and other streams had its capital at Ujjain and the southern part washed by the Narmadā had its centre at Māhiṣmatī (q.v.). The Mbh., II.31.10, however, distinguishes between the kingdoms of Avanti and Māhiṣmatī, but locates Vinda and Anuvinda of Avanti near the Narmadā. Buddhist and Jain writers mention three other cities of Avanti, viz. Kurara-ghara, Makkarakṭa and Sudarśanapura. Avanti in conjunction with Ākara (q.v.) is mentioned in the the Junagarh inscription of Rudradāman, Nasik cave inscription of Vāśiṣṭhīputra Pulumāyi and other epigraphs (ASWI, IV.109, 127; Ind. Ant., VII.262; Lüders, no. 965, etc). Avanti has been referred by such earlier authorities as Pāṇini, IV.1.176, Patañjali, IV.1.1, and Varāhamihira, (BrS., V.40, 73; IX.18.31; XI.35, XIV.12.). From these stray references it may be conjectured that the original seat of the ancient Avantis was the Ujjayinī region whence they spread over the South Narmadā valley. Subsequently two separate kingdoms — one on the north centring round Ujjayinī and the other on the south centring on Māhiṣmatī in the Nimar region—came into existence. This Southern Avanti was called by the Buddhist writers as Avanti-dakṣiṇāpatha which they sometimes connected with the Aśmaka country and called Aśmakāvantī. The capital of the Aśmaka (q.v.) country was Budhana (Sans, Paudanya) which lay in the Nizamabad district (18°39' N, 77°50' E), Andhra Pradesh. This shows that the southern boundary of Avanti-dakṣiṇāpatha reached much beyond the south of Narmadā. Avanti proper or Northern Avanti subsequently came to be known as Western Malava. But even in the seventh century Mālava did not become the designation of Avanti since Hiuen-Tsang had mentioned Mālava and Ujjayinī as separate countries. The Mālava of the Chinese pilgrim was near the river Mahī in Gujarat. Bāṇa in his Kādambarī described Ujjayinī as the capital of Avantī, and Vidisa (Besnagar in Bhilsa) as that of Malava. This distinction was maintained even upto the tenth century AD.

Avanti-Dakṣiṇāpatha See under Avantī.

Avantipura A city in Kashmir on the right bank of the Vitasta founded by king Avantivarman (c. AD 855-83). Its ruins are scattered in the villages Bhanthipura and Jaubrar, about twenty-nine km to the south of Srinagar (34°06' N, 74°51' E), on the road from Jammu to Srinagar. From chronicles and epigraphs it is known that the city was a great commercial centre. Ruins of two important specimens of Kashmir architecture—the Avantiśvara Śiva temple and Avantisvāmī Viṣṇu temple—are found here along with numerous sculptural specimens.

Āvarakabhoga District round the town of Agar (23°44' N, 76°04' E), north-east of Ujjayinī, Madhya Pradesh. Ep. Ind., XXIII. 102.

Avaretika-Viṣaya Same as Amvaranta-viṣaya (q.v.) it occurs as the name of a district in the Chiplun copper plate of the Cālukyas of Badami. The name is a corruption of Aparānta. The area of this district roughly corresponded to the western coastal region from Mahi to Goa. Ep. Ind., III. 51.

Avaravādi A village in the Kolanura-bhukti (q.v.) mentioned in Konnur copper plate, a Rāṣṭrakūṭa record of S. 782. It has been identified with modern Aurwadi, eight miles north by north-west of Konnur in the Navalgunda taluka of the Dharwar district, Karnataka. Ep. Ind., VI. 29.

Avimukta Holy place, same as Kāśī or Vārāṇasī.

Avūr Locality on one of the mouths of the Kāverī on the Coromandel coast.

Āyirattali Also known as Mudigonḍaśoḷapuram (q.v.) and Palaiyāru (q.v.), it is now represented by a small village on the bank of the Muḍigon-dan near Kumbakonam in Tamil Nadu.

Ayodhyā, Ayojjhā, Ayudhā Also known as Avadh or Oudh (26°48' N 82°14' E) it is a city in Fyzabad district, Uttar Pradesh. In a wider sense Ayodhyā has always denoted a considerable portion of eastern U.P. In ancient texts Ayodhyā on the Sarayu (Gharghara) is described as the capital of Kośala, while sometimes it is mentioned as a separate kingdom in itself. In the Vedic texts it is mentioned as a village. The epics and the Purāṇas know it as a great city, and so also the Buddhist and Jain texts. Fa-hian called it Sha-che and Ptolemy Sogeda. Hiuen-Tsang, who came to this city after crossing the Ganges and then travelling southwards, equated it with Sāketa (q.v.). But Sāketa and Ayodhya were adjacent cities in the same area as Calcutta and Salt Lake city. Certain Buddhist texts locate Ayodhyā on the Ganges (cf. Samyutta, II.140 f.; IV.179 f. Gilgit Mss. III.49) which may be due to the fact that perhaps another settlement of the same name existed somewhere on the Ganges. According to the Jain accounts Ayodhyā was twelve yojanas long and nine yojanas broad. According to Al-Bīrūnī it was situated about 150 miles south-east from Kanauj. Ait. Br., VII.3 ff.; Sāṅkh., S.S., XV.17-25; Āva. Nir., 382; Vinaya, II.237; Aṅguttara, IV.101; Samyutta, II.135; Udāna, V.5; Jāt., IV.82; Vāyu, XCIX.270; Matsya, L.77; Agni, CCLXXII, 5-7; Kūrma, I.20.4-6; Padma V.8.130-62.

Ayomukha A mountain in Vidarbha region mentioned in the Kalha grant of Kalacuri Soḍhadeva (Ep. Ind., VII.85-89). In Rām., IV.41 the Ayomukhas have been described as a southern people. Hiuen-Tsang refers to A-ye-mu-ka (Ayomukha) country as lying to the east of Ayodhyā.

Azania Probably same as the Zanzibar coast referred to in the Periplus, sec. 61.

B

Babhrutirtha A place of pilgrimage where the Mahī river falls into the sea. Skanda, I.2.13.107.

Babraham The best known entrance to Kashmir, according to Al-Bīrūnī, which was situated half way between the rivers Sindh and Jehlum. Sachau, I.198 ff.

Bacare A village, probably modern Porakad near Aleppy in the Kerala coast (9°27' N, 76°31' E) mentioned in Sec. 55 of the Periplus, beyond which there was a Dark Red mountain (probably the red Bluffs near Varkkalai).

Badalpur A village near Bhera in Taxila where remains of a large Buddhist Stūpa have been discovered.

Badami Site of the Cālukya capital Vātāpipura (15°50' N, 75°46' E) in the Bijapur district, Karnataka. It contains a number of shrines, both excavated and structural. Among the three caves belonging to the Brahmanical faith, the third one contains an inscription dated in Śaka year 500 (AD 578). Each of the shrines was probably provided with an open free-court which led in succession to the pillared verandah, the columned hall, and lastly to the small square sanctum cella cut deep into the rock at the far end of the hall. The facade is comparatively plain. The interior, however, is very rich on account of the varied designs of the pillars and the profusion of sculptures and carvings which appear on all sides. There is also a Jain cave at Badami.

Bādara People in south-west division mentioned in BrS, XIV.19. Their territory was probably identical with Hiuen-Tsang's O-cha-li or Badari (Vadari); the latter being identical with modern Edar in Gujarat.

Badari Same as Badarikāśrama (q.v.) in the Himalayan region mentioned in Varāha, CXLI.1 ff. The Padma (ch.CXXXIII) mentions Sārasvatatīrtha in Badari region.

Badarikāśrama Badrinath (30°44' N, 79°32' E) in Garhwal, Uttar Pradesh. In the Mbh., III.90.25-32; III. 141.23; XII.127.2-3 etc. it is located on the Gandhamādāna. The Padma, I.39.13; V.85-13 mentions Badarikā as situated on the Mahendra range. A third Badarikā is mentioned in the same text as lying at a short distance from Madhuvana on the Yamunā. The Ellora plates of Rāṣṭrakūṭa Dantidurga mention a holy place of the same name in South Gujarat. Ep. Ind., XXV.25,29.

Badarikārāma A locality in the vicinity of Kausambi (q.v.) mentioned in the Kosam inscription of the reign of Mahārāja Vaiśravaṇa. It is also mentioned in the Buddhist tradition. Ep. Ind., XXIV.147; Samyutta, III. 126 ff; Jāt, I.160; III.64.

Bādāsepattan An administrative division of Kāmarūpa, probably same as Bādā-ṣaya (q.v.), mentioned in the Uttarbalbil grant of Balavarman.

Bādāsojambubā An administrative division of Kāmrūpa, probably same as the Bādā-ṣaya (q.v.) and Bādāsepattan (q.v.), mentioned in the Gachtal inscription of Gopāla.

Bādā-ṣaya An administrative division of Kāmarūpa mentioned in the Kamauli grant of Vaidyadeva. It lay near the present village of Bādā in Barpeta (26°20' N, 91°3' E) subdivision, Assam. Ep. Ind., II,347-58.

Bagadage Same as Bagalkot (q.v.) which was the headquarters of a branch of the Sindas (16°2' N, 75°8' E). Ep. Ind., XIV., 268-70.

Bāgaḍi The Presidency division of undivided Bengal including the Sundarbans now belonging in parts to West Bengal and Bangladesh. The Ain however refers to the mahal Bāgaḍi in north Midnapur, and in Rennell's Atlas, Pl.VII Bagree is shown as a large tract of country between the Rupnarayan and Kasai rivers. Its identification with the Presidency division was proposed by Cunningham on circumstantial evidence. S.N. Majumder (CAGI, 731) derived the name Bāgaḍi from Vyāghrataḍi (q.v.).

Bāgaḍige-70 A subdivision belonging to Kuṇḍica-1000 or Kuṇḍi-ṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Dharwar copper plate of Cālukya Vinayāditya. It has been identified with the region around modern Bagalkot (16°2' N, 75°8' E) in the Bijapur district, Karnataka, ASIAR, 1930-34, 239.

Bagalā A site of Devī cult. It is same as Vaidyanātha (21°30' N, 84°44' E) in Bihar.

Bagalā Same as Bakla in Candradvīpa (q.v.), i.e. the southern region of the Patuakhali and Barisal districts of Bangladesh, mentioned as a pargana of the sarkar of the same name in the Ain, II.123,134.

Bagalkot Lower and middle palaeolithic site (16°2' N, 75°8' E) on the Ghataprabhā in Karnataka at a distance of about 13 km south-east of Anagawadi.

Bāgāvādi Modern Bagewadi taluka in the Bijapur district, Karnataka, mentioned as a part of Tarddevāḍi ṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Arjunawad inscription of the time of the Yādavas of Devagiri. Ep. Ind., XXI.9.

Bage-50 An administrative unit in the Tarddevāḍi ṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Honwad inscription dated S.976. It corresponds roughly with the country surrounding modern Bagalkot (16°2' N, 75°8' E) in the Bijapur district, Karnataka, Ind. Ant., XIX.272.

Bagh Site of Buddhist caves (22°22' N, 74°47' E) on a stream of the same name, which is a tributary of Narmadā, in Dhar district, Madhya Pradesh. Among the caves, the second one is elaborate consisting of a court, a pillared verandah, a hall with eighteen cells arrayed on three sides and a pillared antechamber leading to a shrine at the back of the hall. The fourth cave, locally known as Rangmahal, no doubt on account of its paintings, is most ornamental. Similar to the second cave in plan, it is more spacious. The pillared verandah of the fifth cave is a continuation of that of the fourth. Connected by a passage with the hall of the fifth, the sixth one shows a small monastery with a hall. The remaining caves, with the exception of the third, are badly dilapidated.

Baghai-khor Stone age site located in a rock shelter near the village Bhaisur, district Mirzapur, Uttar Pradesh.

Bagor Originally a mesolithic site (70°23' E, 25°21' N) on the left bank of the Kolhari a tributary of the Banas, 25 km west of the town of Bhilwara which is the headquarters of the district of the same name in Rajasthan. It lies in the centre of the Mewar plain in the shadow of the Aravalli hills. The total cultural deposit ranges in thickness from 1.60 to 1.75 metres. The occupation at the site was a continuous one, but on technological grounds it has been divided into three periods. Period I which is the earliest is characterised by microliths, period II by the addition of copper artefacts, and period III by the appearance of iron implements. Microliths are found throughout the deposit, but their frequency had progressively reduced going from bottom to the top of the site. The Bagorians subsequently took to pottery and were acquainted with copper and then in Period III came into contact with an iron-using culture from which they also imported glass and other objects. But this seems to be a very late occupation.

Bāhāḍa Modern Banal in the Jalgaon district, Maharashtra, mentioned in an inscription in cave 10 of Ajanta. Ep. Ind., XXXVII.241-44; CII, III.135.

Bahadurpur Lower palaeolithic site in Gujarat on the Orsang, a tributary of the Narmadā.

Ptolemy, VI.11.

Baktriane See under Bāhlika. The author of the Periplus mentions the Bactrians as a warlike nation of Northern Afghanistan who were under their own king (sec. 47). Ptolemy, VI.11 gives greater details of Baktriane, the country of the Baktriai or the Bāhlikas. The territory was bounded on the west by Margiane, on the north and east by the Sogdiane and on the south by Arcia. The eastern boundary was also marked by the Paropanisos or Hindukush. The rivers of Baktriane falling into the Oxus were Okhos, Dargamanes, Artanis, Dargoidos and Zariaspis.

Bāla-Balabhī Country mentioned in the Rāmacarita, the chief of which joined Rāmapāla in his expedition against Varendrī. It is mentioned in the
and N.N. Vasu with Devagrāma in the Nadia district of West Bengal.
Some scholars take Devagrāma for Deulgaon on the boundary of the districts of Midnapur and Balasore and identified Bala-Balabhī with Pipli or Bibli at the mouth of the Suvarṇarekhā river.

Bālagrāma A village on the river Sakatī in Varendrī (q.v.)

Bahdrāsīla A city which was situated to the north of the Himalayas according to the Bodhisattvāvadāna Kalpalatā V.2, 6. and Divyāvadāna 315. Later it came to be known as Takṣaśīlā according to the Buddhist tradition.

Bhadraśva A division of Jambudvīpa to the east of Mount Meru according to the Purāṇas. It is called Pūrva-Videha in Buddhist tradition. The BrS, IX.11. mentions Bhadrāśva as a people of the central region.

Bhadraśrītha Holy places on the Narmadā and the Godāvarī. Padma, I.18.54; Brahma, CLXV.1 and Matsya, XXII.50.

Bhadravati One of the four original streams of the Ganges, the other three being Śītā, Alakanandā and Sucukṣuh. Brahmāṇḍa, III.56.52.

Bhadreśvara Śākta Piṭha, identified with Bhadreśvara in the Hooghly district, West Bengal. SP. 82.

Bhadriśapura Capital of the Mālava Janapada according to the Jain Prajñapanā, 37.

Bhagala A form of Baḅgala or Bhaᅅgala by which the Tibetan writers meant Bengal. The term also denoted a city (pura) of Bhagala or Bengal, now surviving as Bhagala-pura (in the present state of Bihar).

Bhagavati A village which formed the north western boundary of Goᅅᅅuru mentioned in a grant of the Eastern Cālukya Amma I. (SII, I. no. 36); It remains doubtful whether this Goᅅᅅuru is identical with modern Guntur (16°18' N; 80°29' E). Sewell, Lists, II.26.

Bhagga An ancient tribe known to the Ait. Br., VIII.28 and Pāᅅini, IV 1. In the sixth century BC the Bhagga territory was a dependency of the Vatsa kingdom (Jāt., no. 353). The Mbh., II.30.10-11 and Hariv., XXIX.73 also testify to the close connection between the Vatsyas and the Bargas (Bhagga) and their proximity to the Niᅅādas. The testimony of the epic and the Apadāna seems to locate them in the Vindhyan region between the Yamuna and the Son.

Bhāgīrathī River same as the Gaᅅgā. In certain Parāᅅas it is described as one of the seven streams of the Gaᅅgā that started from Bindusaras. Matsya, CXXI.41.

Bhāilsān Same as Bhāillasvāmin or Bhilsa (22°30' N, 77°46' E) mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī. Sachau, I.198 ff.

Bhāillaswami Maᅅᅅala Same as Malwa, precisely Bhilsa (22°30' N, 77°46' E) Madhya Pradesh mentioned in the records of the Cālukyas of Kalyāᅅī. It was also known as Avanti-maᅅᅅala.

Bhāᅅsasur Mesolithic site in Mirzapur district, Uttar Pradesh.

Bhaja Buddhist cave site (18°44' N, 73°29' E) in Poona district, Maharashtra, near the Marivili railway station on the Bombay-Poona line. There are 22 caves excavated in the period between the second century BC to sixth century AD. The caitya hall belonging to the second century BC has been regarded as the earliest of its class in live rock. It contains wooden beams, a rock-cut stūpa, decorated columns and a designed frontage. Cave no.18 is also structurally significant.

Bhalānas One of the five tribes mentioned in RV, VII.18.7 which is mentioned and ranged on the side of the enemies of Sudās in the 'Battle of Ten Tribes' (Dāsarājūa). Zimmer has suggested as their original home East Kabulistan, comparing the name of the Bolan Pass.

Bhallar Stūpa A site containing Buddhist remains, situated on the last spur of the Sarda hill about five miles from Taxila railway station (30°40' N, 72°50' E) and half-a-mile north of the Naro river.

Bhamala A Buddhist site containing remains of Stūpas and monastery in the Haro valley among the Muree foothills, about ten miles east of Sirsukh, Taxila (30°40' N, 72°50' E).

Bhamaroparā A village in the Puᅅaka Viᅅaya (Poona district) mentioned in the Talegaon copper plate of S.690. It is modern Bhavarapura, eight miles north of Poona, (18°31' N, 73°55' E) Maharashtra. Ep. Ind., XIII.275.

Bhaṅgala Same as Vaṅga or Vaṅgāla (q.v.) mentioned by Tibetan writers.

Bhangarh Palaeolithic site on the river Sanwan, district Alwar 27°34' N, 76°38' E) Rajasthan.

Bharadvāja Ārama Hermitage of Bharadvāja which was situated at the confluence of the Gaṅgā and the Yamunā at Prayāga, Allahabad. Rām, II.54-9ff.

Bharankkavu Buddhist site in Kerala, about five miles south of Mavelikkara in Central Travancore region.

Bharata A people mentioned in the RV in connection with the Tṛtsus (III.53.9 ff) and as enemies of the Purus (VII.8.4). They were Kinsmen of the Tṛtsus. The Bharatas occupied the region watered by the Sarasvatī, Āpayā and Dṛṣadvatī. The geographical position of the Bharatas is clearly shown by the fact that the Bharata kings won victories over the Kāsis, and made offerings on the Yamunā and the Gaṅgā (Śat. Br., XIII.5.4.11, 21). In the post-Ṛgvedic period they coalesced with (q.v.), their erstwhile enemies, the Purus, to form the Kuru (q.v.) people of later times.

Bhāratavarṣa 'Country of the Bharatas or descendants of Bharata'. In a restricted sense the term denoted Northern India only as is apparent from the Hathigumpha inscription of Khāravela, the earliest epigraph mentioning it. In its broadest application the term comprised not only the whole of India but also extra-Indian territories like Burma, Malayasia, Ceylon, etc. In the Purāṇas it is described as a division of Jambudvīpa, sometimes identified with Jambudvīpa itself. It is described as semi-circular and lying between Himavat in the north like the string of a bow and the sea in the south, east and west. It is said to have been divided into nine subdivisions all of which extend to the ocean but are mutually inaccessible. The nine subdivisions of Bhāratavarṣa are Indradvīpa, Kaśerumat, Tāmraparṣa, Gabhastimat, Nāgadvīpa, Saumya, Gāndharva, Vāruṇa and Sāgarasṃvṛta. All these denote a greater India which included portions of Western, Central and Southeast Asia. India-proper is identified with the ninth division of greater-Bhāratavarṣa which is known as Sāgarasṃvṛta or Kumārī-dvīpa. It has five divisions—Madhyadeśa, Aprānta, Dakṣiṇāpatha, Udīcya and Prācya—each having a number of Janapadas or settlements—one varṣa mountain called Himavat and seven kula-mountains with numerous rivers issuing from them.

Bharga A dependency of the Vatsa kingdom with Sumsumāragira as its chief town. It lay between Vaiśālī and Śarasvatī. Aṅguttara, II.61 and Vinaya, II,127

Bharhut Buddhist site (24°27' N, 80°52' E) in the Satna district, Madhya Pradesh, about nine miles south of Satna railway station, situated at the foot of the Lalpahar hill to the west of the river Tons. The establishment belonged to the second century BC. Nothing of the main Stūpa is now visible except a shallow circular depression around a slightly raised circular ground. The materials were used by the villagers for making their own houses. Cunningham salvaged a portion of the great railing and the eastern gateway and removed them to the Indian Museum of Calcutta. Other stray pieces which were collected subsequently had been acquired by the Allahabad Museum and a few pieces by the National Museum, New Delhi. The railing was carved with a profusion of bas-reliefs depicting the Jātaka stories (i.e. tales of the Buddha's previous births) and scenes from the Buddha's life. More than thirty Jātaka tales have been traced and identified on the basis of the inscribed labels.

Bhārolangalā-Vithi Either Bhogaral or Nangaleśvara in the district of Balasore, Orissa, mentioned as an administrative division in the Jayrampur copper plate inscription of the time of Gopacandra. OHRJ, XI.223-27.

Bhārukaccha Same as Bhṛgukaccha of the Puraṇic tradition it is mentioned in the Pali literature as a sea-port whence merchants used to sail to visit Suvāṇṇabhūmi. It is identical with Barigaza of Ptolemy and the Periplus and with modern Broach (21°45' N, 72°58' E) in Kathiawar. It is mentioned in the Mathura Buddhist image inscription of Huviṣka and many other textual and epigraphic records. It is same as Po-lu-ka-che-po of Hiuen-Tsang which is described by him as 2,500 li in circuit. Bhārukaccha as a city of the southern division occurs in B/S, XIV,11,XVI.6 and also in inscriptions at Junnar and Nasik and perhaps in the Junagarh inscription of Rudradāman. ASWI, IV.96,100 and Ind. Ant., VII.262. Bhārukaccha-viṣaya as an administrative division is mentioned in Valabhī records.

Bhāskara-Kṣetra Same as Hampi (15°20' N, 76°30' E) in the Bellary district, Karnataka, which was the capital of the Vijayanagara kings. Ep. Ind., XXV.190.

Bhāskara-Kṣetra Same as Koṅārka (19°53' N, 86°08' E) in Orissa.

Bhāsvat Same as modern Bhilsa (22°30' N, 77°46' E), Madhya Pradesh mentioned in the Khajuraho inscription of Dhaṅga dated vs 1011. Ep. Ind., I.129.

Bhāṭi Literally 'downstream, land of the ebb-tide'. It is the name given to the low-lying flats of the Gangetic delta that border on the great estuaries. Tāranatha refers to 'Bati' as an island realm near the mouth of the Ganges. Abul Fazl confines the Bhāṭi to 'the tract of country on the east' of the subah of Bengal. The name is still used to denote the Sundarban (21°30' N, 90°00' E) region.

Bhaṭṭavila An administrative division mentioned in the Rajim stone inscription of Jagapāladeva. It has been identified with the Baghelkhand region, i.e. the eastern part of the modern Rewa division of Madhya Pradesh. Ind. Ant., XVII.135 ff and ICPB, 106 ff.

Bhaṭṭa-Kośala A village in the Gauḍa country which was the birth place of the well known poet Lakṣmīdhara. IC, I.703-04.

Bhaṭṭiprolu Buddhist site (16°6' N, 80°47' E) in Guntur district, Andhra Pradesh. It is a railway station on the Guntur-Repalli line and is about four miles from the right bank of the Krishna. The Stūpa, the only extant remains, is now an irregular mass of brick work with concentric courses of bricks visible at places. Both in respect of sanctity and dimensions it was at one time next only to the Mahācaitya of Amarāvati (q.v.) as it yielded the corporeal relics of the Buddha. The inscriptions on the relic casket of the Sūpa mostly resemble the Aśokan script.

Bhauṭṭa Bhoṭs or Tibetans.

Bhāvagrāma Locality in Varendrī or North Bengal. GL, 133; IB, 100, 108 and Ind. Ant., 1891, 420.

Bhaviṣā A village in Kāśī-pāṭaka (q.v.) belonging to the visaya of Hāpyoma (q.v.) mentioned in the Gauhati grant of Indrapāla. JASB, LXVI.113-32; KS, 116-29). It lay in the upper Brahmaputra valley in Assam.

Bhedādevī Modern Budabror, west of Srinagar (34°06' N, 74°51' E) in Kashmir near which was situated the spring called Gaṅgodbheda.

Bhendevādo Modern Bhendevada, a village near Alta, Kolhapur, (16°42' N, 74°16' E) mentioned in the Khavtheni grant of S.930 of the time of Cālukyās of Kalyāṇī. Ind. Ant., XVI.21.

Bhera Territory (32°29' N, 72°57' E) situated on the left bank of the Jhelum under the Salt Range. Also known as Bahātih or Bhātiāh it was occupied by the Yamīnis in AD 1004. TF., I.38.

Bheraghat Site of the 64 yoginī temples near Jabalpur (23°10' N, 79.59' E). The complex is 116 feet in internal diameter with 81 peripheral chapels together with a central shrine containing an image of Uma-Maheśvara. This temple might have belonged to the ninth or tenth century AD.

Bheṣakalāvana Also known as Kesakalāvana, this place was situated in the neighbourhood of Suṃsumāragiri (q.v.) of the Bhargas (q.v.) where the Buddha stayed. Majjhima, I.513 ff, II.91; Aṅguttara, II.61, III.295, IV.85 ff and Jāt., III.157.

Bhesaurigrāma A village in the Puṇaka or Puṇya Viṣaya (identified with Poona or Pune) mentioned in a Poona copper plate of the time of the Rāṣtrakūṭas. It is modern Bhosari near Poona (18°31' N, 73°55' E). QBISM, VIII.165.

Bhetisṛṅga Modern Barsinga on the Brāhmaṇī river mentioned in the Indian Museum plates of Gaṅga Indravarma. Ep. Ind., XXVI.168.

Bhiliṅga-bhoga-viṣaya Modern Bilingi in the Srikakulam district of Andhra Pradesh. CII, III.34 and JNSI, XXXII.25ff.

Bhillamāla Modern Bhinmal (25°00' N, 72°19' E) in Rajasthan which was the capital of the Gurjara kingdom.

Bhimadevī Modern Bran in Phak pargana on east shore of the Dal lake in Kashmir. RT, II.135.

Bhimbandh Lower Palaeolithic site on isolated foresty hilly valley, near the eastern side of a hot spring and the bed of a local stream in Monghyr district, Bihar.

Bhimbetka Rock-shelters and caves in district Raisan, Madhya Pradesh, where Stone Age sequence has been obtained. These are situated at a distance of forty km south of Bhopal (23°16' N, 77°36' E).

Bhir One of the three sites (33°40' N, 72°50' E) in the valley where ancient Takṣaśilā stood. Archaeological remains testify that the Bhir mound is the oldest of the three sites. It is situated of the southern part of the valley, between the railway junction and the Tāmranālā where the Dharmarājikā Stūpa, locally known as Chir Tope, was erected.

Bhīmarathā, Bhīmarathī A river mentioned in B/S, XVI.9. A grant of the Eastern Cālukya king Viṣṇuvārdhana I gives the name as Bhīmarathī (Ind. Ant., XIX, 304, 310). It is mentioned specially in the Daulatabad plates of Cālukya Jayasīma II. (Ep. Ind., VI.9 and IC, VIII.113). It is modern Bhīmā which rises in the Sahyādri range and flows into the Krishna near Raichur. It is also mentioned in other Cālukya inscriptions (Ep. Ind., V.200, 204) and the Purāṇas. Matsya, XXII.45, CXIV.29; Brahma, XXVII.35; Padma, I.24, 32 and Vāmana XIII.20, etc.

Bhitargaon Temple site in Kanpur district, Uttar Pradesh.

Bhoga A constituent tribe of the Vṛjjan confederacy lying in Bhoganagara on the way from Vaiśālī to Pāvā. Hoernle, Uvāsagadasāo, II.139, also App., III.57; Dīgha, II.122-26; Suttani, 194.

Bhoganagara See under Bhoga.

Bhogavardhana A southern tribe mentioned along with Maulikas, Aśmakas and Kuntalas in Mārkaṇḍeya, LVII.48-49. Their territory seems to have been in the Godavari region. They are mentioned as Bhogavardhana in an inscription from Bharhut. Bhogavardhana viṣaya is mentioned in a charter of the Kalacuri king Śaṅkaragaṇa found at Abhona in the Nasik district. This administrative division might have been another name of the ancient Govardhana or Nasik district, Maharashtra.

Bhogavati The capital of the Nāgavaṃsīs of the Bastar region of Madhya Pradesh. Hemacandra in his lexicon refers to it as Bhogāvali while the Rāmacarita, III.43 as Bhogāli. Ep. Ind., IX.160 ff, X.25 ff.

Bhogavati Another name of Ujjayinī mentioned in a Bhaja Buddhist cave inscription. Bhandarkar, List, no. 1078.

Bhoja A people of the South, whose subjects were the Sātvatas mentioned in Ait. Br., VIII.14. It is stated in the Purāṇas that the Sātvatas and Bhojas were offshoots of the Yadus dwelling at Mathura on the banks of the Yamunā (Matsya, XLIII.48, XLIV.46-48; Vāyu, XCIV.52, XCV.18, XCVI.1-2 and Viṣṇu, IV.13.1-6). We are further told by the same authorities that they were kindreds of the southern realm of Vidarbha. The Bhojas are mentioned in the inscriptions of Aśoka. The Raghuvamśa, V.39-40 calls the king of Vidarbha a Bhoja. See under Bhojakata.

Bhojakata A territory included within Vidarbha both by Mbh., V.157.15-16 and Hariv., LX.32. The Chammak grant of the Vākāṭaka king Pravarasena II makes it clear that the Bhojakata territory included parts of Wardha and Amaravati districts of Maharashtra, a part of ancient Vidarbha (JRAS, 1914, 329). The name Bhojakata, 'castle of the Bhojas' implies that the province was named after a stronghold formerly held by the Bhojas, an ancient tribe mentioned in the edicts of Aśoka. Ind. Ant.

1923, 272-63). The central site of Bhojanagara may be identified with Bhatkuli in the Amaraoti district.

Bhojanagara Capital of the Uśīnara country according to Mbh., V.118.2.

Bhojānta One of the 56 countries mentioned in the Śaktisaṅgama-tantra. It is said to have extended from Kāśmīra and lay to the west of Kāmarūpa and to the south of Mānaseśa (Mānasa lake). Bhojānta is evidently Bhutan, now a small state to the north of Bengal. The Tibetans are also known as Bhauṭṭa or Bhoṭa. Taken in this wider sense Bhojānta may actually be placed between Kāśmīra in the west and Kāmarūpa in the East. SGAMI, 103.

Bhoteshar Bhutan, according to Al-Bīrūnī, which was about one month's walking distance from Naipal (Nepāl) and the first frontier of Tibet whence the distance to the top of the highest peak is sixty miles. From the height of this mountain, India appears as a black expanse below the mist, the mountains lying below this peak like small hills, and Tibet and China appear as red. Sachau, I.198 ff.

Bhottadeśa General term for the Himalayan states including Tibet. Devīpurāna, XXXIX.14-15, XLII.9.

Bhojija A village in the Kuṇḍi Viśaya (q.v.). It is modern Bhoja in the Chikodi Taluka of the Belgaum district, Karnataka, mentioned in a copper plate found at the same place of the time of the Cālukyas of Kalyāni, Ind. Ant., XIX 247.

Bhramarakoṭṭa-Maṇḍala Same as Cakrakoṭṭa (q.v.) or part of it mentioned in the Rajapura copper-plate inscription of Madhurāntaka bearing the date AD 1065.

Bhramaravadra Modern Bamra situated to the east of Raipur (21°15' N, 81°41' E) mentioned in the Rajim inscription of the time of the Kalacuri Pṛthvīdeva II. Ind. Ant., XVII.137, 140.

Bhṛgukaccha See under Bhārukaccha and Barygaza.

Bhṛgutrtha Bheraghat containing temples of 64 Yoginis, twelve miles to the west of Jabalpur (23°10' N, 79°59' E) Mbh., III.99.34-35, Matsya, CXCIII.23-60; Kūrma, II.42.1-6 and Padma, I.20.23-57.

Bhṛgutuṅga Holy places on the Himalayas, on the Amarakaṇṭaka range, on the eastern bank of the Gandak, in Gurjaradeśa and near the Vitastā. Vāmana, LXXXI.33; Skanda, K.VI.25; Varāha, CXLVI, 45-46, Matsya, XXII.31, Kūrma, II.20.33, Vāyu XXIII.148, LXXVII 82 and Mbh., III.84.50 ff.

Bhṛgu, Bhṛgupuri Śākta Pīṭha in Balia, Uttar Pradesh. Bhṛgupura was also the name of Broach in Gujarat. Prabandhacintāmaṇi, Tawney's trans. 136 and SP, 82.

Bhuliṅga A clan of the Śālva people mentioned in the Puranic lists of Janapadas. They are mentioned as Huliṅga in the Vaijayantī. Ptolemy I.7.69 refers to them as Biolingai or Bolingai who had two towns, Stagabaza and Bardaotis (Bhadrāvati).

Bhumilikā Modern Bhumli in Porbandar (21°37' N, 69°49' E), Gujarat, mentioned in an epigraph of AD 738. Ind. Ant., XII.155; BG, I(1) 87.137.

Bhūriśreṣṭhika Country, identified with Bhursut on the banks of the Damodar in the Hooghly-Howrah districts of West Bengal.

Bhūteśvara Modern Buthiser in Kashmir. RT, I.107.

Bhuṭṭarāṣṭrādhvan 'The way to the country of the Bhoṭas', mentioned by Kalhaṇa in RT, VIII.2887. See under Zojī-la Pass. Jonarāja's RT, V.142 ff.

Bhuvaneśa The name of Northern Orissa as recorded in the Śakti-saṅgama-tantra.

Bhuvaneśvara Modern Bhuvaneswar, Capital of Orissa, eighteen miles south of Cuttack and thirty miles north of Puri town, on the Baliani river, famous for the celebrated temple of Liṅgarāja constructed in the seventh century AD. This temple covers an area of nearly five acres and is surrounded by a thick high wall of laterite and oblong in shape. A courtyard inside is flagged with stone and is crowded with numerous side temples. The main temple consists of four structures, viz. the dancing hall, the reflectory hall, the porch and the tower. Among other temples of Bhuvaneśvara, the Parasurāmeśvara is a little older than the Liṅgarāja, and may be regarded as a representative specimen among the early Orissan temples. The temple of Mukteśvara is closely similar in design to that of the Parasurāmeśvara. The temple of Rājarāṇī exhibits a cluster of smaller towers round the body of the main Gaṇḍi and appears to be an exotic growth in Orissa. The emergence of the typical Orissan form of temple may be studied with reference to the Śiddhesvara, Kedāreśvara and Brahmeśvara temples at Bhuvaneswar.

Bibasis River, same as the Vipāśā or Beas, mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.26, 42.

Bidare Modern Chik-Bidare in the Devangere taluka (14°31' N, 75°58' E), Chitaldurg, district, Karnataka, mentioned in the Ganganarasi inscription of the time of the Yādavas of Devagiri as a village in Bikkiga-70 (q.v.), a subdivision of Nolambavāḍi-32000 (q.v.) EC, XI.Dg. 87.

Bidaspes River, same as Vitastā or Jhelum, mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.26, 42.

Bihroj Same as Bharukaccha or Bhṛḡukaccha, Barygaza of Ptolemy and the Periplus, modern Broach (21°45' N, 72°58' E), mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī as lying on the Gujarat sea coast direct south of Anhilwara. Sachau, I.198 ff.

Bijanagar A pargana in the sarkar of Pinjora or Panjara which comprised the greater part of the Dinajpur district of North Bengal (25°38' N, 88°41' E) Ain., III.136, JASB, XLII.214.

Bijānagar Name of Vijayanagara as recorded by Abdur Razzaq.

Bijatala Middle Palaeolithic site on the Khadkai, District Mayurbhanj, Orissa.

Bikkiga-70 Modern Bikkikaṭi in the Davanagere taluka (14°31' N, 75°58' E) of the Chitaldurg district, Karnataka, mentioned in the Chikka-Bidare inscription of the time of the Yādavas of Devagiri as a subdivision of Nolambavāḍi-32000 (q.v.). EC, XI. Dg. 103.

Bimbisāra-Puri Name of Girivraja (q.v.) mentioned by Buddhaghosa.

Bindu-Saras Lake in the Himalayas which according to the Purāṇas is the source of the rivers Nalinī, Hlādinī and Pāvānī, streams of Ganges. Rājasekhara (KM, VIII) considers it to be the Zero point of the Himalayas.

Binnayaga Buddhist cave site (24°4' N, 75°53' E) in the Jhalawar district, Rajasthan, five miles east-north-east of Kolvi (q.v.). The caves have been cut out of the vertical faces of a flat-topped laterite hill. There are nearly twenty caves so far exposed. Most of them are monastic abodes. There are also free-standing rock-cut Stūpas.

Birāt A village in the Rangpur district, (25°45' N, 89°18' E), Bangladesh, consisting temple ruins of the Paharpur pattern, though of much smaller dimensions.

Birbhanpur Mesolithic site marked by microlithic industry near the Durgapur Railway Station (23°30' N, 87°20' E) on the bank of the Damodar in Burdwan district, West Bengal.

Bitbhaya-Pattana A town mentioned in the Vīracarita which has been identified with modern Bhitā, an archaeological site near Allahabad (25°25' N, 81°51' E). ASIAR, 1909-10, 40, 1911-12, 29-94.

Biyatta River, same as the Vitastā, mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī. Sachau, I.198 ff.

Bodh-Gayā Also known as Vajrāsana it is a celebrated Buddhist site (24°12' N, 85° E) in the Gaya district, Bihar, eight miles from Gaya railway station. The site of the Buddha's enlightenment, Uruvelā (modern Urel) on the bank of Nairāñjanā (modern Lilajan), is within a mile of the Mahābodhi temple. The earliest vestiges that are visible now belong to the first century BC. The Mahābodhi temple, despite many changes from time to time and a complete overhauling in the eighties of the nineteenth century, retains the dimensions and broad features which characterised it in the time of Hiuen-Tsang. The monastic complex around the temple was enriched in many cases by contributions from abroad, especially from the princes and monks of Śrīlāṅkā. The establishment flourished tremendously during the long rule of the Pālas as is attested by their inscriptions. Towards the end of the thirteenth century the Burmese took special interest in the preservation of the Mahābodhi temple which was severally damaged by the Turkish invaders. The temple was in use even in the fourteenth century as is evident from the records of pilgrims inscribed on the pavement-slabs.

Bolyāsaka Modern Buliasa, an outlying frontier district in the Vitasta valley of Kashmir. RT, V.225.

Bommehālu Modern Bommeparti situated at a distance of seven miles from Anantapura (14°41' N, 77°39' E), Andhra Pradesh. Ep. Ind., XXV.190.

Bopakhalu A village in the Puṇaka or Puṇya Viṣaya (identified with Poona or Pune, (18°31' N, 73°55' E, Maharashtra) mentioned in a Poona copper plate of the time of the Rāṣṭrakūṭas. It is modern Bopkhel, two miles north-east of Poona. QBISM, VIII.165.

Borivli Middle Palaeolithic site in the suburb of Bombay (about thirty-eight km from Churchgate railway station) adjoining Kanheri or Krishna-giri hill (q.v.), famous for Buddhist caves.

Brahmagiri Famous site of an Aśokan edict which is situated in the Chitaldurg district of Karnataka where both neoliths and microliths have been found. Finds from this place consist of parallell-sided flakes and Gravettian like penknife blades. The site has also yielded two kinds of painted pottery. The habitational deposit has yielded the remains of three cultures. (i) Neolithic-Chalcolithic, (ii) Megalithic and (iii) Andhra-Sātavāhana in a successive order. At Brahmagiri, the cemetery consists of more than 300 megaliths. They are of two types-the cist-circles and the pit-circles.

Brahmakṣetra Name of Kurukṣetra. Mbh., III.83.4 ff. and Vāyu., LIX. 106-07, XC VII.5.

Brahmanadī Name of the river Sarasvatī, Bhōgavata, IX.16.23.

Brāhmanavasti Name of the village as well as of a district mentioned in the Bamanghati grant of Rājabhāṅja. The viṣaya is the same as the Bamanghati subdivision of the Mayurbhanj district, Orissa, while the village is represented by modern Brahmanayas, in the same subdivision. JASB, XL.168-69 and Ep. Ind., XVIII.301.

Brāhmaṇī River, probably the Bāmanī that falls into the Chambal. Mbh., III.84, 58.

Brahmapura Same as Hiuen-Tsang's Po-lo-lih-mo-pu-lo which comprised parts of the Kumaon and Garhwal districts. The Chinese pilgrim described this country as six hundred sixty seven miles in circuit. It must have therefore included the whole of the hilly country between the Alakanandā and Karnāli rivers. The BṛS, XIV 30 locates it in north-east division. Watters, I, 329 and AGI, 407 ff.

Brahmapurī Modern Bahmangaon near Gurgi in Rewa district mentioned in the Gurgi stone inscription of Kokkaladeva II. CII, IV, 227.

Brahmaputra River same as Lauhitya (q.v.). It maintains an easterly course from Mānasa-sarovara to Namcha Barwa whence in turns south and enters Sadia in Arunachal Pradesh, and thereafter flowing in a south-westerly direction to the north of Garo hills it takes a southern curve once again and joins the Padmā at the point where the Pabna, Dacca and Faridpur districts are separated. Its course through the tableland of southern Tibet is known as Tsangpo. Its important tributaries are Lohit, Buridihing, Disara, Dhansiri, Kalang, Krishnai, etc. Between Lakhimpur and Sibsagar it forms a large island called Majuli. In Bangladesh Brahmaputra is known as Yamunā. The combined stream of the Padmā and the Yamunā meets the Meghnā near Chandpur and the rest of the course down to the sea is known as Meghnā.

Brahmarṣi-Deśa Name of the land comprising Kurukṣetra and the territories of the Matsyas, Pañcālas and Surasenakas. Manu., II.17.

Brahmasaras Name of holy lakes near Thaneswar, Gaya, Nāthapura in Purnea district (Kokamukha) and Malaya range (Sunandūra). Mbh., V.84.85, V.95.11, XIII.25.58; Agni, CXV.38; Vāyu, LXXVII, 51, CXI.30; Varāha, CXL.37-39, CL.20; Matsya XXII.12 and Vāmana, XXII.50-60.

Brahmāvarta Region between the rivers Sarasvatī and Dṛśadvatī (Manu, II.19). The Meghadūta I.48 shows that Kurukṣetra was a part of Brahmāvarta.

Brahmottara People of the eastern division mentioned in the Puranic lists of Janapadas. Their locality was probably the same as Barnahattar in Sarkar Stagaon known from the Aln-i-Akbari, II 141. Rājaśekhara (KM, XVII) also places it in the Pūrvadeśa near the Suhma country which lay on the western coast of the Ganges in West Bengal. IHQ, 932, 524 ff.

Brhad-Viṅga A village in the Śrīmāla Viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Sortur stone inscription of S.702. It is modern Wadgaon in Shirwal, Bhor (18°09' N, 73°54' E) Maharashtra. Ep. Ind., XXI.208.

Budbudā River rising in the Himalaya. Brahmāṇḍa, II.16.25-26.

Buddhani A Buddhist centre, about eighteen miles distant from Repalle railway station, Andhra Pradesh, where a few Buddhist images belonging to the fifth century AD have been discovered.

Budubudu A village in the Madhya maṇḍala (q.v.) mentioned in the Amoda grant no. 2 of the time of the Kalacuri Pṛthivīdeva II. It has been identified with Burbur in the Lapha region of the Bilaspur district, Madhya Pradesh. IHQ, 1925, 412-14.

Budukuni Modern Daikoni in Madhya Pradesh mentioned in the Daikoni copper plates of Pṛthivīdeva II. CII, IV.444.

Bukephalus Alexandria One of the many cities named after Alexander. It lay on the western bank of Upper Jhelum. This city is mentioned in the Periplus, sec. 47.

Buli Tribe living in the territory called Allakappa (q.v.).

Bunderā Same as Bundela mentioned in the Amoda plates of Jājalladeva II (K.E. 919). CII, IV.522 ff.

Būrāvī River, probably modern Bori in the Jalgaon district. There is also a river called Burai in the Dhulia district. Ep. Ind., XXXVIII.71.

Burzahom Neolithic and Megalithic site in the Kashmir valley. It is situated some twenty-four km north-east of Srinagar (34°06' N, 74°51' E) near the Dal lake over a flat hillock of silt and loam facing the Mahadeo peak of the Himalayas. The cultural deposit, at places four metres thick, has been divided into three major periods—Neolithic, Megalithic and Early Historical. The Neolithic has been divided into lower (Ph. I), characterised by pit-dwellings, and upper (Ph II), characterised by mud-brick houses. The succeeding Megalithic period, characterised by the erection of 'menhirs' is an extension of Ph II.

Byzanteion, Byzantium Probably same as modern Vizadrog (16°26' N, 73°26' E) in the Ratnagiri coast mentioned in sec. 53 of the Periplus as lying below Melizigara. Ptolemy, VII.1.7. locates the city in the Ariake of the Pirates, i.e. South Koṅkan region.

C

Cacouthes The river Kakutthā which formed the dividing line between Kusinārā and Pāvā. This name has been used by the classical writers. The river in itself is identified with modern Kuku. AGI, 714.

Caḍaspāsā-Pāṭaka A village mentioned in the Madhainagar plate of Lakṣmaṇasena. IB, 115.

Caḍobha Same as Dubkund on the left bank of the river Kuhu, seventy-six miles to the south-west of Gwalior (26°14' N, 78°10' E). It is mentioned in the records of the Kacchapaghātas of Dubkund. Ep. Ind., II.236.

Caenitae Probably same as the Oyster-rocks mentioned in the Periplus, sec. 53.

Cail A city in the Pāṇḍya country mentioned by Marco Polo. It is same as Kāyal (8°34' N, 78°10' E) at the mouth of Tāmraparṇī.

Caitraratha A forest on the bank of the Acchodā river. Brahmāṇḍa, II.18.7; Vāyu, XLVII.6; Matsya, XIII.28.

Cakradhara Holy place in Kashmir now known in a corrupt form as Tskdar or Chākdhar. It is about a mile to the west of Bijbror, ancient Vijayeśvara. RT, I.38.

Cakradurga Probably same as Cakrakūṭa, Cakrakoṭṭa or Śakkarakoṭṭam (qqv) representing the Bastar district or Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Paramāra records Ep. Ind., X.25-34.

Cakrakoṭa, Cakragoṭṭa Country which was probably same as Śakkarakoṭṭam of the Tirumalai inscription of Rājendra Cola and Cakradurga of the Paramāra records. The Vik, IV.30, refers to the Western Cālukya Vikramaditya VI as conquering Cakrakoṭa. Cakragoṭṭa occurs in the list of conquered territories of Hoysala Viṣṇuvardhana. Also called Cakrakūṭa and Cakrakoṭṭa it was the old name of the Bastar district, Madhya Pradesh, and was the seat of Chindaka Nāga kings. SII, I.97.

Cakrakūṭa A city in Bastar, Madhya Pradesh, which was conquered by Vijayāditya III, as mentioned in the Eastern Cālukya records.

Cakrataṭini River, same as modern Chākana in Kotah district, Rajasthan mentioned in the Balvan Stone inscription of the time of Cahamāna Haimmīra. Ep. Ind., XIX.45-47.

Cakratīrtha Name of holy places in Āmalakagrāma (q.v.), Cakradhara (q.v.), Dvārakā (q.v.) and Mathurā (q.v.) and on the Godāvarī and the Sarasvatī. Varāha, CXXXVII.19, CLXII.43; Vāmana, XLII.5, LVII.89, LXXXI.3; Brahma, LXXXVI, I.CIX.1, CXXXIV.1.

Cakṣu A river, same as the Vaṃkṣu or the Oxus, mentioned in the Puranic lists of rivers. In the Purāṇas it is mentioned as a branch of the Gaṅgā. Matsya, CXXI.23; Vāyu, XLVII.21; Brahmāṇḍa II, 16.20; Bhāgavata, V.17.5.

Cālikā A village near Jantugāma under the mountain Calikapabbata on the river Kimikāla where the Buddha spent his eighteenth and nineteenth rainy seasons. Aṅguttara, IV.354; Buddhavaṃsa A, 3.

Calliena Same as Kalyāṇa (19°14' N, 73°10' E) on the western coast of India, now represented by the city of the same name in the suburbs of Bombay mentioned in the Periplus which says that the city of Calliena in the time of the elder Saraganus became a lawful market town, but when it came to the possession of Sandanes the port was much obstructed, and Greek ships landing there were often taken to Baryagaza (q.v.) under guard.

Calingae Same as the Kaliṅgas (q.v.). According to Pliny the Calingae people lived on the sea-shore and their capital was Parthalis. This indicates that for some time the territory of the Kaliṅgas included the neighbouring country of the Aśmakas and that in such a case Parthalis might have been the same as Potali.

Campā The capital of Aṅga (q.v.), which stood at the confluence of the river of the same name (Jāt., 506) and the Ganges (Mbh., III.84.163, III.307.26; Watters, II.181; Dasakc, II.2.). There still exist near Bhagalpur two villages, Campānagara and Campāpura which most probably represent the actual site of the ancient capital. It is stated in Mbh., XII.5.6-7; XIII.42.16; Harivaṃśa, XXXI.49; Matsya, XLVIII.97 and Vāyu, XCIX.105-06 that the ancient name of Campā was Mālinī. The Mahājanaka Jātaka (No. 539, Fausboll VI 34ff) informs that Campā was sixty leagues from Mithilā and that traders sailed from it to Suvarṇabhūmī in the Trans-Gangetic region. Hindu emigrants to Southern Annam and Cochin-China, the region around modern Vietnam, had named their settlement after this famous Indian city.

Campā Ancient name of a country comprising parts of modern Laos and Vietnam. The name was evidently adopted from the Indian Campā which was the capital of Aṅga. Its ancient districts were Amarāvati (modern Dong-duong), Vijaya and Pāṇḍuraṅga. After the Kambuja occupation Campā was divided into two parts, the northern having its capital at Vijaya and the southern at Rājapura (in Panrān).

Campā Hill state, modern Chamba, which lies between Kishtwar to the south-east of Pir Pantsal range and Kangra, the ancient Trigarta. RT, VII.218, 588, 1512.

Campā Capital of the Gauḍas according to the Anargharāghava of Murari (JASB, 1908, 279) composed about the latter half of the eighth century AD. It was probably identical with Campanagari in the sarkar of Madaran mentioned in the Ain which stood on the left bank of the Damodar, north-west of the city of Burdwan in West Bengal.

Campā A name of Kāvrippūmpaṭṭinam (q.v.) which was also known by other names like Kakandi and Puhār. These names occur in early Tamil literature.

Campakāraṇya, Campāraṇya Modern Champaran in Bihar. It is said that Valmiki's hermitage was in Sangrampur in this district. It is mentioned in the Bheraghat stone inscription of Alhanadevī. Mbh., III.84.133; Padma, I.38.49 and Ep. Ind., II.11.

Camara Probably same as Kāveripattana, near modern Karikal (10°55' N, 79°52' E), mentioned in the Periplus, sec. 60.

Camasa, Camasodbheda The place where the river Sarasvatī appears again after disappearing in the desert. Mbh., III.82-112; III.88.20, III.130.5, IX.35.87 and Padma, I.25.18.

Camatkārapura Same as Devikoṭṭa, a locality mentioned in the Kalpā-drukośa. It appears to be same as Ānandapura in Ahmedabad district. Skanda, VI.1-3.

Cañcalā River rising from the Ṛkṣavat. Matsya, CXIV.26.

Candagada Viṣaya An administrative division mentioned in the Nesari copper plate of Rāṣṭrakūṭa Govinda. It has been identified with modern Chandagad-peta of the Belgaum district, Karnataka. SMHD., I.15.

Candaka Mountain near Mahimsaka kingdom according to the Buddhist texts. It is the Malaya-giri or Malabar ghats.

Candanādrī Identified with the Malaya (q.v.) range in the Trikāṇḍaśeṣa.

Candanapurī Modern Chandanpuri, a small town on the Girnā river, three miles to the south-west of Malegaum, about forty-five miles to the north-west of Ellora (20°02' N, 75°13' E). Ep. Ind., XXV.29.

Candanāpurī Jain site now represented by Chandanpuri, situated about two miles south of Malegaon in the Nasik district, Maharashtra. It was the site of Amoghavasati named after the Rāṣṭrakūṭa king Amoghavarṣa. Ep. Ind., XXXVIII.5-22.

Candaura Modern Chandavar in the Honavar Taluka (14°17' N, 74°29' E) of the North Kanara district. Ep. Ind., XXVII.160.

Candavāra Modern Chandawar near Etawa in Uttar Pradesh mentioned in the epigraphs from the eighth to the twelfth century AD as a centre of Brahmanical migrations. IB, 151.

Caṇḍavura Modern Chandur, eight miles south by south-east of Alta, Kolhapur (16°42' N, 74°16' E) Alta CP, Ind. Ant., VII.211.

Candra River, modern Bandi which in its lower course is known as Luni, JRAS., 1913, 724.

Candrabhāgā River, same as the Asiknī (q.v.) of the RV. It is modern Chenab which rises in Lahul in the Himalayas, runs through Kashmir and the Punjab and joins first the Jhelum and then the Ravi.

Candradvīpa A territory ruled over by Trailokyacandra (10th-11th century AD) mentioned in the Rampal copper plate inscription. The famous Tārā image of Candradvīpa is illustrated in a manuscript dated AD 1015. In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries it was the name of a small principality in the district of Bakarganj in Bangladesh of which the capital was at first at Kachua and subsequently removed to Madhavpasa. It is identified with the pargana of Bagla (Bakla) in the sarkar of the same name mentioned in the Ain, II.123, 134.

Candragiri A hill in Śravaṇa Belgola in Hassan district, Karnataka, celebrated in Jain tradition.

Candragrāma Village in Dakṣiṇa Tosala mentioned in the Sōmavamṣī records. It has been identified with modern Chandgan, about thirty-two miles from Cuttack (20°28' N, 85°54' E).

Candrāha The river Candrabhāgā or Chenab as mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī.

Candrapura A city mentioned in the Siroda copper plate of Devaraja, a Bhoja king of Western Deccan. It has been identified with modern Chandor in Goa. Ep. Ind., XXIV.143 ff., XXVI.337 ff.

Candrapura Birthplace of the eighth Jain Tīrthamkara Candraprabha which has been identified with Candravati, a modern village near Kāśī.

Candrapuras Inhabitants of the city of Candrapura in the eastern division mentioned in BrS, XIV.5. A town named Candrapura is mentioned in the Indore grant of Skandagupta. CII, III.71.

Candrapurī An administrative division mentioned in the Tezpur grant of Vanamāla (KS, 54 ff) as lying to the west of Trisrotā or Tista, and in the Dhobi and Nidhanpur plates of Bhāskara as situated on the dried river Kauśika or Kusiara. On the basis of the former evidence some scholars want to locate it in Pundravardhana, and on that of the latter others identify it with Chandpur in the Sylhet region.

Candrārdhamaulī 'City of Śiva' mentioned in the Pavanadūta, 27 ff. which apparently refers to Trivenī in Hooghly district, West Bengal.

Candravalli Archaeological site, situated at a distance of forty-five miles from Brahmagiri (q.v.). The report of excavations at this place was published by M.H. Krishna in 1929.

Candrāvati A city (now pronounced as Chandrauti) on the Ganges in the Pargana of Katehir in the Benaras district, Uttar Pradesh, mentioned in the Gāhaḍavāla records. Ep. Ind., XIV.192.

Candrikā Name of the river Candrabhāgā. Matsya., XXII.63.

Canganād Territory of the Cangāḷvas which lay in the Arkalgud Taluka of Karnataka and also comprised the Yeḷusāvīra country in Northern Coorg.

Caṅgura Modern Sangur in the Haveri Taluka of the Dharwar district on the river Varada, mentioned in the Yādava records as belonging to Basavur Viṣaya. Ep. Ind., XXIII.194.

Caṅkuṇavihāra A monastery built by Caṅkuṇa, the Tikhāra minister of Lalitāditya, which was situated in the north-eastern corner of Paraspur plateau in Kashmir. He also built another monastery in Pravarapura. RT, IV.211, 215.

Carmakhaṇḍika People of Samarkand (in Uzbekistan Republic, USSR) mentioned in the Puranic lists of Janapadas as belonging to the Udīcya region.

Carmmāṅka A principality near Nagpur ruled by the Vākātakas.

Carmanvatī Sanskritized name of the river Chambal. Its other name, according to the Abhidhānacintāmaṇi was Rantī-nadī. The word Carmanvatī occurs in Pāṇini, VII.2.12. In Mbh., VII.67.5, it is stated that the name is due to the heaps of the hides of animals killed in Rantideva's sacrifice. In Mbh., I.138.74, it is stated that Drupada ruled over Southern Pañcāla up to Carmanvatī.

Caspapyrus, Caspatyrus Capital of the Gandarii mentioned by Hecataeus. Herodotus (III.102) locates it in the land of the Pactyice (q.v.) or Pactians wherefrom Scylax and his companions set out on their exploring voyage. Caspapyrus phonetically sounds like Kaśyapapura, which might have been a source-name of the state, later came to be known as Kashmir. Stein, however, does not subscribe to this view.

Cāṭigrama The Caṭṭagrāma or Chittagong division of Bangladesh.

Caṭṭala The Caṭṭagrāma or Chittagong division of Bangladesh described in the early mediaeval literature as one of the five Bengals, others being Rāḍhā, Varendra, Vaṅga and Samataṭa.

Catumā A village of the Śākyas which was visited by Buddha. Majjhima, I.456 f.

Cauduar An ancient site containing Brahmanical and Buddhist relics on the northern bank of the Virūpā, a branch of the Mahānadī, at a distance of about four miles from Cuttack, Orissa.

Cavarāpura Modern Chaura, about eleven miles from Kawardha in Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Mandava-mahal inscription found at the same place. ICPB, 174-77.

Cebhaṭikā Modern Chehedī in Nasik. Dhulia CP, Ep. Ind, VIII.175.

Cecaḍiyā Modern Chechli in Bali-Goḍwar region of Marwar or Jodhpur mentioned in the Sevadi stone inscription of the Cāhamānas of Nadol. Ep. Ind., XI.28-30.

Cedi A people mentioned in RV, VIII.5.37-39 whose territory in the Vedic age lay between the Yamunā and the Vindhya. Their territory subsequently came to be regarded as one of the sixteen Mahājanapadas (Aṅguttara, I.213, IV.252-60), the area of which roughly corresponded to the eastern part of modern Bundelkhand and some adjoining tracts. Pargiter (JASB, 1895, 253) places the country of the Cedis along the south bank of the Yamunā from the Chambal on the north-west as far as Karwar on the south-east. Its limits southwards may have been, according to him, the plateau of Malwa and the hills of Bundelkhand. Eventually the southern frontier of the Cedi country extended to the banks of the Narmadā (Konow, Karpūramāñjarī, 182 and Ep. Ind., IV.280). According to the Cetiva Jātaka (no. 422) the metropolis of the Cedis was Sotthivatinagara. The Mbh., III.20.50, XIV.83.2, gives its Sanskrit name Śuktimati or Śuktisāhvaya. It mentions also a river called Śuktimati which flowed by the capital of Cedi-viṣaya (I.63.35). Pargiter (loc-cit) identifies the stream with the Ken and places the city of Śuktimati in the neighbourhood of Banda. Other towns were Sahajati and Tripuri. The former lay on the trade route along the river Ganges while the latter was near Jabalpur.

Celluru A village, same as Chellur in the Cocanada tāluka of the Godavari district, Andhra Pradesh, mentioned in the Eastern Cālukya records. SII., I.50-52.

Cemetery 'H' A post-Harappan cemetery at Harappa (30°35' N, 72°58' E) having two successive levels. The earlier and lower groups of burials, called Stratum II, is characterised generally by full inhumations, accompanied by ample grave goods, while the later or second group of burials in large pots without any grave goods. The pottery from both the phases share common features, but the designs and motifs are entirely different from those met with in the Harappan ceramics. Wheeler suggested that the cemetery 'H' peoples were Aryans. But the extremely limited distribution of the remains and the general absence of the Cemetery 'H' ceramics from the pottery of later periods go against this hypothesis. "Besides, the presence of an intervening debris layer 3 to 4 feet deep in the habitation area and 5 to 7 feet in the Cemetery 'H' area poses a chronological gap between the decline of Harappa and the arrival on the scene of the Cemetery 'H' folks." Banerjee 86, Wheeler in AI, III 58-130 and Lal in AI, IX, 87-89.

Cemulya A Deśa or province, belonging to the Uttarāda Viśaya mentioned in the Patoda copper plate of the time of the Cālukyas of Badami. Uttarāda Viśaya is not traceable. Cemulya is, however, the modern Chaul in the Kolaba district, Maharashtra. This Deśa must have been formed of some large region surrounding modern Chaul. Ind. Ant., XL.1911, 240.

Cera People of unknown identity mentioned in the Ait. Ār., II.1.1, as speakers of unintelligible language. Perhaps they were the same as the Keralaputra of the Aśokan inscriptions whose territory lay around Kanneti, the Karunagapalli region in central Travancore, with the capital at Vañji near Cochin.

Ceram Modern Charala in the Punganuru taluka (13°25' N, 78°37' E) of Chittoor district, Andhra Pradesh. Ep. Ind., XXV.254.

Cerupūru Modern Chipurupalle (17°30' N, 83°12' E) in the Vizagapatam district, Andhra Pradesh.

Ceta A clan to which the Kalinga king Khāravēla belonged. The Milīndapanho contains a statement which seems to indicate that the Cetas were connected with the Cedis or Cedis (q.v.)

Cevūr A locality mentioned in the Cola records. There are two villages of this name in the North and South Arcot districts of Tamil Nadu. Cevūr is also mentioned as the venue of the Cola-Pāṇḍya war which probably lay to the south of the Sevali hills. SII., I.112.

Chanchu A small state situated near the Ganges which was visited by Hiuen-Tsang. It was probably the same as the Ālavaka (q.v.) country mentioned in the Buddhist and Jain texts. Cunningham and Smith identify it with the Ghazipur region. Watters, II.61, 340.

Chandiman A village near Rājagṛha situated on the old road from Silao to Giriyeḅ where archaeological excavations have brought out a number of Buddhist images. ASIAR., 1911-12, 161 ff.

Chandoli Chalcolithic site on the Ghod river in the Poona district, Maharashtra. Here evidence of postholes, hydraulic line flooring and hearths has been discovered. Microliths comprising parallel-sided pen-knife blades, trapezes, luntates and triangles and also huge querns, anvils, mace heads of stone have been found. Among copper articles chisels, celts, ornaments, daggers, etc., have been reported.

Chanbudaro See under Harappan sites, Jhukar and Jhangar.

Chan-Po Chinese name of Campā (q.v.) mentioned by Hiuen-Tsang.

Chaperkai Hills Cairn-burial site in the Zhob valley, North Baluchistan, about 110 km south of Moghul Ghundai. A number of cairns scattered over the hills have been discovered and only three of them have been excavated. These contain remains of human bones and fragments of coarse and brittle whitish earthen ware.

Cha-Puo-Ho-Lo Chinese name of Davāka (q.v.)

Chatravati Ahicchatra, modern Ramnagar near Anola in the Bareilly district, Uttar Pradesh. Mbh., I.138.73-74.

Chauddadampur Site of the Muktesvara temple on the eastern boundary of the Dharwar district, Karnataka. The temple exhibits Calukyan style.

Cheh-Ka Takka country in the Punjab region mentioned by Hiuen-Tsang.

Chejrala Buddhist centre in the Narasraopat Taluk (16°26' N, 81°45' E) Guntur district, Andhra Pradesh, where remains of many stūpas as well as marble slabs bearing inscriptions have been discovered.

Chepan Middle Palaeolithic site on the Son, district Mirzapur, Uttar Pradesh.

Chersonesus Karwar in the western coast mentioned in the Periplus, 53.

Cherupura Modern Chipuru palle (17°30' N, 83°12' E), chief town of the Taluk of the same name in Vizagapatam district, mentioned in the Eastern Cālukya records.

Chikdūr Same as Chiklodar Mata's Hill, seventeen miles north of Palanpur (24°12' N, 72°28' E) in Gujarat. Elliot, IV.180.

Chinna-Ganjam A Buddhist centre in Guntur district, Andhra Pradesh.

Chirand A site in the Saran district, Bihar, about 8 km east of Chapra near the confluence of the Ghagra and the Ganges, which has unfolded a long archaeological sequence. Neolithic features are characterised by artefacts of the lithic blade industry, bone and antler tools and pecked and ground stone tools. The chalcolithic stage is distinguished by the predominant occurrence of white painted black-and-red ware and a restricted use of copper. Period IB marks the advent of iron and period II by the beginning of the NBP.

Chirki-Nevasa Lower Palaeolithic site, about two miles downstream of Nevasa, on the right bank of the Pravara, district Ahmednagar, Maharashtra.

Chouangmi, Shuang-Mi Chitral, South of Wakham (between the Hindukush and the Pamirs) and the Hindukush, one of the five principalities of the Yueh-chis.

Chu-Li-Ye Chinese name of Coliya, the Telugus-Coḍa country in the Kurnool-Cuddapa region, mentioned by Hiuen-Tsang.

Cidāmbaram A town (11°24' N, 79°44' E) in South Arcot district, noted for temples, situated between the Velar on the north, the Bay of Bengal on the east, the Coleroon on the south and the Viranam tank in the west. It was a subsidiary capital of the Colas. The Debi Bh., VIII.38 mentions it as Cidambalam.

Cinadeśa One of the 56 countries mentioned in the Saktisaṅgama as lying to the southeast of Mānaseśa or Mānasa-sarovara (lake). The land thus indicates Tibet. According to Pargiter (MP, 319n). Cina comprised the country of Tibet along the whole range of the Himalayas. The Cinas are sometimes linked in the Mbh III.177.12, V.19, 15, VI.9.66 with the Kāmbojas of the northwest, and often mentioned among the retinue of the king of Prāgjyotiṣa or Assam in the east are also sometimes placed near the source of the Ganges in the country lying midway between the two regions. SGAMI, 103-04.

Ciñcapallikā A village in the Ankiṣṭhbhoga (q.v.) mentioned in the Malhara charter of Ādityarāja and in the Kothuraka grant of Pravarasena II. It is either Chicholi on the right bank of the river Wunna, or Chinchola Khurd or Chincholi Burruk in the Akola district. JIH LIV.3, 11, 12, Ep. Ind., XXVI.160, CII, III.145.

Ciñcātalāi Probably same as Cinceli of the Sheorinarayan inscription of Jājalladeva II (K.E.919), it is modern Cicola (22°10' N, 32°39' E) in the Janjgir Tahsil of the Bilaspur district, mentioned in the Sarkho plates of Ratnadeva II (K.E.880), CII, IV.425, 521.

Cikhalāda Viṣaya Region on the western part of the Kolaba district which also included a part of Bombay. In the records of the Śīlāhāras of North Koṅkan this area is placed in the Puri-Koṅkana Maṇḍala or Deśa (q.v.).

Cikhali Modern Chiki, twenty-one miles north of Kankar in the Bastar district, mentioned in the Tahankapar plate of Pamparajadeva (K.E. 965). CII, IV.597.

Cikkhalika Chikhali in the Amraoti district mentioned in the Malhara plates of Ādityarāja. JIH, LIV.3, 11, 12.

Cikkambari A village in the Chanda district, Maharashtra, mentioned in the Deotek record of Rudrasena of the fourth century AD. ARIE, 1947-48, 3.

Cina A people in the north-east division mentioned in BrS, V.77, 78, 80, X.7, 11, XI.61, XIV.30, XVI.1, 38. The Cinas are also mentioned in the Nagarjunikonda inscription of the Ikṣvāku king Virapurusaḍatta. They may be placed in the Himalayas beyond Cilata or Kirāta.

Ciñcavāta A village in Alaktaka Viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in a Kolhapur copper plate of S.882. It is modern Chinchavad in Kolhapur (16°42' N, 74°16' E), Maharashtra. JBBRAS, X.21.

Ciñcunike-70 The region surrounding Chinchani in the Belgaum district, Karnataka. It is mentioned in the Yādava records as situated in the Venugrāma Viṣaya (q.v.).

Ciprarulaṅga Viṣaya An administrative division in the Maharashtra region mentioned in the Naravan copper plate of the time of the Cālukyas of Badami. Ciprarulaṅga, modern Chiplun in the Ratnagiri district, seems to be the headquarters of this Viṣaya. QBISM, X, 12.

Cipunana Viṣaya Modern Chiplun in the Ratnagiri district, Maharashtra. In the records of the Śilāhāras of North Koṅkan it is mentioned as a part of Purī-Koṅkaṇa Maṇḍala or Deśa. (q.v.).

Cirakupa Modern Chirwa about ten miles north of Udaipur (27°42' N, 75°35' E) and two miles east of Nagoda in Rajasthan mentioned in the records of the Guhilaputras. WZKM, XXI.142-62.

Ciramocana Holy place in Kashmir at the confluence of the Kaṇakavāhini and the Indus. RT., I.149-50.

Cirāpalli Ancient name of Trichinopoly (10°50' N, 78°46' E), Tamil Nadu. ARSIE, 1937-38, 78.

Cirrhadae Same as Kirāta, a people living beyond Dosarene (q.v.) mentioned in Periplus, 62.

Cirupucil A village near Cettannavacal in the Pudukkottai division of Tiruchirapalli district mentioned in the Cettannavacal Brahmi inscription. AO XXXIV.185.

Citābhūmi Vaidyanātha or Deoghar in the Santal Parganas, Bihar, Śiva P, I.38.55.

Citrakūṭa Same as Chitor in Rajasthan. Also there is a holy place of the same name on the Mandākinī in Central India where Rāma is said to have lived for a short time during his banishment. This Citrakūṭa may be the same as is placed in the southern division in the BrS, XIV.13.

Citrakūṭa A hill in the southern division mentioned in the BrS, XIV.13, XVI.17. It is modern Chitrakot or Chatarkot hill or district, near Kampta in Bundelkhand. The name occurs in the Sirur inscription of AD 866. Ind. Ant., XII.218; Mbh., III.85.58; Rām, II.54.28-29, II.55.9, II.56.10-12, II.93.8 (about twenty miles from the hermitage of Bharadvāja); Matsya, XXII.65, VI.33-36 (near Mandākinī river); Padma, I.39-54 and Raghuvaṃśa, XIII.47.

Citrakūṭā River rising from the Ṛkṣaparvata. Vāyu, XLV.99 and Matsya, CXIV.25.

Citrotpalā A tributary of the Mahānadī or part of it below its junction with the Pyri mentioned in the Pūranic lists of rivers as rising from the Ṛkṣavat range (Mbh., VI.9.34; Matsya, CXIV.25 and Brahma, XXVII.31-32). In Brahma, XLVI.4-5, it is described as rising from the Vindyas and identified with the Mahānadī itself.

Cleisobora City of the Souraseni (q.v.) mentioned by the Greek writers.

Codanavatthu A valley near Rājagṛha visited by the Buddha. Vinaya, I.115 f.

Cola People mentioned in the inscriptions of Aśoka whose territory, drained by the river Kāverī, originally comprised the districts of Trichinopoly and Tanjore. The Cola capital was Uraiyr (Uragapura) or Old Trichinopoly. The principal port was at Kāviriṭṭinam or Pugār on the northern bank of the Kāverī. Eventually the Colas became the greatest power in South India and their empire comprised not only the whole of South India including the eastern portion of the Deccan and the coastal region up to Bengal, but also portions of the Malaya peninsula and Indonesia.

Colchi Modern Kolkoj near Tutikorin (8°48' N, 78°11' E), Tamil Nadu, mentioned in the Periplus, 59, which was famous for pearl-fisheries.

Comari Same as Cape Comorin (8°05' N, 77°30' E) mentioned in the Periplus, 58. It was a harbour and also a place of pilgrimage, named after a Virgin goddess.

Cophen Same as the Kabul river mentioned by Arrian (Anab., IV.22.6.).

Cottonara A district in Malabar, where pepper was produced in abundance, mentioned in Periplus, 56.

Cukṣa Modern Chach in the north of the Attock district mentioned in the Taxila Silver Vase inscription of Jhonika. It was a stronghold of the Śaka power in India in the first century AD. Ep. Ind., IV.54, CII. II.25-28.

Curni A river mentioned in the Arthashastra. It was the same as the Periyar on the banks of which stood the city of Vañji, the supposed capital of the Ceras (q.v.) or Keralaputras (q.v.) of Aśokan inscriptions, and at the mouth the sea-port of Muziris (Krangnore).

D

Dabarkot Chalcolithic site in the Loralai valley, Baluchistan. It was probably one of the earliest known sites in Baluchistan. During the Harappan period it was fortified as one of the northernmost frontier outposts. The place seems to have been under occupation for at least five hundred years, ending round about 1700 BC.

Dabhālā, Dahālā Territory around Jabalpur, (23°10' N, 79°59' E), Cedi of later times, regarded as a Deśa or country in the Gupta inscriptions. It included the Tripurī viṣaya (q.v.). In the latter part of the fifth and early part of the sixth century AD the Dabhālā country was governed by the Parivrājaka Mahārājas as feudatories of the Guptas. CII, III.114 and Ep. Ind., VIII.284-87.

Dachinabades, Dakhinabades Same as Dakṣiṇāpatha (q.v.) mentioned in Periplus 50 as extending from Barygaza (Broach) in a straight line from north to south. Important market towns of it were Paethana (Pratiṣṭhāna, modern Paithan in the Aurangabad district), Tagara (modern Ter in Osmanabad district), Suppara and Calliena (Sopara and Kalyana in the Thana district), Semylla (modern Chaul to the south of Bombay). Mandgora (Bankot on the mouth of Savitri), Palaepatmae (modern Dabhoi), Melizigara (Jaygarh or Rajapur in the Ratnagiri coast), Byzantium (Vizadorg), Togarum (Deogarh) and Turannoboas (Malvan).

Daddarapura A city, apparently in the Himalayan region, said to have been founded by Cedī Upacara in the C'etiya Jātaka (no. 422).

Dadhabhūmi Dhalbhum in the Singhbhum district, Bihar, which was visited by Lord Mahāvīra.

Dadigamaṇḍala, Dadigavāḍī A territorial unit now represented probably by Taḍigaipādi in Karnataka. Ind., Ant., XXX.109 ff and SII, II.3.

Dāhala-Maṇḍala Situated between the Narmadā and Bhāgīrathī it was the country round the modern town of Jabalpur (23°10' N, 79°59' E).

Dāhanukā River near Dāhānu (19°58' N, 72°45' E) in the Thana district, Maharashtra.

Dabūk Also known as Rahuk, it was a dependency of al-Manṣurāh on the borders of Makran, Elliot, I.38.

Dahmāla The capital of Jālandhar according to Al-Bīrūnī.

Dahraka-Veṅguḷi Modern Chikka-Bengali in the North Kanara district mentioned in the Gudnapur inscription of Kadamba Ravivarman Śrī-kaṇṭhikā 63-64.

Daibul Port and city on the Makran coast, below Karachi which lay in the country of as-Sind (q.v.). Some scholars place it near modern Tatta (24°44' N, 67°58' E) on the left bank of the main Indus channel. A Gulf of Daibul is also mentioned by the Arab writers.

Daimabad Chalcolithic site, fifteen miles<sup>2</sup> from Nevasa in the Pravara (a tributary of the Godavari) valley, Ahmadnagar (district, Maharashtra). Here Phase I is marked by a thick coarse grey ware, parallel-sided blades of chalcedony and terracotta and semi-precious stone beads, Phase II by black-on-red pottery, terracotta, microliths, fragmentary copper celt, pin-head and knife, and Phase III by Jorwe ware, microliths, stone mace heads, spindle whorls of pottery and terracotta figurines. Burials are found in all the three phases.

Diavahā Apparently modern Dehoa, another name of the river Gogra, mentioned in a Bengal Asiatic Society's grant of Gāhaḍavāla Jayacandra. Ep. Ind., VIII.150.

Daivāvṛdha A clan of the Sātvatas (q.v.) Viṣṇu, IV.13, 1 and Vāyu, XCVI.1-2.

Dakkhiṇagiri A district situated beyond the southern hills which encircled the city of Rājagrha where the famous Dakkhiṇagiri Vihāra was situated. Vinaya, I.287; Suttani, 12 ff. and Samyutta, I.172-73.

Dakṣiṇācala A name of the Malaya mountain according to Hemacandra's Abhidhānacintāmaṇi.

Dakṣiṇa-Gaṅgā Name attributed to the southern rivers—Godāvarī, Narmadā and Tuṅgabhadrā. Brahma, LXXVII.9-10, LXXVIII.77; Skanda, Reva IV.24 and Vikramāṅkadevacarita, IV.62.

Dakṣiṇa Jhārakaṇḍa Same as modern Ganjam district mentioned in the Kendupatna copper plate of Narasiṃha II. It was probably the Mahākāntāra mentioned in Samudragupta's Allahabad inscription.

Dakṣiṇa Kosala Literally 'South Kosala' which comprised the present Raipur-Bilaspur-Sambalpur region of Madhya Pradesh and Orissa. A king named Mahendragiri ruled in South Kosala about the middle of the fourth century when Samudragupta led an expedition against the kings of Dakṣiṇāpatha. Later it became the political centre of the Pāṇḍuvamśī and Somavamśī kings.

Dakṣiṇakula Country mentioned in the Assam inscriptions as lying to the south of the Brahmaputra.

Dakṣiṇa Mathurā Same as Madurai (9°58' N, 78°10' E) which was originally the Pāṇḍya capital, named after the famous city of Mathurā in the Surasena country. It was the Modoura which Ptolemy, VII.1.89, described as the royal city of Pandion (Pāṇḍya). Bhāgavata, X.79.15 describes it as a holy place.

Dakṣiṇa-Pañcanada Name of the five rivers—Kṛṣṇā, Venā, Tungā, Bhadrā and Koṣā. Viṣṇu DS, LXXXV.51.

Dakṣiṇāpatha, Dākṣiṇātya Literally, 'the road to the south'. As a designation of the Deccan the term Dakṣiṇāpatha occurs in the Baudh. D.S., I.1.2.13 and Baudh. G.S., V.13, coupled with Surāṣṭra. The expression Dakṣiṇāpadā occurs in RV, X.61.8, which refers to the region where the exile goes being turned out. Dākṣiṇātya is found in Pāṇini, IV.2.98. Dakṣiṇāpatha in early Pali literature is sometimes coupled with Avantī (Mālava) and is placed on the banks of the upper Godāvarī. In the Nalopākhyāna of the Mbh. it is placed beyond Avantī and the Vindhya and to the south of the Vaidarbhas and the (southern) Kosalas while in the Digvijayaparvan of the same epic it is distinguished from the Pāṇḍyan realm. In the Gupta age it certainly stretched from the land of the Kosalas to the kingdom of Kāñci. In later times it embraced the whole of Trans-Vindhyan India from the Setu (Adam's Bridge) to the Narmadā. In the Periplus Dachinabades (q.v.) or Dakṣiṇāpatha is spoken of in terms of modern Deccan and is distinguished from Damirica (q.v.) or Tamil-land.

Dakṣiṇa-Prayāga Trivenī in the Hooghly district, West Bengal, known as Mokṣa-venī, as mentioned in the Tirthaprakāśa, 355.

Dakṣiṇa Rādhā Southern part of the Rādhā country mentioned in the Gaonri plates of Vākpati Muñja (Ep. Ind., XXIII.105) and the Nyāyakan-dall JASB, 1912, 341). It figures in Cola records of 1023-25 as Takkaṇa-lāḍam. It included Bhuriśreṣṭhi (q.v.) or modern Bhursut and Navagrāma in the Howrah and Hooghly districts, as well as Dāmuniyā to the west of Damodar in the Burdwan district. It embraced considerable portions of West Bengal lying between the Ajaya and Damodar rivers. The southern boundary may have reached the Rupnarayan and the western boundary may have extended beyond the Damodar, far into the Arambagh subdivision.

Dakṣiṇa-Sindhu A tributary of the Chambal. Mbh., V.82.53; Padma, I.24.2; Meghadūta. I.30.

Dakṣiṇa Tosali Country mentioned in the Patiakella grant of Śivarāja dated in G.E.283. It comprised parts of the Ganjam and Puri districts of Orissa (Ep. Ind., IX.287). In the records of the Kara kings the Kongoda-maṇḍala is described as belonging to Dakṣiṇa Tosali.

Dālbhya People mentioned in RV, V.61. They settled on the banks of the Gomatī and were closely associated with the Keśins (q.v.).

Dalvanur Site of Pallava cave temple architecture in South Arcot district, Tamil Nadu.

Dāmalīpta A port, same as Tāmralīpta near Tamluk in Midnapur district, West Bengal. The Daśakumāracarita, vi. includes it in the Sumha (q.v.) country which is however contradicted by the evidence of the Mbh. According to Jain Prajñāpanā it formed a part of the Vaṅga country. It is the Tamalites of Ptolemy. In the days of Hiuen-Tsang it lay over 900 li, i.e. about 150 miles, from Samataṭa and was about 1,400 li (about 233 miles) in circuit. The land was low and moist forming a bay where land and water communication met.

Damana River, same as Dāmangaṅgā near Daman.

Damba Koh A cairn burial site in the Makran coast, South Baluchistan, about 65 km westward of the famous Harappan sea-port of Sutkagendor.

Dambal Site of the temple of Dodda Basappa (Vasavanna) in Dharwar district, Karnataka.

Damirīca, Damirike Same as Draviḍa or Tamilaka, i.e. the Tamil-land mentioned in the Periplus, 53 ff. It comprised market towns like Tyndis (modern Ponnai), Muziris (modern Cranganore), both in the kingdom of Cerobothra (Keralaputra), and Nelcynda (near modern Kottayam) in the Pāṇḍyan kingdom, besides Naura (modern Cannanore), Bacare (Porakad near Aleppey) and others. Ptolemy mentioned this region as Limyrike.

Damodaranāga A spring in Kashmir which was the upper hamlet of the village Khunamoh (Khonamuṣa), the birth place of the poet Bilhana. Stein's Memoirs, 166.

Dānak Same as the plains of Konkon as recorded by 'Al-Bīrūnī.

Daṇḍa-Bhukti A maṇḍala or district of Vardhamāna-bhukti (q.v.) mentioned in the Irdā inscription as well as in the Rāmacarita. It is doubtless identical with Taṇḍabutti referred to in the Cola inscriptions of AD 1023-25. Daṇḍabhukti has been identified with the marchland between Orissa and Bengal corresponding to the southern and southwestern part of the Midnapur district of West Bengal. The name is said to survive in modern Dantan not far from the river Survarṇarekhā.

Daṇḍaka Same as modern Daṇḍakārṇaya region, the capital of which was Kumbhāvātī according to the Sarabhaṅga Jātaka (no. 522), Madhumanta according to the Rām., VII.52.18 and Govardhana (Nasik) according to the Mahāvastu (Senart, 363). The Daṇḍaka forest lay between the Narmadā and the Godāvarī. It seems to have stretched from Bastar along the banks of the Godāvarī to the Daulatabad area, and part of Nasik district, as the epics suggest. Mbh., III.85.41, III.147.32; Varāha LXXI.10; Brahma, LXXXVIII.18, CX.96, CXXIII.117-20; Vāmana LXXXIV.12; JRAS, 1894, 242 and JBBRAS, 1917, 14-15.

Daṇḍakappaka A township in Kosala near the river Aciravatī. Āṅguttara, III.402 ff.

Daṇḍāṅkiyoka A village to be located somewhere between Cuttack and Balasore mentioned as belonging within Vubhyudaya-viṣaya (q.v.), Uttara-

Tosali (q.v.), in the Neulpur grant of the Kara king Subhākara of Orissa. Ep. Ind., XV. 1-8.

Dāṇḍora The former Sarguja state in Madhya Pradesh mentioned in the Rajim stone inscription of Prthvīdeva II (K.E. 896), CII IV. 450 ff.

Dantapura Capital of Kalinga which has been identified with Rajamendri (Rajahmundry) on the Godāvarī. It is probably same as Dantakura of Mbh., V.48.76 and Dandagula of Pliny. The name probably survives in that of the fort of Dantavakra near Srikakulam (18°17' N, 83°57' E) in Andhra Pradesh (Ep. Ind. XIV.361). It was probably the Paloura of Ptolemy, and the Palura of the Nagarjunikonda inscriptions. The Jirjingi plates of Gaṅga Indravarman give a description of this city (Ep. Ind., XXV.285). Dantapura is frequently mentioned in the Buddhist and Jain texts. Dīgha, II.235; Mahāvastu, III.361; Jāt, II.367, 371, 381, III.376, IV.230-232, 236 and Āva. Nir 1275.

Darada A people wrongly placed by the BṛS, XIV.29, in the north-eastern division. They were the inhabitants of modern Dardistan, in the Upper Kishenganga valley in Kashmir on the Upper Indus. They are mentioned in the Mbh., VI.9.67, Mārkaṇḍeya LVII, and other works. Ptolemy, VII.1.42, mentions them as Daradrai. A route starting from the north of Mahapadma (Wular lake) crossed the northern Kijnag range at Gurais (34°38' N, 74°56' E) on the Kishenganga which is probably to be identified with Daratpur or Daratpuri, the chief town of Darada-deśa. The Daradas are placed in the Uttarāpatha region in the Puranic lists of Janapadas. RT., I.312, V.152, VII.119, VIII.2538.

Dārāsuram Site of the famous Airāvateśvara temple complex in the Tanjore district. Along with all the South Indian features this structure shows development of details in the pillars, mouldings niches and balustrades. An open pillared maṇḍapa in front of the mahāmaṇḍapa shows horses to make it a chariot. There is a series of carvings in bas-relief representing the lives of the famous Śaiva saints. The elephant designs on the balustrades are exquisitely carved. There is also a Devanāyakī Amman shrine within the compound.

Daratpura, Daratpurī Same as Gurais (34°38' N, 74°56' E) on the Kishen Gaṅgā. See under Daradadeśa. RT., VII.912, 915, VIII.1153.

Darbhakakṣa A Viṣaya same as modern Dhakas in Sikar-Shekhawati region of Jaipur (26°55' N, 75°52' E), Rajasthan, mentioned in the Harsa stone inscription of the time of Cāhamāna Vigharāja II. Ep. Ind., II. 116-30, Ind. Ant., 1913, 60.

Dardura A mountain in the southern division mentioned in the BṛS XIV.11. On the basis of the Raghuvamśa, IV.51, it may be identified with the Nilgiri or the Palni hills. Rājaśekhara in Kāvyaṁīmāmsā, XVII, mentions another hill of the same name which is perhaps identical with the Deogarh peak in the eastern part of the Vindhas. Mbh., III.282.43; Mārkaṇḍeya, LIV.12 and Varāha, CCXIV.

Darppapudikā Modern Dapodi, adjacent to Poona. Poona, CP, OBISM VIII.165.

Dārvābhisāra The whole tract of the lower and middle hills laying between the Jhelum and the Chenab. The Abhisāra (q.v.) of the classical writers, described as situated among the mountains above the Taxila country, formed part of it. The Dārva people are mentioned separately in the BrS, XIV.30. The region roughly comprised the Punch and Naoshera regions between the Jhelam and the Chenab. RT., I.180, IV.712, V.141, 209, VII.1282, VIII.1531.

Dāsanarīya River, same as modern Nimurti which flows between Jalajodo and Talagaja in Orissa. It is mentioned in the Patna grant of Maḥāśivagupta Yayāti, Ep. Ind., XI.200.

Daśapura The Mandasor (24°03' N, 75°08' E) region which was under Śaka Nahapāna's political influence as found from the inscriptions of Uṣavadāta. In the Gupta period this area in Western Malwa was regarded as a province of the Gupta empire. It was the capital of a long line of margraves belonging to the Aulikara family who ruled on behalf of the Guptas. About AD 533 it became the centre of power of Yaśodharman who defeated the Hunas, defied the power of the Gupta lords and set up pillars of victory at Mandasore commemorating his conquests.

Daśārha A clan of the Yādavas living in the Ānarta (q.v.) region mentioned in Mbh., III.183.32.

Daśārṇa A people who dwelt on the river 'Dasan (Dhasan) in Bundelkhand (JASB, 1895, 253). Kālidāsa places them in the Vidiśā or Bhilsa region (Meghadūta, 24-25). The Daśārṇas had relation with the Vidarbhas and Cedis (Mbh., III.69.14-15). The Mbh., II.26.4, speaks of the conquest of Daśārṇa by Bhīma. The Daśārṇas were probably divided into two parts, western and eastern. Roughly speaking, the present Bhopal region corresponds with the western and the Chattisgarh district with the eastern Daśārṇa (Dosarene of Periplus).

Daśārṇā River issuing from the Rkṣa range which may be modern Dasan which rises in Bhopal flows past Saugar and falls into the Betwa. Matsya, XXII.34; Kūrma, II.37. 35-36 and Vāyu, XLV.99, LXXII.93.

Dāseraka A republican tribe of Rajasthan. Mbh., VI.50.47. They are mentioned as a people of northern division in BrS, XIV.26.

Dāsilakapalli-Rāṣṭra An administrative division, identical with Deswalia to the north of Narmadā and about fourteen miles south of the Bagh caves mentioned in the Indore records of Bhulunḍa, dated years 38 and 77. CII, III.18 and SIE, II.42 f.

Dattāmitri A city which belonged to the country of Sauvīra (lower Sindhu valley to the east of the river). Inhabitants of this city which seems to have been found in the vicinity of the ancient Paṭala, capital of Patalene (q.v.), near modern Brahmanabad, are often referred to in Indian literary and epigraphic texts as Dāttāmitriyaka.

Dattavaḍā Modern Dantewara, about 46 miles from Jagdalpur in the Bastar district mentioned in the Dantewara Telugu inscription of S.948. ICPB, 165.

Dattawadi Lower Palaeolithic site on the Mutha river at Poona.

Davāka An eastern territory which was probably situated in the Nowgong district of Assam. It was subjugated by Samudragupta as recorded in his Allahabad inscription. Attempts have been made to identify it with the districts of northern Bengal, the Dekaka or Dacca region, the Kopili valley in Middle Assam and so on.

Dāvanapalli Modern Danoli, 12 miles northeast of Kolhapur mentioned in the spurious Alta copper plate of Pulkeṣi. Ind. Ant., VII.211.

Dawāla The older form of Dāhala which seems to be represented by the Southern Bundelkhand, the region around Jabalpur (23°10' N, 79°59' E). It is mentioned in the Khoh copper plate inscription of Saṅkhola.

Dāvanavalli Modern Danoli, eight miles north-east of Alta, Kolhapur (16°42' N, 74°16' E) Alta CP, Ind. Ant., VI.211.

Daviḷagrāma A village in the Samagiri Viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Bopagaon copper plate of Cālukya Vijayāditya. It is modern Divale, three miles north of Nigoda (q.v.) and four miles south east of Purandar in Poona district, Maharashtra QBISM, IX.2.2.

Degamve Modern Degaon ten miles east of Halsi in the Belgaum district mentioned in the Kalyāṇī Cālukya records. Degaon ins. JBBRAS, IX.260.

Dehalikā Holy resort of the goddess Ambā, possibly modern Delhi. SP, 83.

Dekaka Ancient name of Dacca (23°43' N, 90°26' E), Bangladesh.

Demetriaspolis A city in Arachosia (q.v.) mentioned by Isidor of Charax. It was named after the Bactrian king Demetrius.

Deṅgutta A locality near Mrohaung in the vicinity of Akyab mentioned in the Arakan fragmentary copper plate grant of Kimmājuvdevī. Ep. Ind., XXXVIII.61-66.

Deogarh Site of the Daśavatāra temple in Jhansi district, Uttar Pradesh.

Elāpura Same as modern Ellora (q.v.). The Talegaon copper plates of Rāṣṭrakūṭa Kṛṣṇa I dated AD 768 indicate that the king built the famous Kailāsanātha temple in imitation of the Kailāsanātha temple at Kāñci. The Ellora plates of Rāṣṭrakūṭa Dantidurga also deserve special mention. Ep. Ind., XIII.275, XXV.25; cf. Matsya., XXII.50.

Elavardhana One of the Indonesian islands mentioned in the Niddesa.

Elephanta A small island near Bombay famous for celebrated rock-cut Brahmanical cave. The cave has three entrances, each with a court in front. Though there is a detached Liṅga shrine within the main hall, the principal sanctuary in the cave appears to be placed in the transept enshrining the image of Śiva which is one of the finest sculptures of India. The pillars are closely analogous to those of the Dhumar-lena at Ellora in style, proportion and disposition. The sanctuary is flanked by colossal figures of guardians, and sculptures are accommodated in huge panels all around the caves.

Ellapura A village in the Karahāṭaka-visaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Pali copper plate of the time of the Cālukyas of Badami. It is modern Yelur in the Walve Taluka of the Satara district on the northern bank of the Warna river,

Ellora Famous for its caves in three groups—Buddhist, Brahmanical and Jain—the hill, known after the neighbouring village of Verule or Ellora (20°01' N, 75°10' E), is about sixteen miles to the north-west of Aurangabad and sixty miles from Ajanta. The Ellora caves may be classified in three main groups: twelve Buddhist, five Jain and seventeen Brahmanical, all situated side by side. The best Brahmanical specimen is the temple of Kailāsanātha which is practically unsurpassed in majesty and grace. The Buddhist caves are all viḥāras except the Viśvakarmā which is a Caitya hall enshrining a stūpa carved with a colossal seated figure of Buddha with two attendants on both sides. The Buddhist caves sprang up mostly in the reign of the Early Western Cālukyas (sixth-eighth century AD) and partly in the early part of the reign of the supplanter, the Rāṣṭrakūṭas. The caves are marked by the exuberance of sculptured figures. In most cases the Buddha is frequently attended by a greater number of side figures, mostly Bodhisattavas and their female counterparts. The site is also known as Ilvalapura (q.v.) and Elāpura.

Embolima Same as Amb-Balimah on the Indus, sixty miles above Attock, mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.55.

Embudala A village in the Ramanapeta Taluka, Nalgonda district, Andhra Pradesh, mentioned in a Viṣṇukunḍin grant from Tumulaguda. ARIE, 1968-69, 2.

Emodos The Eastern Himalayas mentioned in Ptolemy, VI.15.2.

Enādi Site of Śiva temple of early Cola style in Pudukkottah, Tiruchirappalli district. The temple has cubical sanctum topped by a square śikhara. Finely worked kuṭus with kīrtimukha apexes are found one on each face of śikhara. The mukha-maṇḍapa is borne by two heavy and squat pillars.

Eracha A Viṣaya, same as modern Erich on the Betwa, about sixty miles from Mahoba. (25°18' N, 79°55' E). mentioned in the Mahoba grant of the Candella Paramardi. It has been referred to as Eraccha-pattalā in the Bharat Kala Bhawan plates of Madanavarman (V.S.1192). Ep. Ind., XVI.9-15.

Erada Viṣaya A district mentioned in the Nadagam grant of Vajrahasta V. It comprised a part of modern Narasannapeta taluka of the Ganjam district, Orissa, and contained twelve villages among which Vappudām and Vaḍām (q.v.) can be identified with certainty. Ep. Ind., IV.183-93.

Erakanya Same as Airikina (q.v.) or modern Eran in Sagar district, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned on some early coins of the pre-Christian era. Allan, XCI.

Erambarage Modern Yelburga which was a stronghold of the Sinda Chiefs.

Eran Archaeological site in Sagar district, Madhya Pradesh which has yielded sequence of iron objects and NBP ware. The iron objects occur in Period II along with the black-and-red ware tradition of the earlier period, but below the occurrence of the NBP ware. In historical period this area attained much celebrity as is indicated by the discovery of numerous inscriptions and allied objects.

Eraṇḍapalla A southern kingdom which offered submission to Samudragupta as mentioned in his Allahabad Prasasti. It has been identified by Fleet with Eraṇḍol in Khandesh, by Dubreuil with Eraṇḍapali near Chicacole and by Ramdas with Yenḍipalli in Vizagapatam or Enḍapilli in Ellore. Sathianathaier identified it with Erraguntapalle in the Chentalapudi Taluka of the West Godavari district. It should also be added that a place called Erandavalli is mentioned in an inscription of Govinda III. The Padma P. Svarga, XLV, 57.61 mentions an Eraṇḍi-tīrtha. JRAS, 1908, 369-70 and Ep. Ind., XII.212.

Eraṇḍi River in Baroda, called Uri, a tributary of the Narmadā. Matsya CXCI.42, CXCI.65 and Padma, I.18.41.

Erannoboas A river, taken to be modern Son, which is mentioned by Classical writers. The name seems to be a corruption of Hiranyavāha. Megasthenes tells that Pāṭalipura was on the banks of the Ganga and Erannoboas. It should be mentioned that though the ancient city of Pāṭaliputra stood at the junction of the Son and the Ganges, the former afterwards changed its lower course and at present it drains itself into the Ganges about twenty-five miles to the west of Patna.

Erāvati Prakrit form of the river Acirāvati.

Eruthana Modern Erathan, two miles north-west from Balesara, mentioned in the Surat plate of Kīrtirāja.

Erythraean Sea Same as the Indian Ocean.

Esala Name of a small river and a village near Sirsi in North Kanara district mentioned in the Gudnapur record of Ravivarman. Śrīkaṇṭhika, 63 ff.

Eucratidia A city in Bactria founded by Eucratides in 171 BC.

Eumi A territorial division in the Tiruchirapalli district especially in the Pudukkottai division, mentioned in a Cettannavacal Brahmi inscription. It is also read as Erumaināḍu. AO, XXXIV.185 and JIH, LI.307.

Euthydemia A city same as Sagala, or Śākala, i.e. modern Sialkot (32°31' N, 74°36' E), Pakistan, mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.46.

Euthymedia Another name of Sagala or Śākala, modern Sialkot (32°31' N, 74°36' E) in the Punjab; mentioned in Ptolemy's Geography.

It seems to be a mistake for Euthydemia because the city is supposed to be named after Euthydemus.

Evadi A maṇḍala or administrative division mentioned in the Bilaigarh plates of Pṛthivīdeva II dated KE 896. It is also mentioned as the chief town of the maṇḍala of the same name. Its exact identification is not certain but it must have comprised a portion of modern Raipur district in Madhya Pradesh. CII., IV.460.

Eyirkottam A district modern Eyil in the Tindivanam Taluka (12°14' N, 79°42' E) in the South Arcot district, Tamil Nadu SII, I.123.

F

Fa-La-Na Chinese equivalent of Varāṇa, modern Bannu. It is mentioned by Hiuen-Tsang.

Fa-La-Pi Chinese name of Valabhāī, modern Vala or Wala near Bhavnagar in Kathiawar, mentioned by Hiuen-Tsang.

Fa-Yen-Na Chinese name of Bamiyan as recorded by Hiuen-Tsang.

Fei-Han Chinese name of Ferghanah as recorded by Hiuen-Tsang.

Fei-She-Li Chinese name of Vaiśālī, modern Basrah in the Muzaffarpur district.

Fo-Ho-Lo Chinese name of Balkh as recorded by Hiuen-Tsang.

Fo-Kia-Lang Chinese name of Baghlan.

Fo-Li-Shi Chinese name of Vṛjji, also called San-fa-chih or Saṃvṛjji territory, lying to the north-east of Vaiśālī.

Fu-Li-Shih-Sa-T'ang-Na Chinese name of Varsathāna, the capital of which was Hu-pi-na or Opian.

G

Gābhalāgrāma A village in North Gujarat possibly near Dilmal Ep. Ind., II.26.

Gabidhumat Same as Kundarkot, twenty-four miles to the north-east of Etawah in Uttar Pradesh Ep. Ind., I.180.

Gabhastimat One of the nine subdivisions of Bharātavarṣa mentioned in the Puṛāṇas. Al-Bīrūnī locates it to the south of Madhya-deśa and Abul Fazl between the Ṛkṣavat and Pāriyātra.

Gadālola A pool at Gayā (24°49' N, 85°01' E), on east side of the Brahmayōni. Vāmana, CIX.11-13; CXI., 75-76 and Agni, CXV.69.

Gadāra Same as Gandhāra (q.v.) mentioned in the Behistun inscription of Darius I.

Gaḍa-Viṣaya A district which is identical with Khiṅjaliya (gaḍa) viṣaya (q.v.). It is mentioned in the Anterigam plates of Jayabhaṅja Ep. Ind., XXIV.18.

Gādbipura Same as Kānyakubja or Kanauj mentioned in the Set Mahet stone inscription of Vidhyādhara dated V.S. 1176 (AD 1119-20) and other records of the Gāhaḍavāla kings. JASB, LXI(1), 57-64.

Gagasmira, Gatasmira A city near Mathura, Ptolemy, VII.1.50.

Gabilū Modern Gahuli, about ten miles to the north of Dhanaura (q.v.) mentioned in the Mahoba grant of the Candella Paramardi. Ep. Ind., XVI.9-15.

Galsabad Lower Palaeolithic site on the Bearma, Damoh district, Madhya Pradesh.

Gajāhvaya, Gajasāhvaya Name of Hastināpura Mbh., XVIII.5.34, Viṣṇu V.35.8ff, Vāmana LXXVIII.8; Bhāgavata I.4.6 and BrS XIV.4.

Gajapura Same as Hastināpura, chief city of the Kurus. This name is found in Jain texts.

Gajendra-Mokṣa Sonapur at the confluence of the Ganges and the Gandak; holy place on the Tamraparṇī, twenty miles to the west of Tinnevely (Caitanya Caritāmṛta II.9); a third Gajendramokṣa is located by Vāmana, LXXXIV on the Trikūṭa mountain.

Gallikā River, same as Gaṇḍakī. Padma VI.76.2, VI.129.14.

Gambhīrā River in Kashmir that joins Vitastā below Vijaveśvara. Stein in his note on RT., VIII.1063 says that it is the name of the lowest portion of the Viśoka river before it falls into Vitastā. A tributary of the Śīprā in Madhya Pradesh is also known as Gambhīrā or Gambhirikā. Meghadūta, I.40 and BrS XVI.15.

Gaṃjikuṭa Either Chinna-Ganjam or Padda-Ganjam in Bapatla Taluka, Guntur district mentioned in the Rentala pillar inscription of Śrī Cāntamūla I, year 5. Ep. Ind., XXXVII.29 ff.

Gandaki River same as the Gandak, an Upper tributary of the Ganges which originates in the hills of South Tibet and passing through Nepal receives four tributaries. The major upper tributary joins it at a place to the north-west of Nayakot in Nepal and the lower called the Rāptī, joins it just above the district of Champaran. Its main stream flows into the Ganges between Sonpur and Hajipur. In Bhāgavata, V.7.70, X.79.11 it is called Cakranadī because it has pebbles marked with Cakra (Śālagrāma stone) Its another name is Gandasāhvayā. It is known in Nepal as Śālagrāmī and in Uttar Pradesh as Nārāyaṇī. It is same as the Kondo-chates of Arrian. Mbh., I.170.20.21, II.20.27, III.222.22; Padma, I.38.36 IV.20.22; Varāha CXLIV, 35-38 and Brahmāṇḍa II.16.26.

Gandari A people of the Rechna Doab whose territory during the time of Alexander's invasion lay between the Chenab and the Ravi. It probably represented the easternmost part of the old Mahajanapada of Gandhāra.

Gandaridae, Gangaridae People and country of the Ganges region mentioned by the Classical writers. Its Sanskrit equivalent may be Gaṅgāhṛdi. Curtius, Plutarch and Solinus agreed in placing the Gangaridae on the eastern bank of the Ganges. Diodorus used the term in two different senses. In a restricted sense he confined it to the easternmost part of India, while in its wider sense he meant by it the whole country between the part of "India which Alexander conquered" and Further India. Pliny held that the final part of the course of the Ganges was through the country of the Gangarides. According to Ptolemy "all the country about the mouths of the Ganges was occupied by the Gangaridai". He had also distinguished Tamalites (Tāmralipti) from Gangaridae. While most of the classical writers restricted the dominion of the Ganges, its extended dimension offered by Diodorus might have been due to the presence in Upper India a city called Gange, the existence of which was vouched for by Artemidoros and Strabo. This city must be carefully distinguished from Gange (q.v.) the royal residence of the Gangaridae, mentioned by Ptolemy and apparently by the author of the Periplus. See also under Prasioi.

Gandarii Tribe mentioned by Hecataeus occupying the country around the Upper Indus and the valley of Kabul with their capital city at Caspapyrus or Caspatyrus (q.v.). They are also mentioned by Herodotus (III.91; VII.66) but have not been included among Indian tribes. In Vedic literature we have references to a tribe called Gandhāri (q.v.).

Gandhahasti A Stūpa, about one mile to the south west of Bodh-gaya which was visited by Hiuen-Tsang. The place is identified with modern Bakror, on the eastern bank of the Lilajan (ancient Nairañjauā) river. CAGI, 526.

Gandhamādana Mountain on which Badrinath is situated. But it is better known as a mythical mountain lying to the south of Meru. Viṣṇu, II.2.18; Mārkaṇḍeya, LI.19 and Matsya, XIII.26.

Gandhāra People settled in the Vedic times on the south bank of the Kubha upto its junction with the Indus. The good wool of the sheep of the Gandhāris is mentioned in RV, I.126.7, while in AV, V.22.14 the Gandhāris are mentioned along with the Mujavants. The Ait. Br., VII.34 and Śat. Br., VIII.1.4.10. refer to Nagnajit, king of Gandhāra. The inhabitants of Gandhāra are included by the epic poets among the peoples of Uttarāpatha and their territory containing two great cities—Takṣaśilā and Puṣkarāvati—has been located on both sides of the Indus (Mbh., XII.207.43 and Rām VII.113.11, VII.114.11). From the geographical description of the territory of the Gandhāras as recorded in the Vāyupurāṇa LXXXVIII. 189-90 and Rām VII.114.11 it is apparent that it had embraced the Rawalpindi and Peshawar districts. Hecataeus referred to a city of the Gandaril called Caspapyrus which was equated by Stein with Caspatyrus of Herodotus. According to Gandhāra Jātaka (no. 406) the kingdom of Gandhāra included Kāśmīra. In the Talapatta and Susīma Jātakas

(nos. 96, 163), Takṣaśilā is described as lying 2,000 leagues north of Banaras. The Gandaris of Alexander's historians lay in the Rechna Doab, between the Chenab and Ravi. In the Aṅguttara Nikāya, I.213, IV.252, 256, 260 Gandhāra is mentioned as one of the sixteen Mahājanapadas.

Gandhāra Indian name attributed to the early home of the Thai people in Yunnan which was called Nan-chao by the Chinese. SGAMI, 322.

Gandharadi A site in Baudh Khondmals district, Orissa, famous for a set of twin temples.

Gāndharva One of the nine subdivisions of Bhūratavarṣa which has been placed by Al-Bīrūnī to the north-west of Madhyadeśa. The Mbh., II.48.22-23 mentions the Gandharva country which according to some scholars should be identified with Gandhāra.

Gandhaṭapāti-Maṇḍala A district mentioned in the Somavamśī records. It is modern Gandharadi in the Baudh-Khondmals district of Orissa, apparently named after Śaturbhaṅja I Ghandhaṭa of the Bhaṅja dynasty of Dhṛtipura.

Gandhavati River near Ekāmra or Bhuvaneswar in Orissa rising in the Udayagiri hills. It is also the name of a tributary of the Śīprā on which stood the temple of Mahākāla at Ujjayinī. Meghadūta, I.33-34.

Ganeśvara Deity and district around his temple on the western border of Kaccha mentioned in the Śaktisaṅgama-tantra.

Gaṅgā Modern Ganges which does not appear to be a well known or even important stream in the RV which mentions it only once, in the Nadīstuti (X.75.5). In Śat. Br., XIII.5.4.11 and in Taitt Ār., II.20 especial honour is assigned to those who dwell between the Gaṅgā and the Yamunā. In subsequent religious and secular literature of India as well as in the epigraphs it has become the most important river of India. Its sanctity has given it a deified character and its name is attributed to numerous rivers of India. The Mbh., traces the source of the Ganges to Bindusaras, the Jain Jambudvīpaprājñapti to the Padmahrada and the Pali works to the southern face of the Anotatta lake. The main stream of the Ganges first comes to light near Gangotri in Garhwal. At Devaprayag it is joined on the left side by Alakanandā. The united stream descends at Hardwar whence down to Bulandshahr it has a southerly course, after which it flows in a south-easterly direction upto Prayāga or Allahabad where it is joined by the Yamunā. From Allahabad down to Rajmahal it has an easterly course, after which it follows again a south-easterly course. It enters Bengal between Rajmahal and Maldah and bifurcates a little above Jangipur in the Murshidabad district. The western bifurcation is known as the Bhāgīrathī or Hooghly and the eastern as the Padmā. The Ganges is known by various other names such as Viṣṇupadī, Jāhnavī, Mandākinī, Bhāgīrathī, etc.

Gaṅgā Name attributed to the river Godāvarī in the Purusottamapura plates of Rāmacandra. Ep. Ind., XXV.208.

Gaṅgādvāra Same as Haridvāra (29°58' N, 78°13' E). Viṣṇu D.S., LXXXV.28; Mbh., III.81-14, 90-21, 142.9-10, XIII.25.13; Kūrma, I.15, 41-47, II.20.33; Agni, IV.7; Padma V.5.3, V.26.103 and Matsya, XXII.10.

Gaṅgaikoṇḍacolapuram New capital city founded by Rājendra Cola, named after his epithet 'Conqueror of the Ganges'. It was at the meeting point of the modern districts of Trichinopoli, South Arcot and Tanjore. It was also known as Gaṅgāpurī. It had a vast tank in its neighbourhood, the Cola-gaṅgam, which for many centuries testified the achievement of Rājendra. In the Uḍaiyārpālaiyam taluka there are ruins of an embankment, sixteen miles long, running north to south, which was the site of the Cola-gaṅgam. The Bṛhadīśvara temple in the Tiruchirapalli district, built by Rājendra Cola, is now only the surviving specimen of Gaṅgaikoṇḍacolapuram. It is a two-tired temple having well-marked koṣṭhas, pañjaras and śālās and niches containing beautiful sculptures.

Gaṅgamārtāṇḍapuram A city in Miyaṛaināḍu which was a division of Adhirājendra-valanāḍu in Jayaṅkoṇḍa-soṛa-maṇḍalam (q.v.). SII, I. no. 127.

Gaṅgāpura A village in the Candragatti-nāḍu belonging to the Goveyarāja, which has been identified with modern Sangur situated at a distance of about eight miles south-west of Haveri on the road to Sirsi in the North Kanara district. Ep Ind., XXIII.182 ff.

Gaṅgārāṣṭra Gangaridae of the classical writers, lying to the east and south east of Magadha.

Gangaridae See under Gandaridae.

Gaṅgāsāgara Junction of the Ganges with the sea which survives in the same name even today at the confluence of the Bhāgīrathī (Hooghly) and the Bay of Bengal. Al-Bīrūnī mentions it as Gaṅgāsāyara.

Gaṅgavāḍi, Gaṅgapāḍi Country of the Western Gaṅgas which comprised a major portion of the present state of Karnataka. The name probably still survives in that of the city called Gangawati (15°30' N, 76°36' E). The territory of the Western Gaṅgas was also called Gaṅgavāḍi 96,000. The founder of the Gaṅga line Koṅgunivarman ruled roughly from AD 350 to 400 with capital at Kolar. Under Harivarman (C. AD 450-60) the capital of Gaṅgavāḍi was Ṭalakāḍ (Ṭalkad, Tālvanaपुरa) on the Kāverī, near Sivasamudram. Under Durvinīta (C. AD 540-600) the territory of Gaṅgavāḍi included Punnād or Southern Karṇāṭaka and parts of Koṅgudeśa (q.v.). During the region of Śripuruṣa (AD 725-88) the capital of Gaṅgavāḍi was transferred to Mānyapura or Manne, near Bangalore.

Gange A city on the bank of the Ganges mentioned by the author of the Periplus. "Through this place are brought malabathrum and Gangetic spikendard and pearls, and muslins of the finest sorts which are called Gangetic." The city of Gange is also mentioned by Ptolemy who described it as a metropolis and distinguished it from Tamilities or Tāmralipti. This city must be carefully distinguished from another Gange in Upper India mentioned by Artemidoros and Strabo.

Gangenoi People, same as the Taṅgana, who lived along the course of the Ganges on its eastern side and through whose dominations passed the river Sarabos (Sarayu or Ghogra). Ptolemy, VII.2.13.

Gāṅgeya-Nāllūr Modern Gāṅganur in Vellore Taluka, North Arcot district.

Gāṅginika River mentioned in the Nidhanpur grant of Bhāskara (KS, 1 ff). Its identification is uncertain though some scholars like to equate it with the river Gāṅgina flowing in Sylhet.

Gāṅgodbheda A holy place, modern Gangobhev at Ahar (q.v.) in Rajasthan.

Gaṅganūr Ganagūr in Somavarpur taluka mentioned as the area of the Tagaḍas in the Mercara copper plate record of AD 460 EC, I intro.

Gaṅṅapāta A maṅḍala mentioned in the Sonpur grant no. 2 of Mahāśivagupta Yayāti. It is probably represented by modern Ghantapara in the neighbourhood of Sonpur in Orissa. Ep. Ind., XI, 93 ff.

Garasāmbhā A village in the Arthani-viṣaya in Koṅgoda-maṅḍala (q.v.) mentioned in the Ganjam grant no. 2 of Daṇḍi-Mahādevī. Ep. Ind., VI, 140-42.

Garbha A village mentioned in the Ratanpur stone inscription of Jajalladeva I (K.E. 866). It may be identified with Gobra in the Janjgir Tahsil of the Bilaspur district, Madhya Pradesh. CII., IV, no. 77.

Gargarā Ancient name of the modern river Kālisindh, a tributary of the Chambal, mentioned in the Gangdhar inscription of Viśvavarman.

Garjapatipura, Garjapura Modern Ghazipur (25°34' N, 83°35' E) in Uttar Pradesh. Also known as Garjanapati, its Chinese name was Chen-chu, which was described by Hiuen Tsang as 2,000 li in circuit.

Gatti Cairn-burial site on Makran coast, south Baluchistan, located near Gwadar, slightly north of Jiwanri (q.v.) at the foot of the Jabal-i-Mahdi hill on the sea coast. Uncalcined bones, coarse and unpainted pottery, pieces of copper and bronze vessels and fragments of iron have been found from the cairns.

Gauḍa Name of people whose capital was Campā (Champanagarī in the sarkar of Madaran mentioned in the Ain which stood on the left bank of the Damodar, north-west of the city of Burdwan) mentioned in the Anar-gharāghava (JASB., 1908, 279). The expression samudrāśraya used in the Haraha inscription (Ep. Ind., XIV, 120) in reference to the Gauḍas seems to suggest that they were originally an Oceanic people who came to this land by sea (Bagchi, 124-25). The Gauḍas as a people are mentioned in the epico-puranic literature who gave their name to a vast region of Bengal which subsequently emerged as a distinct political unit. Their early centre was probably Gauḍapura (q.v.) which has been referred to by Pāṇini.

Gauḍa (Gaur) Capital city of the Senas of Bengal at least from the time of Lakṣmaṇasena. It was probably named Lakṣmaṇāvātī after Lakṣmaṇasena in imitation of Rāmāvātī founded by Rāmapāla. The Turks fixed their capital at this city. It stood on the bank of the Ganges close to its junction with the Mahānandā in the Malda district of West Bengal. The present course of the Ganges, after it has swept in a curve round the spurs and slopes of the Rajmahal hills, is very different from what it was in the earlier period. In those days it flowed further north and east and the city of Gauḍa was on its right bank. There is also a Gauḍa in North Sylhet. JASB, 1873, 236.

Gauḍaka Name of a country after the Gauḍas (q.v.) which corresponded to Murshidabad and parts of Burdwan, Birbhum and Malda districts of West Bengal. The B/S, XIV. 6-8 clearly restricts Gauḍaka to a part of Bengal which is distinguished not only from Pauḍra (q.v.), Tāmraliptika (q.v.), Vaṅga (q.v.) and Samataṣa (q.v.), but also from Vardhamāna (Burdwan).

Gauḍadeśa, Gauḍarāṣṭra The Gauda country. The Bhaviṣya Purāna (Ind. Ant., 1891, 419 f) defines Gauḍa as a territory lying to the north of Burdwan and south of Padmā. This corresponds to the kingdom of Gauḍa-Karṇasuvarṇa described by the writers of the seventh century AD. In the Prabodhacandrodaya (Act II) the Gauḍa-rāṣṭra is said to have included Rāḍhā (q.v.) and Bhurīśreṣṭhika (q.v.). But the Managoli inscription of the Yādava king Jaitugi I (Ep. Ind., V. 29) distinguished Rāḍhā from Gauḍa, just as the Nilgund inscription of Rāṣṭrakūṭa Amoghavarṣa I (Ep. Ind., VI. 103) distinguishes Vaṅga from it. According to the Jain writers of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, Gauḍa included Lakṣmaṇavatī in the present Malda district (JASB, 1908, 281)

Gauḍa Maṇḍala Gauḍa as an administrative division. The RT., IV. 148 mentions that a troop of elephants from Gauḍa-maṇḍala joined Lalitāditya. In a record of the time of Aurangzeb (ASI, 1922-23, 145), the subah of Bengal is referred to as Gauḍa-maṇḍala.

Gauḍapura City of the Gauḍas referred to in Pāṇini, VI. 2.99-100.

Gauḍa-Viṣaya Gauḍa as an administrative division. The term occurs in the Kanheri inscription of Rāṣṭrakūṭa Amoghavarṣa I (814-77 AD). Ind. Ant., XIII.134.

Gaugamela A place in the Indian border mentioned by Arrian "near the river Bumodus about 600 stades distant from the city of Arbela". Chinnock 142-43.

Gauraeon People living in the Gaurī or Panjkora valley mentioned by Alexander's historians.

Gaurī River, probably same as the Gouraios (Panjkora) of the Greek writers. Mbh., VI.9.25.

Gautamanāga Holy place in Kashmir to the north of Anantanāga and on the way of Bavan.

Gautami Another name of the river Godavari.

Gavidhumat Locality mentioned in the Mahābhāṣya, II.3.21. It may be identified with Kudarkote, twenty-four miles to the north-east of Etawah (26°47' N, 79°02' E) and thirty-six miles from Sankissa in Farrukhabad district Uttar Pradesh.

Ingaliśvara Modern Ingaleshvar in the Bagawadi taluka (16°33' N, 76°05' E) of the Bijapur district, Karnataka. It is mentioned in the Yādava records as belonging to the Tarddevadi Viṣaya (q.v.).

In-Po-Klo Same as Yamgan mentioned by Hiuen-Tsang.

Iomousa City around the Bidaspes (Vitastā or Jhelum), in the country of the Pandoouoi (Pāṇḍava), mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.46.

Irāmakudam Sanskrit Rāmaghaṭa, It was one of the principalities which centred round Mount D'Eli or Eli-malai (rat-hill) in Kerala.

Iraṇa, Iriṇa The Runn of Kutch. The word Runn is evidently a corruption of Iraṇa which means salt-land. It is the Eirion of the Periplus.

Iraṭṭapāḍi Also known as Raṭṭapāḍi it was the name of the Western Calukya empire. ASSI., IV.104, SII., I.Nos, 40, 41, 66.67.

Irāvati Modern Ravi river in the Punjab, called Hydroates by Greek writers. It is same as the Paruṣṇī of the RV, X.75.5 (cf. Nir. IX.26). It is mentioned in the Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali (Kielhorn I.382) on Pāṇini II.1.20 as examples. The city of Lahore stands on it. This river rises in the rock basin of Bangahal and drains the southern slopes of the Pir Panjal and the northern slopes of the Dhaula Dhar. It appears first to our view at the south-west corner of Chamba whence it flows past Lahore, following a south-westerly course, and meets the Chenab or the united flow of the Vitastā and Candrabhāgā between Ahmadpur and Saraisidhu. Viṣṇu D.S., LXXXV.49; Matsya, XXII.19; Vāyu XLV.95 and Vāmana LXXIX.7, LXXXI.1.

Irāwa River same as Irāvati or Ravi mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī.

Iridige Viṣaya An administrative division mentioned in the records of the Cālukyas of Badami as one of the seven Koṅkanas. It corresponded roughly with the present Savantawadi region of Maharashtra. Ind. Ant., IX.126, 130.

J

Jadera A village, identified with modern Jondra on the Seonath river, just outside the south-west boundary of the Janjgir Tahsil, Bilaspur district, Madhya Pradesh. It is mentioned in the Amoda plates (first set) of Pṛthivīdeva II (K.E. 900). CII., IV no.91.

Jadūra A city adjacent to Rajauri or Rajorgarh in Alwar (27°34' N, 76°38' E) Rajasthan, mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī.

Jagaddala A great Buddhist centre of learning in the city of Rāmāvati in Varendrī or North Bengal. It is mentioned in the Rāmacarita. The exact site of Jagaddala-Mahāvihāra is, however, unknown. Sumpa located it in Orissa. According to the testimony of Sakya Śrībhadrā of Kashmir it lay in West Bengal. There is a place called Jagaddala near Bhatpara on the Ganges, a centre of Brahmanical culture, about twenty-four miles to the north of Calcutta. There is nothing to prove that it was the original place, but it is not impossible that after the destruction of Jagaddala, the Buddhist scholars made a settlement here and named it often the original site. The adjoining Kakinada was inhabited by southern Brahmins who named this place after their original village of the same name in Andhra.

Jaganātha-Nagara A city, identified with Jagannāthapuram which is same or a portion of the town of Cocanada in Andhra Pradesh, mentioned in an eastern Cālukya grant of Vira-coḍa. SII., I.39, 51-60.

Jagannathpur Middle Palaeolithic site on the Vaitaraṇī, district Keonjhar, Orissa.

Jaganuātha-Puri Holy place, same as Puri (19°48' N, 85°52' E) in Orissa.

Jaggayyapeta A Buddhist site (16°54' N, 80°05' E) in Krishna district, Andhra Pradesh, situated at a distance of four miles from the confluence of the Krishna and the Paler. Like Amarāvati the extensive remains of Jaggayyapeta have suffered ruthless destruction at the hands of the local people. Some Mauryan characters of the second century BC have been found on the remains of base slabs of the Great Stūpa (Mahācaitya).

Jāguda People of Uttarāpatha as reported in the Puranic lists of Janapadas whose territory lay around Ghazni in Southern Afghanistan. They are mentioned as Sahuḍa in Rājaśekhara's Kāvya-mīmāṃsā, XVII. Hiuen-Tsang mentions Tsao-ku-l'a or Jāguda with capital Ho-si-na or Ghazna and Ho-sa-lo, i.e. Guzra or Guzaristan on the Helmund.

Jāhnavī Name of the Gaṅgā, derived from the mythical association of the river with sage Jahnu. Vāyu, XCI.54-58 and Brahmaṇḍa III.56.48, III.66.28.

Jahnu-Āśrama Hermitage of the sage Jahnu which is said to have been situated at Sultanganj on the west of Bhagalpur in Bihar.

Jailam Same as the river Jhelum on which Addishtan or Srinagar in Kashmir stands. Though Vitastā and Jhelum are names of the same river, the lower course of which is specially called Jhelum, Al-Bīrūnī had preferred two separate names, as is indicated by his use of the term Biyatta to denote the former. According to him, "the Jailum rises in the mountain Haramakot (Haramukta, Haramukh), where also the Ganges rises, cold, impenetrable regions where the snow never melts or disappears. Behind them, there is Mahacin, i.e. Great China. When the Jailam has left the mountains, and has flowed two days journey, it passes through Addishtan. Four farsakh farther on it enters a swamp of one square farsakh. The people have their plantations on the borders of this swamp, and on such parts of it as they manage to reclaim. Leaving this swamp, the Jailam passes the town Ushkārā."

Jaipara A village identified with modern Jaipra, fifteen miles north of Kanker (20°15' N, 81.52' E) in Madhya Pradesh mentioned in the Tahan-kapur plate of Pamparājadeva (K.E.965). CII., IV.597.

Jajāhuti Name of Jejākabhukti or Jejākabhukti or Jejabhukti (q.v.) as recorded by Al-Bīrūnī as a province corresponding to the Bundelkhand region. Hiuen-Tsang refers to it as Chih-chi-to. According to Al-Bīrūnī, 'marching from Kanoj towards the south-east, on the western side of the Ganges one may come to the realm of Jajahuti, 30 farsakh from Kanoj. The capital of the country is Kajuraha'.

Jājallapura A town, identified with Janjgir, the headquarters of a Tahsil of the same name in the Bilaspur district, mentioned in the Ratanpur stone inscription of Jājalladeva I (K.E.866) after whom the city was named. Ep. Ind., I.32 ff., and CII., IV.411.

Jājapura Known as Virajā-kṣetra after the presiding deity of the place, it was also a Buddhist site in Orissa where a good number of sculptural remains have been found.

Jajjamau A locality, 12 farsakh from Kanauj, between the Yamunā and the Ganges, referred to by Al-Bīrūnī.

Jalabālaka Mountain, same as the Vindhya, as recorded in the Abhidhānacintāmaṇi, IV.

Jalajadda Modern Jalajodo near Talagaja in the Bolangir district, Orissa, mentioned in the Patna grant of Mahāśivagupta Yayāti. Ep. Ind., XI.200.

Jalakut-Kubbaka A waterfall which seems to have formed in the flow of the Kanhan river near Jamalpani (ancient Jamalakhetaka) in the Saoner taluka of the Nagpur district, mentioned in the Mahurzari plates of Pṛthvisena II. ABORI, LIII.191ff.

Jalalpur Lower Palaeolithic site on the Godavārī at Nasik in Maharashtra.

Jālandhara A hill and a town (31°19' N, 75°18' E) on the Sutlej in the Punjab named after it. It was the territory of the ancient Trigartas. Hiuen-Tsang refers to Jālandhara as She-lan-ta-lo. Al-Bīrūnī refers to it as a country with capital at Dahmāla at the foot of the hill, 18 farsakh from Thanesar. It is a Śākta Pīṭha. According to the Kālikā Purāṇa, XVIII.51 the Devī is called Caṇḍī on Jālandhara hill whereon her breasts fell when Śiva carried her corpse. Other Purāṇas substitute Viśvamukhī or Lalitā for Caṇḍī as the presiding deity. Matsya, XIII.46, XXII.46; Vāyu, CIV.80; Padma, VI.4.19-20 and Brahmāṇḍa IV.44.95.

Jalaoikā Village identified with Kohaka, six miles north-east of Drug, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in a Drug stone inscription ICBP., 136.

Jaleśvara Holy place, now represented by a railway station of the same name in the Balasore district, Orissa. SP, 86.

Jamalakhetaka Modern Jamalpani in the Saoner taluka of the Nagpur district mentioned in the Mahurzari plates of Pṛthvisena II as situated in the division of the same name in the Kingdom of Surambi. ABORI, LIII.194.

Jamalgarhi A Buddhist site (34°19' N, 72°04' E) in Peshawar district, Pakistan, about eight miles to the north of Mardan and hardly eight miles to the west-south-west of Takht-i-Bahi. Among its extensive ruins the focus is a stūpa. The antiquities unearthed from different parts of the site are overwhelming in number which include Kharosthi inscriptions, Kusāna coins, terracotta heads and copper and iron objects, besides hundreds of sculptures of stone and stucco, representing Jātakas, scenes from the life of Buddha and images of Buddha and Bodhisattvas.

Jambudvīpa Island continent, indicating both India (greater India including parts of Central and Western Asia) and the world, according to the Puranic cosmography and the Aśokan inscriptions. In the Pali Buddhist literature Jambudvīpa is sometimes the name of the Indian subcontinent which then included parts of Central Asia and is mentioned as the southern of the four island-continent constituting the world. In the Puranic conception it is one of the seven island-continent, surrounded by the salt sea. It is also called Sudarśana-dvīpa and described as low on the south and the north and highly elevated in the middle (Mārkaṇḍeya, LIV.12 f). It is supposed to be shaped like a lotus with mount Meru as its pericarp (karṇikā) and the mahūdīvās or varṣas entitled Bhadrāśva, Bhārata, Ketumēla and Uttarakuru as its four petals (Brahmāṇḍa, XLIV.35 ff; Mārkaṇḍeya, LV.20f and Nilakaṇṭha on Mbh. VI.6.3-5). The elevated central region is styled Ilāvṛta or Meru-varṣa which is one of the nine divisions of Jambudvīpa. To the north of Meru are three varṣas (Ramyaka, Hiraṇmaya and Uttarakuru), to the south three (Bhārata, Kimpurusa and Hari) to the east one (Bhadrāśva) and to the west one (Ketumāla). The Jambudvīpa is circular in shape so that the northern most and southern most varṣas (Uttarakuru and Bhārata) are each shaped like a bow (Matsya, CXIII.32; Brahmāṇḍa, XXXV.33 and Mbh. VI.6.38).

Jambugāma, Jambuḡrāma A village near Campā where the Buddha halted during his last journey from Ambagāma to Vaiśālī. There was another village of the same name on the high road from Vaiśālī to Kuśīnagara. Dīgha, II.124.

Kakoria Chalcolithic site located on the Chandraprabhā in Varanasi district, Uttar Pradesh. It has both a cemetery and a habitational area. The entire accumulation is of a single culture complex, although it has been divided into three phases.

Kakubhagrāma Modern Kahaum in the Dewaria tehsil in the Gorakhpur district, chief town of the Salampur-Majhauli Pargana, Uttar Pradesh.

Kakudmatt River rising from the Sahya. It is same as Koyanā which falls into the Krishna near Karad in Satara district, Maharashtra. Padma, VI.113.25.

Kakutthā River, same as the modern Kuku, which formed the dividing line between Kusinārā and Pāvā. It was the Cocouthes of the classical writers. Some scholars identify it with modern Ghāgī, a small stream flowing into the Little Gaṇḍak, about two miles to the west of Chitiyaon in the Gorakhpur district. Digha, II.129, 134ff. and Udāna VII.5.

Kālagiri Khampana Modern Kalgiri in the Khanapur Taluka (15°42' N, 74°35' E) of the Belgaum district, mentioned in the records of the Kalyaṇi Cālukyas as part of Palasiga Viṣaya (q.v.). SMHD, I.26 and JBBRAS, IX.249, 266, 278.

Kālahasti A coastal town (13°45' N, 79°44' E) surviving in its ancient name in the Chittoor district, to the south of Nellore, Andhra Pradesh.

Kālakaleśvara Holy place, about ten miles from Kalvan, in the north-west of Nasik district, Maharashtra, mentioned in Paramāra records. Ep. Ind., XIX.68-75.

Kālakavana A forest near Allahabad, traditionally regarded as the eastern boundary of Madhyadeśa.

Kalandakagāma A village near Vaiśālī. Milinda, 170 and Vinaya, III. 11-21.

Kālañjara, Kālīñjara Modern Kalinjar (25°05' N, 80°22' E) in the Banda district, Uttar Pradesh. Kālañjara-maṇḍala is described as a subdivision of the Kānyakubja-bhukti in the Barah copper plate of Bhojadeva (Ep. Ind., IV.284, XIX.18; JBBRAS, XVIII.284) which roughly corresponded to the northern Bundelkhand region. The mountainous tract (Kālanjarādri) and the fort of Kālañjara, which according to Nijamuddin (TA 14) "had no equal in the whole country of Hindustan for strength and impregnability", and according to Al-Bīrūnī (Sachau, I.202) one of the most famous fortresses of India, was the stronghold of the Candellas of Jejākabhukti whose inscriptions were issued from this place and who styled themselves as Kālañjarādhipati. (Ep. Ind., I.217, IV.153 and IGI VI.349, etc.) The fortress of Kālañjara has been described in the Ain, II.159 as "situated on a heaven reaching hill. It contains many temples and an idol is there called Kāla Bhairava, 18 cubits high, of which marvellous tales are related. Springs rise within the fort and there are many tanks." A second Kālañjara situated on the frontiers of Kashmir is mentioned by Kalhana and Firishta where Khwaja Ahmed, the Vuzir of Sultan Mahmud, was imprisoned for eighteen years.

Kalañjiyam A village in the North Arcot district mentioned in the inscriptions of the Vijayanagara kings found at Virinchipuram SI., I.83.

Kālī River which flows through the Saharanpur district of Uttar Pradesh. There is also another river called Kali-Sind which falls into the Chambal. Matsya, XXII.20; Vāmana, LVII.79 and IGI, XXII.102.

Kalibangan Originally a pre-Harappan settlement with mud-brick fortification, on the southern bank of the Ghaggar in Ganganagar district, Northern Rajasthan which had developed Harappan characteristics in course of its growth. Here are two mounds and in both of them pre-Harappan and Harappan occupations may be traced. The Harappans have in fact used the pre-Harappan wall to raise their fortifications. Pottery shows an overlap between the pre-Harappan and Harappan wares at both the mounds. The city contains thoroughfares but no drains. Unlike Harappa, at no place was the fortification wall integral with any of the platforms within the citadel. A noteworthy feature of the houses was the occurrence of oval or rectangular fireplaces at different levels.

Kālindī Another name of the Yamunā. Padma, I.29.1.

Kaliṅga Ancient janapada mentioned by Pāṇini, IV.1-170 and Baudhāyana, I.1.30-31. According to the epic tradition the country of the Kaliṅgas comprised the whole coast from the river Vaitaraṇī in Orissa (Mbh., III. 114-4) to the borders of the Andhra territory. The southern boundary was not well-defined. It reached Yellamanchili and Chipurupalle in Vizagapatam District and at times even Piṣṭapura (q.v.) or Pithapuram, north-east of Godāvarī but not the river itself which flowed through the Andhra country. According to Pargiter Kaliṅga consisted properly of the plain between the Eastern Ghats (Mahendra range) and the sea (cf. Raghuvaṃśa, VI.56). In Hiuen Tsang's time Kaliṅga occupied a much smaller area. It was distinguished from Wu-t'u (Orissa) and Kung-yu-t'o (Kōṅgoda in Ganjam District) and An-to-lo (Andhra or Veṅgī) in the south and seemed to have embraced parts of the Ganjam and Vizagapatam Districts. According to the Jātakas the capital of Kaliṅga was Dantapura (q.v.). The Mbh., XII.4.3 refers to Rājapura (q.v.) as its metropolis. Other cities of Kalinga were Simhapura (q.v.), Kāñcanapura (q.v.) and Śrīpura (q.v.).

Kalingam Country between the Godāvārī and Mahānadī rivers mentioned in the Cola inscriptions. See under Kalinga. SII, I.63ff.

Kalinganagara City which lay between modern Mukhalingam in the Ganjam district and Srikakulam in Andhra Pradesh, the capital of the Eastern Gaṅgas. Ptolemy, VII.1.93 mentioned it as one of the inland cities of the Maisoloi. The name survives in the Kalingapatnam (18°20' N, 84°10' E) in Andhra Pradesh.

Kāliyūr-Kottam A district containing subdivisions like Ogara-nāḍu, Virappedu-nāḍu, etc. mentioned in the Cola records. It corresponded to the Chingleput district of Tamil Nāḍu. A city called Kaliour is mentioned in Ptolemy, VII. 1.91 as an inland city of the Paralia of the Soretai or Soringoi (Cola) SII, I. 115ff and ARE, II.27.

Kalladuppur, Kalleduppur Village in Kāliyur-Koṭṭam (q.v.) which lay somewhere in the Chingleput district, Tamil Nāḍu, mentioned in the Cola records. SII. I.114ff.

Kallāmbādi Modern Kanamadi in the Athni Taluka, Belgaum district. Hanwad ins. of. S.976, Ind. Ant., XIX.273.

Kallaṅgoda Modern Kallagoḍu in the North Kanara district mentioned in the Gudnapur grant of Ravivarman. Śrīkaṅṭhikā, 63.

Kallavana Same as modern Kalavan, a taluka in the Nasik district, mentioned in a charter dated AD 595 of the Kalacuri king Śaṅkaragaṇa found at Ahbona in the Nasik district.

Kālodaka Lake on the mountain Haramukuṭa, i.e. Harmukh, an extension of the Himalayas in Kashmir, which is the source of the river Kālodakā. Mbh., XIII.25.60, Visnu D.S., LXXXV.35.

Ka-Lo-Tu Chinese name of the river Karatoyā.

Kalpagrāma Modern Kalpi in Uttar Pradesh where the temple of Varāha is situated. Varāha, CLXVI.12.

Kalpoḷe Modern Kalholi in the Gokak taluka, (16°11' N, 74°52' E) Belgaum district Karnataka. It is mentioned in the records of the Kalyāṇī Cālukyas. JBBRAS, X.220.

Kaluceruvulu A village, which probably lay in the Guntur district, mentioned in the Eastern Cālukya grants. SII, I.43.

Kalūrapura Town on the Koleru lake probably from which place the Eastern Cālukya king Jayasiṃha issued his Gudivada plates in his 18th regnal year. Ep. Ind., XXXI, 29.

Kalwan A site which has been located on the Maragala spur about 1.25 miles south-south-east of the Dharmarājikā-stūpa (q.v.) in Taxila. Its ancient name was Caṅḍaśila. This site is studded with numerous Buddhist objects.

Kalyāṇa-Kaṭaka A locality in Kanauj mentioned in the Gujarata chronicles.

Kalyānapura Modern Kalampor in the Sukru Pargana (33°48' N, 74°54' E) in Central Kashmir valley.

Kalyāṇa, Kalyāṇapura Capital of the western Cālukyas which has been identified with Kalyāṇī, a town surviving in the same name (17°53' N, 76°59' E) in Karnataka.

Kāmagiri Same as the Kāmākhyā-tīrtha in Gauhati, Assam, where the genital portion of Sati fell when her corpse was carried by Siva. Brahmāṇḍa, IV.39.105., Bhāgavata, V. 19.16., Devī Bh., VIII.11.11. and Kālikā, XVIII.42ff.

Kamakapalli A village in the vicinity of Sirsi in the North Kanara district mentioned in a grant of the Kadamba ruler Kṛṣṇavarman II. Analecta, 1945, 235 ff.

Kāmākhyā Site of the Temple of Tripurabhairavī on the beautiful Nilācala hill over hanging the Brahmaputra river, about two miles from the Gauhati railway station in Assam. It was also called Kāmagiri (q.v.). Kālikā, LXIV.2 and Devī Bh., VIII.11.11.

Kāmakoṣṭhaka Kāmakoṭi Holy resort of the goddess Tripurasundarī or Kāmākṣī in Kanci which is one of the fifty Piṭhas of Lalitā. Brahmāṇḍa, IV.5. 6.10, IV.40.16, IV.44.94 and Bhāgavata, X.79.14.

Kamalapādam A village which probably lay in the North Arcot district, Tamil Nadu, mentioned in the records of the Vijayanagara kings. SII., I.83.

Kamarpal Lower Palaeolithic site on the Burhabalang (Buḍi-Balam) in the Mayurbhanj district, Orissa.

Kāmarūpa Name of Assam proper, i.e. the Brahmaputra valley. According to the Yoginītantra Kāmarūpa included the country lying between the Karatoyā and the Dikhu from west to east with the mountains of Kanjagiri in the north and the junction of the Brahmaputra and Lākhyā rivers in the south, that is to say it comprised roughly the Brahmaputra valley, Bhutan, Rangpur, Cooch Behar; the north-west of Mymensing, and possibly the Garo hills. Hiuen-Tsang estimated Kia-mo-lu-po to be more than 10,000 li or about 1,667 miles in circuit. According to Cunningham this shows that at that time it must have comprised the whole valley of the Brahmaputra river, together with Kusa-Vihara and Bhutan. The ancient capital of the country, which was known as Prāgjyotiṣapura is generally taken to have stood somewhere near the modern town of Gauhati.

Kāmbalaūli Modern Kamol, west of Talaja on the Setramji river in the south-east of Kathiawar, mentioned in the Timana grant of the time of Caulukya Bhīma II. Ind Ant., XI.337-40.

Kamberikhon The third one of the five mouths of the Ganges as recorded in Ptolemy, VII.1.18,30. It is said to represent the Kobbadak or Kabadak (Kapotākṣa), the Cobbaduck of Rennell's map which flows past Jhinkargaccha in Jessore district, Bangladesh. A more plausible identification would be with the Kumāra (Kumāraka) river which issues out of the Mathābhāṅga branch of the Padmā and joining the Gorai ultimately empties itself into the Haringhata estuary and the Arialkhan.

Kamboja Northern tribe mentioned in later Vedic literature. Their territory has not been satisfactorily identified. Yāska (Nir, II.2) refers to the speech of the Kambojas as differing from that of the others. They were later settled to the north-west of the Indus and were known as Kambujiyas in the old Iranian inscriptions. One of their important settlements lay near Kandahar as the Aramaic version of the Shar-i-kuna inscription of Aśoka appears to have been meant for them. Kāmboja is mentioned as one of the sixteen Mahājanapadas in the Jain texts. The medieval work entitled Śaktisaṅgama-tantra locates the Kāmboja country between the Pir Panjal range in Kashmir and Khurasan, and apparently to the south and south-east of the Balkh region in Northern Afghanistan.

Kambyson The western one of the five mouths of the Ganges mentioned by Ptolemy. It stands for Sanskrit Kapiśā mentioned by Kālidāsa which may be identified with modern Kāsāi which flows past the Midnapur district of West Bengal.

Kāmeśvara Holy resort of the Mother Goddess at Karon in the Balia district, Uttar Pradesh. SP, 87.

Ka-Me-Lu Chinese name of Kāmarūpa, Watters, II.185f.

Kammāsadamma A township in the Kuru country. In the Divyāvadāna, 515 it is called Kalmāsadamya. Dīgha, II.55, 290; Majjhima, I.55, 501, II.26; Samyutta, II.107ff.; Āṅguttara, V.29f and TherīA II.483.

Kāmpilya Capital of South Pañcāla identified with modern Kampil on the old Ganges between Budaon and Farrukhabad. Mait. Sam., III.12.20; Taitt. Sam., VII.7.19.1; Taitt. Br., III.9.6; Śat. Br., XIII.2.8.3; Kāśikā on Pāṇ., IV.2.121; Mbh., I.138.73-74; Rām I.33.19; Jāt., II, 214, III.79, 329, V.21, VI.391; Ava. Nir., 383 and Uttarādhyayana, XVIII.

Kāmpilya Modern Kampli on the southern bank of the Tuṅgabhadra in the Harpet taluka of the Bellary district. SII., III.194.

Kāmraj Moder Sardi in Kashmir, sacred to the goddess Śāradā, mentioned in the Ain, SP.87.

Kāmru, Kamrud Name of Kāmarūpa as recorded by the Muslim historians in the sense of the central town of the country which comprised a part of north Gauhati.

Kamtā Name of the Brahmaputra region of Assam as a whole, used by the Muslim historians who spoke of Kāmarūpa and Kamtā sometimes as synonymous and sometimes as two kingdoms. Gait, HA, 42-43 and KS., (intro) 28-32.

Kāmyakavana A forest on the banks of the Sarasvatī where the Pāṇḍavas went from the Dvaitavana. Mbh., III.36.41 and Vāmana XLI.30-31.

Kanagora Same as Kānyakubja or Kanauj in the Farrukhabad district, Uttar Pradesh, mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.53.

Kaṇakavāhini River in Kashmir which is now called Kankanai flowing past Buthser. RT., I.149-50.

Kanakavalli A village in the Paṅgala-naḍu (q.v.) mentioned in an inscription found on the inner wall of the Perumal temple at Śorapuram near Vellore in North Arcot district.

Kanakhala Site where Rudra destroyed Dakṣa's sacrifice on the Ganges about two miles from Hardwar. There are other holy places bearing the same name on the Narmadā and at Mathura and Gaya.

Kaṇambade-300 Mentioned as Kallambadi in the Kalyāṇi Calukya records, it is modern Kanamodi in the Athani taluka of the Belgaum district. It is referred to in a Yādava inscription from Kokatnur dated S.1157.

Kāñcaṇapura Capital of Kaliṅga-Janapada according to Prajñāpanā 37.

Kāñci Holy resort of the Mother Goddess on the Kopai in the Birbhum district, West Bengal SP, 87.

Kāñcipura Modern Conjeevaram (12°50' N, 79°40' E) in the Chingleput district, the capital of the Pallavas, on the river Palar, about forty-three miles south-west of the Madras city. Its earliest mention is met with in Patañjali's Mahābhāṣya, IV.1.4, IV.2.2. The western and eastern parts of the city are called respectively as Śiva Kāñci and Viṣṇu Kāñci. There is also a Jain Kāñci called Tirupparutti-kunram. It is a city of temples, among which architecturally the most important is the temple of Kailāsa-nātha in which we have the first example of the unified design of a temple-complex with many adjuncts that are to characterise the full-fledged draviḍa temple. The Vaiṣṇava temple known as the Vaikuṅṭha Perumal is also important from architectural point of view. The Mukteśvara, Mataṅgeśvara and Kāmākṣī temples are also celebrated. According to Hiuen Tsang Kan-chih-pu-lo, the capital of the Ta-lo-pi-tu (Draviḍa) country was 30 li in circuit. The region is mentioned by Ptolemy, VII.1. 2 as Arouarnoi or Aruvānāḍu, and the city itself as Nandipatna or Pandipatna, i.e. Kāñcipattana.

Kāndā-Doṅgara Administrative division mentioned in the Rajim stone inscription of Pṛthvīdeva II which may be the southern portion of the former Bindra-Navagadh Zamindary in Madhya Pradesh. CII., IV.453.

Kandahat A fortified city in Gujarat mentioned by Ibn Athir Mahmud. It has been identified by W. Haig with the island of Beyt Shankhodhar, an islet at the north-west corner of Kathiawar, by Buhler with Kanthkot in east Cutch, by Wastson with Gandhvi on the Kathiawar coast a few miles north-east of Miani, by Weil with Gandhar in Broach on the mouth of the Dhādhar river and by Elliot with Khandadar at the north-western angle of Kathiawar.

Kandalia Middle Palaeolithic site on the Khadkai, district Mayurbhanj, Orissa.

Kaṇḍarādityam A village in the Trichinopoly district, Tamil Nadu. Sewell, List, I. 265.

Kandarapura Capital of the Ānanda kings of Andhra region. It was probably situated in the vicinity of modern Chezarla in the Guntur district as is indicated from the inscriptions of the Ānandas.

Kaṇḍaravāḍa A village near Jabalpur (23°10' N, 79°59' E) mentioned in the Jabalpur stone inscription of Jayasimha. CII., IV.333.

Kāndāse(hva)ra Modern Sehawa or Sihoa in the Raipur district situated to the east of Kanker (20°15' N, 81°32' E) or Kākayaradeśa (q.v.) in Madhya Pradesh mentioned in the Rajim inscription of the time of the Kalacuri Pṛthvīdeva II. Ind. Ant., XVII.137.

Kandavalāhāra Viṣaya An administrative division which was probably to the south of Navsāri (21°07' N, 73°40' E), Gujarat.

Kandivli Middle and Upper Palaeolithic site in the suburbs of Bombay.

Kandugal A village in Kanna-Viṣaya (q.v.), modern Kandagal in the Hungund Taluka of the Bijapur district, Karnataka, mentioned in a copper plate from Hyderabad. Ind. Ant., VI.76.

Kandvaho Town mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī as lying on the road from Dhara towards the Deccan. It might be same as the Kognabanda of Ptolemy and is identical with the present town of Khandwa (21°50' N, 76°23' E) in the district of the same name in Madhya Pradesh. ASR, IX.113.

Kaṇḍagiri Same as Kṛṣṇagiri or Black Mountain which is often identified with the Karakorum.

Kanheri The ancient Kṛṣṇagiri (19°12' N, 72°54' E), in the suburbs of Bombay which contains the largest number of rock-cut caves straggling on a single hill. The caves are small and consist of a court with a recess in one of its side-walls over a cistern, a raised pillared verandah approaching from the court by a flight of steps. The hall in larger caves has a few cells by its sides. A few of these caves have on their walls a dazzling profusion of reliefs mostly of Buddha. Excavated in the reign of Yajña Sātakarṇi, the Caitya-gṛha (Cave 3), with a high screened verandah, is an extremely clumsy and crude copy of that of Karla.

Kanhairi Deśa Territory mentioned in the Yādava records which included modern Chalisgaon Taluka (20°33' N, 75°10' E) of the former of East Khandesh district and parts of the Aurangabad and Bhir districts, Maharashtra. Ep. Ind., XXV.209.

Kaṇiṣkapura A city in Kashmir which has been identified with modern Kanespore in the vicinity of Baramula. It is said to have been built by Kaṇiṣka. Later on King Lalitāditya constructed here a huge Vihāra with a Stūpa RT., I.168-69, IV.188.

Kāntipurī City in Mirzapur district, Uttar Pradesh. Brahmaṅḍa III. 13.94-95, Ain., III.305.

Kan-To-Lo Chinese name of Gandhāra as recorded by Hiuen-Tsang.

Kantsarā A city in the Khidingahāra viṣaya (q.v.) in Koṅḡoda maṅḍala (q.v.) mentioned in the Banpur grant of Daṅḍi- Mahādevī. JBORS, V. 564-78.

Kaṅṅāśrama Hermitage of the sage Kaṅṅa on the river Mālinī in the Saharanpur district, Uttar Pradesh. Another Kaṅṅāśrama was on the Carmaṅvatī, four miles South-east of Kota, Rajasthan. Harisvāmin in his com. on Śat. Br., XIII.5.4.13 identifies it with Nāḍapit. Viṣṇu D.S., LXXXV.30., Mbh., III.82.45,88II; Śakuntalā, Act I and Agni, CIX.10.

Kanyā Same as Kumārī (q.v.), Cape Comorin, on the Southern Sea. Bhāgavata, X.79.17.

Kānyakubja Also known as Gādhipura, Kusasthala and Mahodaya it is same as modern Kanauj in the Farrukhabad district, Uttar Pradesh. It was the capital of the Maukhari kings before the time of Harṣavardhana. Subsequently it became the bone of contention to all the major political powers of India, and eventually it came to the hands of the Gurjara Pratihāras. Hiuen-Tsang saw 100 Buddhists establishments in Kānyakubja. According to him the Ganges was on the western side of Kanauj and the country was about 4,000 li in circuit. Ptolemy mentions it as Kanagora and Kanogiza. The Barah grant of Bhoja (AD 836) mentions Kānyakubja-bhukti which included Kālañjara-maṇḍala (Ep. Ind., XIX.18). A Veraval inscription (AD 1169) mentions Vārāṇasī as included in Kānyakubja-viṣaya. According to Al-Bīrūnī Kanauj was the centre of Madhyadeśa or Middle Country.

Kanyāśrama Holy resort of the Mother goddess at Kumārīkuṇḍa near the Kumaria railway station in the Chittagong district, Bangladesh. SP, 88.

century the Kapiśa kingdom extended its sway over the old kingdoms of Lan-po (Laghman), Nagarahāra (Jalalabad) and even Gandhāra, and held Fa-la-na (Bannu) in subjection. It was same as the Capissa of Pliny and the Caphusa of Solinus. According to Ptolemy it was about one hundred fifty five miles north-east of Kabul. According to Hiuen-Tsang, its metropolis was 10 li in circuit.

Kapiśa River in Utkala (Orissa) mentioned in Raghu, IV.38. It may be identified with the Kasai flowing through the Midnapore district, West Bengal.

Kapiśī River mentioned in Pāṇini, IV.2.99. It is the Kapisene of Greek writers.

Kapiśī Same as Kia-pi-shi of Hiuen-Tsang. See under Kāpiśa.

Kāpura An āharā or district, same as Kapura in Baroda, mentioned in the records of the Śaka governor Uṣavadāta.

Karahada-2000 Same as Karahata-4000 of the Kalyāṇī Cālukyan period, it is mentioned in the Yādava records as a region around modern Karhad. The territorial unit included Karhad, Vite, Tasgaon and Kharkundi talukas of the Satara district, Miraj and Sangli in Maharashtra, and the Athani taluka of the Belgaum district.

Karahāṭaka-Viśaya (or 1000) An administrative division mentioned in the records of the Cālukyas of Badami and the early inscriptions of Deccan. Its headquarters seems to have been the modern Karhad in the Satara district, Maharashtra. (Ep. Ind., X. 1909-10-15, Lüders List, ib App. 207). Out of many references to the Karhāṭaka Viśaya in the Rāṣṭrakūṭa records only two—the Karhad CP of S.880 and the Kolhapur CP of S. 882—give better information in regard to its extent (Ep. Ind., IV.281 and JBBRAS, NS, X. 21). Coins of the Kṣtrapa kings ruling upto AD 300 were found here. This place is also mentioned in Mbh., II.31.70; Vik, VIII. 2. See BG I(1) 58.

Karaivari-Āndi-Nāḍu A district mentioned on the north wall of the Perumal temple at Ganganur near Vellore. Since it contained Gāṅgeyanallūr, modern Ganganur, the district must have been around the findspot of the inscription i.e. modern North Arcot. In another inscription found at the same place it is described as a division of Paḍuvur-Koṭṭam. SII.I.77,129.

Karamodā River, same as Karamnāśā, falling into the Ganges above its junction with the Son, mentioned in the Puranic lists of rivers.

Karatoyātata Holy resort of the Mother Goddess at Bhavāni-pura near the bank of the Karatoyā in the Bogra district, North Bengal. SP, 88.

Karattikallu-300 Modern Karadikal in the Raichur district mentioned in the Kalyānī Cālukya records as part of Edadore Nāḍa (q.v.) Ep. Ind., XII. 309.

Karavandapuram Kaḷakkād in Tirunelveli district. It is mentioned in the Madras Museum plates of the Pāṇḍya Neduñjaḍaivan (AD 765-815).

Karavīra Modern Kolhāpura (16°42' N, 74°16' E) in Maharashtra (Mbh., XIII.25.44, Matsya, XIII.41, XXII.76 and Padma, V.17, 205, VI.1083). According to Kālikā, XLIX.71 Karavīra was the capital of Brahmāvarta on the river Dṛṣadvatī. In the Hariv., III.39.50-64 it is mentioned as a city on Sahya near Gomanta hill.

Karavīra Capital of Brahmāvarta on the Dṛṣadvatī in Eastern Punjab according to the Kālikā, but usually identified with Kolhapur (called Karvir) in Maharashtra. SP, 88.

Karbattan Also known as Kar-Pattan and Karambattan, it was a town at the foot of the Himalayan range. The TN (Elliot II.311-12) describes it as a great centre of horse trade.

Kārellikā A village in the Khetahāra-Deśa (q.v.) mentioned in a Goa copper plate of the time of the Cālukyas of Badami. It is modern Karel in the Kheṭa taluka of the Ratnagiri district, Maharashtra. JBBRAS, X.1871-74, 365.

Karempudi Lower Palaeolithic site, thirty-two miles to the east-south east of Nāgārjunikoṇḍa on the Naguleru river.

Karhad A town in the Satara district, Maharashtra, repeatedly mentioned as a district or Viṣaya in the records of the Cālukyas and Rāṣṭrakūṭas, where there is an extensive series of sixty caves on the peak of the Agashiva hill.

Karigavā A viṣaya identified with modern Kargawan near the city of Jhansi, Uttar Pradesh, mentioned in the Pachar grant of the Candella Paramardi. Ep. Ind., X.44-49.

Karkoṭa Holy resort of the Mother Goddess which has been identified with modern Karra, about forty miles west of Allahabad. According to the local tradition Satī's hand fell at this place. SP, 88.

Karkoṭanagara See under Mālavanagara.

Karla Buddhist cave site (18°46' N, 73°29' E) in the Poona district, three miles north of Marivili railway station in the Bombay-Poona line. One of the oldest Buddhist establishments, it contains a dozen rock-cut monasteries, a few rock-cut cisterns and a Caitya-gṛha. The latter, "with its developed architectonic features displaying a pleasing harmony of form and proportions and sculptures of breath-taking beauty, marks the culmination of the early phase of this form of architecture. The largest and most complete of its class and designed on a magnificent scale with an almost epic imagination, it has an important place among the monuments of the world." BM, 154.

Karnāta One of the fifty-six countries mentioned in the Śaktisaṅgama which is said to have extended from Rāmanātha to Śriraṅga. Rāmanātha seems to be either Rāmanāthapuram (former Ramnad) district or the Rāmanātha-maṭha in the Madurai district on the Rāmeśvar-tirtha near the junction of the rivers tungā and Bhadrā. Śriraṅga is either Śrirangam opposite to Tanjavur on the other side of Kaveri or Srirangapattam (Siringapatam). SGAMI, 96.

Kārmaṇeya A fiscal unit of the time of the Cālukyas of Badāmi. It is modern Kamraj in the Surat district. A people of the same name is mentioned in the BṛS.

Karmānta A city in Samataṭa (q.v.) which has been identified with Baḍkāmtā in the district of Tippera, situated twelve miles west of Comilla in Bagladesh. In the records of the Khaḍga kings of East Bengal it is referred to as vāsaka or royal residence.

Karma-Rāṣṭra Northern part of the Nellore and southern part of the Guntur district mentioned in the Koppam Charter of AD 631.

Karna A country mentioned by Lama Tāranātha. M. Shahidullah takes it to be Orissa.

Karnāha Modern Karnāv in the lower valley of the Kṛṣṇā or Kishen Gaṅgā which was the principality of the Khasas. RT., VIII.2485, 2525.

Karṇapuri-Viṣaya Modern Kanur in the Indi taluka, Bijapur district, Karnataka. It was an administrative division under the Rāṣṭrakūṭas. Salotgi ins. Ep. Ind., IV.60.

Karṇasuvārṇa Capital of Śaśāṅka, the king of Gauḍa. It has been identified with Rangamati, six miles south-west of Berhampur in the Murshidabad district, West Bengal.

Karṇāvati A city founded by the Kalacuri Laksmī-Karna. It is modern Karanbel, about a mile from Tripurī, modern Tewar near Jabalpur. Ep. Ind., II.4, XII.212 and JASB VIII (1).489.

Karodaka A village, same as modern Karaondi near Gurgi in Rewa district, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Gurgi stone inscription of Kokalladeva II. CII., IV.227.

Karourā Karur in the Coimbatore district, the royal seat of Kerobothros (Keralaputra), mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.86.

Karṭṭpura Territory mentioned in the Allahabad inscription of Samudragupta. It has been identified with Kartarpur in the Jalandhar district. According to some it even comprised the territory of the Katuria Raj of Kumaon, Garhwal and Rohilkhand.

Kārttikeya Holy resort of the Mother Goddess which is possibly modern Baijnath near Almora in the Kumaon district. SP, 88.

Karugeri A village mentioned in an inscription in the Gaṅgeśvara temple at Ganganur near Vellore. SII., I.129.

Karūr The Cera capital on the Kāverī, represented by the town of the same name in Tamil Nadu.

Kāruṣa People of the Sahabad region of Bihar mentioned in the Puranic lists of Janapadas. They were also known as Bṛhadgṛha or Bṛhadguhā.

Kāsa-Deśa Another name of Kutch as recorded in the Wandha inscription of Rudrasimha I. Ep. Ind., XXXVII.139-46.

Kāśabrada Probably Kāsindra Palaree, about fourteen miles from Ahmedabad. Ras, II.85.

Kasakula Viṣaya An administrative division under the Cālukyas of Bādami and the Rāṣtrakūṭas which seems to have occupied the northern part of the river Tāpī. It included Pariyāja (modern Pariya), Sandhiyara (modern Sandhier), and Sthāvarapallikā (modern Charoli), all belonging to the Olpad taluka of the Surat district.

Kāśaloda-Viṣaya Modern Kusarda, ten miles north-west of Satlana in Sambalpur district mentioned in the Nagpur Museum grant of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya, Ep. Ind., VIII.138-43, XI.101ff., 201.

Kaserumat One of the nine subdivisions of Bhāratavarṣa which lay to the east of Madhyadeśa according to Al-Bīrūnī and between the Mahendra and Śuktimat ranges according to Abul Fazl.

Kāśi Ancient Janapada on the Ganges, the territory around modern Vārāṇasī (q.v.) which came into prominence only in later Vedic age. (Śat. Br., XIII.5.4.19ff; Brhad. Up., II.1.1 and Kauṣ Up., IV.1). The Kāśis and Videhas were closely connected as was natural in view of their geographical position (Br. Up., III.8.2). The Kāśis were also in close connection with the Kosalas as is evident by the compound name Kāśi-Kausaleyas in the Gop. Br., I.2.9. It is mentioned in the Buddhist and Jain texts as one of the sixteen Mahājanapadas with capital at Vārāṇasī. The extent of Kāśi as given in the Jātakas was three hundred leagues, and it was bordered by Kosala on the north, Magadha and Vajji on the east and Vaṃsa (Vatsa) on the south. The epics and the Purānas abound with reference to Kāśi.

Kāsigāma, Kāsinigāma A large village in Kāśi which produced a revenue of one hundred thousand. It was given by Mahākosala, king of Kosala, to his daughter Kosaladevī when she was married to Bimbisāra, king of Magadha. Samyutta, I.82ff; Samyutta A, I.110, 120f.; Jat. II.342 and Dhamma A III.259.

Kāśi-Pāṭaka A small territorial unit in the Hāpyoma-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Gauhati grant of Indrapāla. KS, 116ff.

Kāsmīra-Maṇḍala Ancient name of Kashmir which occurs as the name of a country in the Sindhvādigana in Pānini, IV.3.93. It is also mentioned in the same sense in the Mahābhāṣya (Kielhorn II.119) on Pānini, III.2.114. Ptolemy speaks of it as Kaspeiria and states that the country was situated below the sources of Bidaspes (Vitastā), Sandabal (Candrabhāgā) and Adris (Irāvati). Hiuen-Tsang says that Kāsmīra is about 7,000 li in extent. Stein says that the original extent of Kashmir was confined to the great valley drained by the headwaters of the Vitastā and the minor slopes of the mountains that surround it.

Kāṣṭhāvāṭa Modern Kishtwar (33° 19' N, 75° 48' E) situated on the south-east of the Pir Pantisal Range. RT., VIII.590.

Kaṭakabhukti The region round modern Cuttack in Orissa.

Katāsīn More correctly Katāsinghah (20°32' N. 84°50' E) on the left or northern bank of the Mahānadī. TN, I.588.

Kaṭāha A second capital of the Sailendra kings of Indonesia and Malayasia. It is modern Kedah near Penang and its Tamil form is known as Kaḍāram. The territory around it was known as Kaṭāha-dvīpa in Sanskrit literature. SGAMI, 322.

Kathaioi A people of the Bari Doab whose territory, during Alexander's invasion, lay in the area around Sangala (Sānkala) represented by the modern Gurudaspur region of the Punjab.

Kaṭhehālī A pattalā or administrative division mentioned in the Candravati grant no. 2 of Gāhaḍavāla Candradeva. It was bounded by the rivers Gomatī, Bhāgīrathī and Varāṇā and identified with the Kateher Pargana of the Benaras district, Uttar Pradesh. Ep. Ind., XIV.193.

Kathora Lower Palaeolithic site situated about six miles south-west of the Bina railway station in Madhya Pradesh.

Kātripura Country mentioned in the Allahabad pillar inscription of Samudragupta which seems to have included Kumaun, Almorah, Garwal and Kangra.

Kaṭṭhavāhana A town in Kosala which was situated between Śrāvastī and Benares. Suttani A, II.579.

Kāṭṭuppāḍī A village near the Vellore railway station mentioned in an inscription on the Gangeśvara temple at Gaṅganūr.

Kaṭṭuttumbūr A village belonging to the Paṅgala-nāḍu which is mentioned in an inscription on the inner wall of the Perumal temple at Sorapuram near Vellore in North Arcot district. It was probably another name of Sorapuram. SII., I.78-79.

Kaurāla Territory mentioned in the Allahabad inscription of Samudragupta. It may be Cherala (Cheraia) in Nugur taluk, East Godavari district.

Kauśāmbī Capital of the ancient Vatsa kingdom, modern Kosam (25°17'N, 81°20'E) on the left bank of the Yamunā, about thirty-two miles west-south-west of Allahabad. It was mainly through the efforts of three bankers of the city—Ghoṣita, Kukkuta and Pāvārika—that the Buddhist religion found a strong footing here. The Ghoṣitārāma (q.v.) was graced by the Buddha on more than one occasion. Fa-hian found the Ghoṣitārāma as dominated by the Hīnayānist monks. At the time of Hiuen-Tsang's visit there were more than ten monasteries, but all in utter ruin. The Dragon's cave mentioned by Hiuen Tsang has been identified with the neighbouring Pabhosa hill. Excavations laid bare the remains of a large brick monastery identified on the basis of an inscribed slab with the Ghoṣitārāma monastery. Excavations have also yielded a rich crop of architectural pieces, including carved balustrade pillars and numerous stone sculptures, and a sequence of habitation with a declining phase of the PGW. It has been observed that the mud rampart with a burnt brick facing which enclosed the earliest habitations dates from the earliest period and that the Ghōṣitārāma monastery which was used till its destruction by Hūṇa Toramāṇa had been built almost simultaneously with the introduction of the NBP ware following immediately after the PGW.

Kauśāmbī A fiscal division styled astāgaccha-khaṇḍala of the Adhaḥpatana-maṇḍala (q.v.). It has been identified with Kusumba in the Rajsahi district, Bangladesh. It is mentioned in the Belava copper plate grant of Bhojavarman. In the Rāmacarita Dvorapavardhaṇa, the ruler of Kauśāmbī, is said to have joined Rāmapāla in his expedition against Varendrī. Some scholars want to identify this Kauśāmbī with the Tappe Kusumbi Pargana of the Bogra district, Bangladesh. Ep. Ind., XII.37-43.

Kauśāmyapura Same as Kosam near Allahabad. It is mentioned in a stone inscription from Ajayagaḍh dated vs 1345.

Kauśikā River, also known as suṣka or dried Kauśikā, mentioned in the Nidhanpur grant of Bhāskara (KS, lff.) as the eastern boundary of Mayura-sālmala-agrahāra (q.v.) in the Candrapurī-viṣaya (q.v.). Its identification is uncertain. According to some it is modern Kusiārā in Sylhet while others think it to be the river Kosi.

Kauśikī River, same as the modern Kusī, which flows into the Ganges through Purnea district in Bihar rising from the Himalayas Mbh., I.215,7. III.84.132., Matsya, XXII 63, CXIV.22., Rām, I.34.7-9 and Bhāgavata, IX. 15.5.12.

Kausuli Site of a ruined temple near Ranipur-Jharial at Patna in Orissa.

Kāvanūr A village mentioned in an inscription inside the back gopura of the Mārgasahāyeśvara temple at Virinchipuram. It survives in the same name in the Gudiyātam taluka of the North Arcot district. SII., I.133., Sewell, Lists I.160.

Kāvera People of the Kāverī valley mentioned in the Puranic lists of Janapadas and the Kāvya-mimāṃsā, XVII as inhabitants of Dakṣiṇāpatha. They are also mentioned as Kāverika, Kavevārūka and Kāverya.

Kāveri Also called Dakṣiṇa-Gaṅgā, or Ganges of the south, this celebrated river rising from the Sahya mountain is mentioned in numerous texts. In the Abhidhānacintāmaṇi, its synonym is given as Ardhajāhnavī. Ptolemy mentions it as Khaberos and traces its sources to the Adeisathron or Sahyādri range. Mbh., III.85.22, XIII.166.20; Vāyu XLV. 104, LXXVII. 28; Matsya, XXII.64; Kūrma, II.37. 16-19; Padma, I.39.20; VI.224.3ff; and Śilappadikāram, X.102ff. There is another river of the same name rising in the Rajpipla hills and falling into the Narmadā.

Kāveri-Pattana An emporium mentioned by Ptolemy as Khaberis which lay in Paralia region, the Country of the Toringoi (Cola) at the mouth of the river Khaberos or Kāverī. It was the same as the Camara of the Periplus and the Kāvīrippumpattinam (q.v.) and Puhār (q.v.) mentioned in south Indian literature.

Kavilāsa Same as Kailāsa (q.v.) mentioned in the Yādava inscriptions Ep. Ind., XXIII.194.

Kāvrippūmpaṭṭinam Modern Kaveripattanam a coastal town of Tamil-Nadu, about eight miles to the north of Tranquebar. It was also known as Puhār. According to some it was the Chabaris (Khabaris) emporium mentioned by Ptolemy as lying at the mouth of the Kāveri. The inscriptions found from modern Kāveripattanam and its vicinity leave no doubt as to its identity (ARE, 1919, II.2). The Milinda probably refers to it as Kolapattana (q.v.). In early Tamil literature, besides Puhār, Kāvrippumpattinam was also known as Kākandi and Campā. A detailed description of the city and its foreshore, its industry and commerce, is found in a Tamil poetical work called Pattinappalai. See under Puhār.

Kayamgala Prakrit name of Kejaṅgala.

Kayatha Chalcolithic settlement, about sixteen miles to the east of Ujjain, situated on the right bank of the river Choti Kali Sindh, a tributary of the Chambal, Period I yields only Middle Stone Age tools. Period II is characterised by a sturdy ware microliths, cast copper celts, chisel and bangles, Period III by white painted black and red ware and Period IV by Malwa ware. Most probably Kayatha culture is of independent origin and it was not confined to Kayatha only. Explorations have brought to light some forty sites, suggesting a very wide distribution.

Kāyathā Village, modern Kaita, fifteen miles west of Pendrabandh and three miles beyond the southern limits of the Janjgir tahsil in Bilaspur district, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Pendrabandh plates of Pratāpamalla (K.E. 965). CII., IV.545.

Kāyāvarohana Modern Karvan in the Dabhoi taluka, about fifteen miles south of Baroda. Vāyu, XXIII.221-22; Matsya, XXII.30, and Kūrma, II.44.7-8.

Kāyāvarohana Holy resort of the Mother goddess which has been identified with Karvan in the Dabhoi taluka of the Baroda district, Gujarat. This place is also associated with the tradition of Nakulīśa, an incarnation of Śiva SP, 88.

Kedāra Modern Kedarnath in Tehri-Garhwal. There are five Kedāras, viz. Kedāranātha, Tuṅganātha, Rudranātha, Madhyameśvara and Kalpeśvara (Viṣṇu D.S., LXXXV.17 and UP. Gaz. XXXVI.173). The name is attributed to several other Śaiva pilgrimages in Banaras, Kashmir, Gaya and Kapiṣṭhala (Kapurthala).

Kedārabhūmi The holy city of Kedāra in the Garhwal district, Uttar Pradesh, mentioned in the Gopeśwar inscription of Anekamalla, dated Śaka 1113.

Kekaya People whose territory in the Vedic age lay between the Sindhu and the Vitastā. According to the Puranic tradition (AIHT, 109.264) the Kekayas descended from the Anus (q.v.), which is confirmed by the fact that the Anus of the RV dwelt in the same territory in which we find the Kekayas. Śat. Br., X.6.1.2 and Ch. Up., V.11.4 mention Aśvapati as the king of the Kekayas. According to the Rām., II.68.19-22, VII.113.14 the Kekaya country lay beyond the Vipāśa or Beas and abutted on the Gandharva or Gandhāra Viśaya. The Mbh., VI.61.12, VII.19.7 associates the Kekayas with the Madras. Arrian (Ind., IV) places the Kekians on the river Saranges, apparently a tributary of the Hydraotes or the Ravi. The Ram., II.67.7 informs that the metropolis of Kekaya was Rājagṛha (q.v.) or Girivraja (q.v.) which has been identified by Cunningham (AGI, 188) with Girjak or Jalalpur on the river Jhelum. Jain texts refer to one-half of the Kekaya territory as Aryan and its city called Seyaviyā. A branch of the Kekayas seems to have migrated to Southern India in later times and established authority in Karnāṭaka.

Kekayārdha Half of the Kekaya country with capital at Seyaviyā or Śvetavyā mentioned in the Jain lists of Janapadas as inhabited by the Mlecchas.

Kekind Site of the Nilakaṅṭheśvara temple in Jodhpur, Rājāsthan.

Kenduvilva The birthplace of the poet Jayadeva which has been identified with Kenduli on the bank of the river Ajaya in the district of Birbhum, West Bengal. The name is found variously as Kinduvilva, Tinduvilva, or Sindhuvilva.

Kerala People mentioned in the inscriptions of Aśoka. The Puranic lists of Janapadas refer to them in the sense of the people of the present Malayalam speaking region in the western coast of South India. In all probability they are same as the Cerapādas of the Ait. Br. In the Kāvya-mīmāṃsā and in the epics the Keralas are mentioned as a people of Dakṣiṇāpatha. They have been equated with the Ugras in the Abhidhāna-cintamani. In Periplus 54 Tyndis in Damirica is mentioned as belonging to the kingdom of Cerobothra (Kerala-putra) while Ptolemy, VII.1.86 refers to Karoura (Karur in the Coimbatore district), an inland city of Limyrike (Damirica, Draviḍa or Tamilaka), as the royal seat of the same.

Keramarka Modern Kodamalnar close to Barsur in the Bastar district, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Barsur inscription of Gaṅgā Mahādevī. Ep. Ind., III.164.

Kesarpalle Archaeological site near Gannavaram, Krishna district, where traces of stone circles and cists and in the mid-levels of the habitation area NBP ware sherd were found.

Kesaputta Township and residence of the Kālāma tribe.

Keśavaka Modern Keshwa in the Mahasamund Tāhsil of the Raipur district mentioned in the Kurud plates of Narendra of Śarabhapura. Ep. Ind., XXXI.263ff.

Keśavapura Same as Deogarh (24°32' N, 78°15' E) near the south-western boundary of the Lalitpur subdivision of the Jhansi district, Uttar Pradesh. MASI., LXX.29.

Keśin A branch of the Pañcālas (q.v.) mentioned in Śat. Br., XI. 8.4.6 which dwelt on the river Gumti. The name Keśin-Dālbhya suggests a close connection between the Keśins and the Dālbhyas whom the RV, V.61.17-19 places on the Gomati. From Mbh., IX.41-1-3 it is clear that this Gomati connected with the Dālbhya clan could not have been far away from Naimiṣa (q.v.) and the country of the Pañcālas. It should therefore be identified with the Gumti which flows past near Sitapur.

Ketumāla A varṣa or division of Jambudvīpa to the west of Meru mentioned in the cosmographical section of the Purāṇas. It was called Apara-Godāna by the Buddhists.

Khaberi Same as Kaveri-pattana (q.v.) mentioned as an emporium of the country of Toringoi (Cola) in Ptolemy, VII.1.13.

Khaberos Same as the river Kāverī mentioned in Ptolemy, VII. 1.35 as issuing from the Adeisathron or Sahyādri range.

Khādā Modern Karra, about a mile and a half to the east of Ratanpur (22°17' N, 82°11' E), Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Ratanpur stone inscription of Pṛthvideva II (K.E. 910). CII, IV.493ff.

Khadgapucchanāga Modern Khanbal in Anantanag pargana (33°43' N, 75°17' E) in Kashmir. Haracaritacintāmaṇi, X.251.

Khāḍi Literally estuary, it is referred to as a viṣaya in the Barrackpore grant of Vijayasena and as a maṇḍala in the Sundarvan grant of Lakṣmaṇasena. It is known in the Dākārṇava as one of the Sixty four Plithas and distinguished from Rāḍhā, Vaṅgāla and Harikela. The name survives in the Khāḍi Pargana of the Diamond Harbour subdivision of twenty-four Parganas district, West Bengal. Khāḍi or Khāḍika was split up into two parts by Ganges. The eastern part, Pūrva-khāḍika or Khāḍi proper, was included within the Puṇḍravardhana-bhukti. But Paścima-khāḍika, which lay to the west of the Ganges, was a subdivision of the Vardhamāna-bhukti.

Khurāsāna One of the fifty-six countries described in the Śaktisaṅgama as extending from Hiṅgu pīṭha up to Makkeśa or Mecca. It is Khorasan in the north eastern province of Iran.

Khabnasithi A village in the Bhilsa district of Madhya Pradesh mentioned in a Bhilsa inscription of vs935, Ep. Ind., XXX.210ff.

Khaila-Pātaka A village mentioned in the Bilhari stone inscription of the Kalacuris of Ḍahāla. It is probably represented by the Khilwara, six miles east-north-east of Bilhari (23°48' N, 80°19' E) ASR., IX.104 and CII IV.209.

Khairde Modern Kharab in Murtizapur, Akola district, Maharashtra. Sirso CP of Govinda III, S. 729 and Ep. Ind., XXIII.206.

Kolanura Bhukti An administrative division under the Rāṣṭrakūṭas which consisted of thirty villages. It is modern Konnur on the Malaprabhā in the Navalgunda Taluka of the Dharwar district, Karnataka, Konnur CP of S 782, Ep. Ind, VI.29.

Kolapattana A sea-port on the Coromandel coast mentioned in the Milindap. This may be same as the Kāverippattinam or Pubār (q.v.), the Pattana par excellence on the Coromandel Coast which figures elsewhere in Pali Buddhist literature as well. SBE, I. XLIV., II.269.

Kolāpura Modern Kolhapur (16°42' N, 74°16' E) in Maharashtra celebrated for the temple of Mahālakṣmī. Devī. Bh., VII.38.5, Padma, VI. 176.42 and Brahmāṇḍa, IV.44-97.

Kolāru A village mentioned in the grants of the Eastern Cālukya kings. The name of this village may have something to do with the Kolar or Kolleru lake in the Gudivara taluka. Sewell, Lists, I. 52., Ind. Ant., XIV. 204 and SII., I.52, 62.

Kolavana People, probably of the Kolhapur region of Maharashtra, mentioned in the Puranic lists of Janapadas as belonging to the Aparānta region.

Kolhāpura Deśa Same as modern Kolhapur in Maharashtra. It is mentioned in the Yādava records as an administrative division. JBBRAS, II.264.

Kolhua A village, about two miles to the north-west of Basarh in the Muzaffarpur district of Bihar, where an Aśokan pillar was found. Near the pillar is a small tank called Ramkund which according to Cunningham was the ancient Markaṭa-hrada. There is also a ruined stūpa with an image of Buddha belonging to the Pāla period.

Koll Same as Uraivūr (q.v.) mentioned in the Velvikudi grant of the Pāṇḍya Neḍuñjaḍiyan.

Kolimahāra Viṣaya A district in Samyāna Maṇḍala (q.v.), the area around Sanjan in the present Thana district, Mahāraṣṭra, mentioned in the Chincani inscription of S.848. The name suggests that it was the region of the tribes called the Kolis and the Mahārs. Ep. Ind., XXXII: 45.

Koliya Kinsmen of the Śākya who had two settlements, one in Devadaha and the other in Rāmagrāma. The former was separated from the Śākya territory by the river Rohinī, on one bank of which stood Lumbinivana and on the other stood Devadaha. Ramagāma lay to the east of Kapalaxastu (q.v.).

Kolkhoi An emporium in the country of the Kareoi in the Kolkhic Gulf, where there is the pearl-fishery, mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.10. It is same as the Colchi of the Periplus in the Pandyan kingdom which has been identified with modern Kolko near Tutikorin.

Kollaga-Sannivesa A small town near Nalanda which was visited by Mahāvīra and Gośāla according to the Bhagavatisūtra account.

Kollam Ancient name of Quilon (8°54' N, 76°38' E) in Kerala. The name is found in the Cola and Pāṇḍya records.

Kollāpuram Same as Kolhapur mentioned in the Cola inscriptions. SII., I.134.

Kollidam Same as the Coleroon, a branch of the river Kāverī, which falls into the bay below Porto Novo.

Koḷlippākkai Same as Kollipāke, one of the capitals of the Western Cālukya king Jayasimha III mentioned in the Tirumalai inscription of Rajendra Cola. It is modern Kulpak about forty-five miles north-east of Hyderabad. In the thirteenth century it was a province of the Kākatiyas. SII., I.96, 99 and Ind. Ant., XLIV.213-15.

Kolu-Vartani An administrative division comprising a part of present Ganjam district mentioned in the inscriptions of the Gaṅga kings of Kaliṅga. Krishna Sastri wanted to identify this place with Varāha-vartani (q.v.) also mentioned in the Gaṅga records, on the ground that kola is a synonym of varāha Ep. Ind., III.127, IV. 183-93.

Kolvagiri Holy resort of the Mother goddess, possibly modern Coorg or Kodagu which means steep mountains; but more probably it has to be identified with Kolhapur in Maharashtra. Pargiter. MP, 364 n; IC, VIII.49 and SP.89.

Kolvi Buddhist site (24°01'N, 75°50'E) in the Jhalawar district, Rajasthan. The exposed caves, excluding the free-standing stūpas number about 45, mostly consist of a plain cell, oblong or square, with a single door and rock-cut beds. There are two specimens of double-storied dwelling caves. The freestanding stūpas and also the reliefs have a family affinity with those of Dhamnar (q.v.). There are no less than five sanctuaries, often with a cave juxtaposed on the opposite side. All of them are plain oblong chambers with a single door and have an image of Buddha seated in dhyāna-mudrā.

Komaria Same as Cape Comorin or Kumārikā mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.9.

Komarañce Modern, Koroci four miles north-west of Alta, Kolhapur, Alta CP, Ind. Ant., VII.211.

Kompāraka A village in the Pancāla viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Neulpur grant of Subhākara. It lay in the Cuttack region Ep. Ind., XV.1-8.

Komyāna A village in the Voḍā-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Antirigam grant of Yaśabhanja. It has been identified with Kohomona in the Chatrapur taluka of the Ganjam district, Orissa. Ep. Ind., XVIII.302.

Koṇā-Koṇa Same as Konarak. JASB., LXV.229ff.

Koṇārka A Ksetra or region of Sun (Arka) worship in Orissa, situated on the sea-shore near the northernmost end of the sandy strip stretching from the Chilka lake to the Prācī river, about twenty-one miles north-east of the Puri town, celebrated for its famous sun-temple known as black pagoda erected during the reign of Narasiṃha I (AD 1238-64). The temple, now a deserted fragment, is situated in the centre of a quadrangular court and is designed in the shape of a huge chariot drawn on exquisitely carved wheels by a team of seven-spirited horses. Crossing the nāṣa-maṇḍapa one may descend to the courtyard and the pyramidal pile of the jagamohana, i.e. the audience chamber, both united to represent the sun-chariot. The image was probably named Koṇāditya, a name of Sun mentioned in the Brahma, XXVIII. 18, after which the site came to be known.

Konatinthi A village in the Khātiyā-viṣaya (q.v.) of the Khiñjali-maṇḍala (q.v.) mentioned in a Baudh grant of Raṇabhanja. It has been identified with modern Kontunai, about two miles south of Baudh, in the Baudh-Khondmals district. Ep. Ind., XII.321-35 XVIII.300.

Kondane Buddhist site (18°51' N, 73°23' E) consisting of a small but interesting group of caves in the Kolaba district, Mahārashtra. The spectacular Caitya-grha bears a strong family resemblance with Bhaja.

Koṇḍapalli Country which comprised modern Krishna district in the eleventh and twelfth centuries.

Kondivte Buddhist site (19°09' N, 72°53' E) near Andheri railway station in the suburbs of Bombay. It has 18 caves, arrayed in two groups—15 on the east and 3 on the west sides of the summit of a hill. This series is also particularly remarkable for an interesting caitya-grha.

Kongal-Desa The region now represented by the Mandya taluka, Mysore district, Karnataka, where a village called Kadalur (modern Kadlur) was an important Jain centre. Ep. Ind., XXXVI.97ff.

Kongoda Kingdom in Orissa which extended from the Chilka lake, or perhaps even further north, to Mahendragiri mountains in Ganjam district, reaching in the west of the hills which now form the western boundary of Kalahandi. This kingdom has been described by Hiuen-Tsang as Kung-yuto. Originally an administrative division it later came to denote the entire southern Tosali, while the northern portion of the latter came to be known as Udra or Odra. Koṅgodamaṇḍala frequently occurs in the records of the Kara kings of Orissa. In the Ganjam grant no. 2 of Danḍi-mahādevī it is mentioned as belonging to Dakṣiṇa Kosala which may be a mistake for Dakṣiṇa-Tosala, Ep. Ind., VI.140-42.

Koṅgu Deśa The districts of Coimbatore and Salem. It became in the ninth century the bone of contention between the western Gaṅga, Pallava and Pāṇḍya imperialists.

Koṅkal Modern Kunigal in Bangalore district mentioned in the Hosur copper plate of the time of the Cālukyas of Kalyāna. Ind. Ant., VIII.96, XXX.222.

Koṅkal Viśya An administrative division mentioned in the Hosur copper plate of the time of the Cālukyas of Badami. It has been identified with Kunigal taluka in the Bangalore district, Karnataka. Ind. Ant., VIII.96.

Koṅkaledḍa Modern Koknara in Bora Sambhar, Sambalpur district, four miles from Marsinghnath, mentioned in the Patna grant no. 1 of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya.

Koṅkana Same as the modern Konkan region on the western sea coast of India, often described as deśa (country) and viśaya (administrative division) in inscriptions. It corresponded roughly to the Aparānta of the traditional conception and Ariake of Ptolemy. As a viśaya it is mentioned in the Nerur copper plate of the time of the Cālukyas of Badami. Koṅkana deśa is mentioned in the Yādava records as an administrative division comprising parts of Thana district and parts of the Salsette island. Ind. Ant., IX. 130; Ep. Ind., XXIII.281, XXV. 199, 2nd JBBRAS V.183.

Koṅkaṅgrāma Modern Konkangaon in the Sangamner taluka of the Ahmednagar district. In the Yādava records it is mentioned as situated in Śrīnagara 2500 (q.v.) which was a part of Seuna-deśa (q.v.).

Korkai Site of Śiva temple in the Tirunelveli district. The temple has a cubical sanctum topped by a square śikhara. The basement is high and a short parapet with a frieze of animals in high relief all along the cornice is seen.

Korkai See under Korgāra.

Kosala People of the Oudh region, mentioned in association of the Videhas (q.v.) and Kāśis (q.v.) in the Śat. Br., I.4.1. 1ff., XIII.5.4.4. and Sāṅkh. S.S. XVI.29.5. Videgha Māthava, the Chief of the Videhas, is spoken of as carrying the sacrificial fire from the bank of the Sarasvatī over Kosala eastward across the Sadānīrā, and as establishing a settlement which was known as Videha. It appears that the Kosala-Videhas were allied tribes and that there was some difference and rivalry between these and the Kuru-Pāñcālas. The later division of Kosala into northern and southern is not known in the Vedic literature, According to Rām, II.49.11-12, Kosala was bounded by the river Sarpikā or Syandikā in the south. Its capital at the time of Janaka was Ayodhyā (q.v.). In the Buddhist texts Kosala is mentioned as one of the sixteen Mahājanapadas with capital at Śrāvastī near the border of Gonda and Bahraich districts in the Uttar Pradesh. According to Rhys Davids Kosala included Banares and Saketa and had the Ganges for its southern boundary and the Gaṇḍaka for its eastern boundary. The northern frontier of Kosala was the hills of modern Nepal.

Kośalā Capital of Dakṣiṇa Kośala (q.v.).

Kaśalā River near Ayodhyā. Padma, I.39.11, VI.206.13, 207 35-36, 208-27.

Kosalai-Nāḍu Same as Dakṣiṇa Kośala (q.v.) mentioned in the Tiruvālangāḍu plates of Rajendra Cola as one of his conquered territories. It was the Kiao-sa-lo of Hiuen-Tsang. It corresponded to the upper valley of the Mahānadi and its tributaries.

Kosamba-Pattalā An administrative division identified with Kosam near Allahabad on the left bank of the Yamuna mentioned in the Bengal Asiatic Society's grant no. II of Jayacandra. Ind. Ant., XVIII.136-37, Ep. Ind., XI 139-46. JRAS, 1927, 694ff.

Kosāmbī Capital of the Vamsas (q.v.) which has been identified with modern Kosam near Allahabad where excavations have yielded things of archaeological interest. According to Suttani 1010ff. it was connected with the major cities of north India by a high road. The Vinaya II.290 refers to a water route from Rājagṛha to Kosambi. In Buddhist commentarial literature it has been located on the bank of the Yamuna. Hiuen Tsang visited Kiao-shang-mi or Kosambi where he saw ten monasteries in bad condition, a number of Deva temples of the non-Buddhists and the ruins of the famous Ghoṣitārāma monastery. Watters, I.365-66.

Kosāmbī Modern Kosamdih, eight miles from Mallar in the district of Bilaspur, mentioned in the Malhar inscription of Jājalladeva (K.E. 919). Ep. Ind., I.39ff.

Kosikī A branch of the Ganges identical with the Kusī.

Koṭāṭavi A country mentioned in the Rāmacarita. Its king Vīraguṇa is said to have joined Rāmapāla in his expedition against Varendrī. It may be identified with Koteśvara to the east of Visnupur in the Bankura district, West Bengal. The Ain, II.144 refers to Mahal Kot-des. According to Beams (JRAS, 1896, 752) it was a large pargana in the northern and central part of the Puri district. The former identification seems more likely.

Kot Diji Chalcolithic settlement on the national highway in Khairpur division, about fifteen miles to the south of Khairpur town which has yielded the pre-Harappan culture, an intermingling level and the Harappan culture. The Kot Diji pottery is thin, pinkish and wheel-made and in contrast to the Harappan thick black-on-red ware it is never burdened with decorations. From the Harappan levels have been found flat blade-axe, arrow-heads, chisels, double and single bangles, finger rings, etc.

Kotia Site of a cemetery situated in Allahabad district on the Deoghat-Allahabad highway running along the right bank of the Belan.

Koṭigāma A village of the Vajjians situated on the northern bank of the Ganges in the vicinity of Bhaddiyanagara. Samyutta V.431.

Koṭisvara Name attributed to several tīrthas in Punjab and South India. It may also be a place of the same name on the western shore of Kutch, close to the Indus and the ocean. Vāmana XXXIV.29, BG. V.229-31.

Koṭivarṣa Often mentioned as a viṣaya in the Puṇḍravardhana bhukti (q.v.) in which were included the Gokalikā and Halāvarta maṇḍalas. The headquarters of the viṣaya has been identified with the medieval Diw-kot or Devakoṣa. The ruins of the city are found about eighteen miles south of Dinajpur town in the village of Bangarh.

Koṭṭaikarai Western boundary of the ancient Cola country. According to the Tamil tradition, Koṭṭaik-karai means 'fortbank' and as such it refers to the great embankment of which traces are still found in the Kulittalai taluk of Trichinopoly district, Tamil-nāḍu.

Koṭṭadaka Either Kotada or Koṭah in Rajasthan.

Koṭṭūra Territory mentioned in the Allahabad inscription of Samudragupta. Saletore identifies it with Kottura in the Kudligi Taluka, Bellary district. Others identify it with Kothoor in Ganjam district. Satbhanthaler identifies Koṭṭūra with Kotturu near Tuni in East Godavari district.

Kottura-Nāḍa Modern Kothur in the Jigalur taluka of the Chitaldurg district. It is mentioned as a territorial unit in the Yādava records. EC. II. J.30.

Kouei-Chouang Original Kuṣāṅa principality located in the land between Chitral and the Panjshir.

Kou-Shih-Na-Ka.Lo Chinese name of Kusinagara as recorded by Hiuen Tsang.

Kovalli Archaeological site situated in Bijapur district, Karnataka, about 21 km north of the town Bagalkot.

Kramavarta Modern Kamelankoth in Kashmir. RT. V.39.

Kratha The Vidarbha region mentioned in a Khajuraho inscription of the Candellas. (Ep. Ind., I.145). The Mbh., II.14.21 refers to Kratha-Kauṣikān in connection with the Bhojas and Pāṇḍvas.

As early as in 1848 Major Kittoe collected ten cart-loads of Buddhist relics and deposited them to the Indian Museum. The site was visited by Cunningham in 1861 and 1879 who noticed three well defined mounds and a few images and it was identified by him with the Kukkutapāda-giri mentioned by Fa-hian and Hiuen Tsang. In course of a digging in this place in 1930 one of the richest hoards of bronze objects came to light. More than 200 pieces of this hoard, including 148 Buddhist and 8 Brahmanical images of fine workmanship, detached parts of images, stūpas, bells, etc. are now in the possession of the Patna Museum.

Kurmagrāma A village in the suburb of Rājagṛha which was visited by Mahāvira and Gośāla according to the Bhagavatsūtra account.

Kuru Land people. The Kurus do not appear as a people in the RV. In post-Ṛgvedic times the Bhāratas (q.v.) and the Trtsus coalesced with the Purus to form the Kuru people. The AV, XX.127.7-10 speaks of the Kuru king Parikṣit whose kingdom roughly corresponded to modern Thanewar, Delhi and the upper Gangetic doab. The kingdom, according to epic tradition, stretched from the Sarasvatī to the Ganges. It was divided into three parts, Kurujāngala (q.v.) Kurukṣetra (q.v.) and Kuru-proper. The Kuru-proper was probably located in the district around Hastināpura on the Ganges in the present Meerut district. Hastinapura, or Nāgasāhvaya, the original capital of the Kuru country, was abandoned during the reign of Nicaḥṣu and the centre of royal activities was shifted at Kausambī. In post-Ṛgvedic literature the Kurus are coupled with the Pañcālas and their territory is referred to as an ideal one in regard to speech, manners and rituals. This territory is declared in the Ait. Br., VIII.14 to be the middle country (Madhyadeśa). A group of the Kuru people still remained further north—the Uttarakurus beyond the Himalaya.

Kurujāngala Probably a wild region of the Kuru realm that stretched from the Kāmyaka forest on the banks of the Sarasvatī to Khāṇḍava near the Yamunā (Mbh., III.5.3). The Purānas locate it between the Sarasvatī and the Dṛṣadvatī. Some scholars suggest that it is Sirhind in Punjab. Matsya, XXI.9, 28; Vāyu, LXXVII.93; Vāmana, XXII.47; Kūrma, II.37.36; Bhāgavata, III.1.24; X 86.20.

Kurukṣetra Land of the Kurus and the site of the Bhārata war. It is regarded particularly as a sacred country in Pañc. Br., XXV.10; Śat. Br., IV.1.5.13; XI.5.1.4; XIV.1.1.2; Ait. Br., VII.30; Mait. Sām, II.1.4; IV.5.9; Jaim. Br., III.126; Sān. S.S. XV.16.11; etc. Within its boundaries flowed the rivers Dṛṣadvatī, Sarasvatī, and Āpayā. Here too, was situated a lake called Śaryānavant, According to Tāitt. Ār., V.1.1. it was bounded by the Khāṇḍava on the south, the Turghna on the north and the Parīṇah on the west. The Mbh., III.83.4ff. locates it between the Sarasvatī and the Dṛṣadvatī. It roughly corresponds to the present Kurukṣetra district of Haryana.

Kurumbetta Kampana Modern Kurubetta (Shindi) on the river Malaprabhā in the Gokak Taluka, Belgaum district. It is mentioned in the Kalholi inscription of S.1127. JBBRAS., X.220.

Kurutakunṭe A village in the Belvala-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the spurious Kurtakoti copper plate of Vikramāditya dated S.532. It is identified with Kurtakoti, the findspot of the copper plate, in the Godag Taluka of the Dharwar district, Ind. Ant., VII.1878, 219.

Kuruvatti Site of the Mallikārjuna temple in the Bellary district.

Kusasthali Same as Dvārkā (22°14' N, 69°01' E) and capital of Ānarta. The name is also applied to denote the capital of Kosala, and Kuśāvati or Kusinārā where occurred Buddha's Nirvāṇa. Viṣṇu, IV.1.64, 81; Matsya, XII.22; LXIX.9; Vāyu, LXXXVI.24; Bhāgavata, VII.14.31; IX.3.28; XII.12.36; Brahmāṇḍa, III.61.10; Rām, VII.107.17; SBE, XI.248.

Kuśāvati Capital of Kosala on the Vindhya slopes where Kuśa, son of Rāma, ruled. (Rām, VII.107.7; Vāyu, LXXXVIII.199;). The Mahā-sudussana sutta (SBE, XI 248) says that Kuśāvati was another name of Kusinārā.

Kuśāvarta Holy place near Nāsik. Visnu D.S. LXXXV.11; Brahma, LXXX.2; Matsya, XXII.69; BG, XVI.651.

Kuśika Same as Gādhipura and Kānyakubja mentioned in the Kamauli grant of Govindacandra dated V.S.1184. Ep. Ind., IX.304, XXVI.68ff; Ind. Ant., XVIII.11ff;

Kusinagara, Kusinārā Buddhist site near the town of Kasia (26°44' N, 83°55' E) in the district of Deoria, Uttar Pradesh. It was declared by Buddha himself as one of the four great places which a Buddhist should visit. According to Hiuen Tsang, Aśoka built three Stūpas here. Numerous other Stūpas were seen by him as well as by other Chinese pilgrims like Fa-hian and I-tsing. The focus of the ruins at the main site is a Stūpa known as Nirvāṇa-Caitya. The chamber of the Stūpa contained Buddhist relics as is known from excavation. The excavated monasteries, including the partially exposed ones, number not less than eight. About a furlong to the south-west of the main site is a seated stone image of Buddha locally called Mātha-kuār. Its original shrine is lost which is replaced by a modern one. Nearly a mile to the east of Māthā-kuār shrine is a colossal stūpa, about 50 feet high, locally known as Rāmabhār-stūpa and believed to represent the spot of the cremation of the Buddha. It was the capital of the Mallas and the place of Buddha's demise. Its other names were Kusinagarī, Kusigrāma and Kusāvati, Dīvyā, 152ff, Dīgha, II.146, 170, Jāt, I.392, V.278). Hiuen-Tsang called it Kou-shih-na-ka-lo (Watters II.25ff). It was situated on the trade route extending from Śrāvastī to Rājagṛhā and on the western bank of the river Hiraṇyavati.

Kusumanagara Another name of Pāṭaliputra mentioned in the Paletha record of Kalyāṇavarman. ARIE, 1968-69, 4, CII, III.94.

Kusumadhavaja Kusumapura Name of Pāṭaliputra.

Kuṭi City of ancient Kambuja (Campuchia) which has been identified with modern Bantay Kdei to the east of Ankor Thom. SGAMI, 321.

Lakṣmaṇāvati City named after the Sena King Lakṣmaṇasena. Same as Gauḍa (Gaur), this city (subsequently known as Lakhnauti or Lakhnawati) served as the capital of the Muslim power of Bengal for a long time. It stood on the bank of the Ganges close to its junction with Mahanandā about twenty five miles below Rajmahal. The Ganges has now changed its course and the ruins of this city no longer touched the Ganges at any point. Though it had to reckon with a rival in Pandua, Gaur or Lakhnauti retained its importance till the days of Akbar.

Lalchak A Buddhist site in the Taxila region where there is a group of four small mounds situated to the north-east corner of Sirsukh (q.v.). The mounds covered the remains of a Buddhist settlement comprising a monastery, dated to the 3rd or 4th century AD and two Stūpas.

Lalitā Holy place same as modern Lalitpur in the Jhansi district of Uttar Pradesh. SP, 89.

Lalitpur Palaeolithic site on the river Shahzad in Madhya Pradesh where within the area of one mile from the railway station relics of primitive workshops have been discovered intended to shape tools from sandstone imported probably from Jiron. The Chatrapal temple site, about a mile from Lalitpur railway station and about a mile-and-a half from the Shahzad river, was a secondary workshop site.

Lambatai People, same as the Lampāka or Laghman (Lamghan), living below the sources of the river Koa (Kabhā or Kabul) according to Ptolemy, VII.1.42.

Lampaka People of Lamghan or Laghman in Eastern Afghanistan mentioned in the Puraṇic lists of Janapadas as inhabitants of Uttarāpatha. In certain purāṇas they are located as residing on the Cakṣu or Vamkṣu or Oxus. Rājaśekhara mentions them as Limpaka. They are the same as Lambatai (q.v.) of Ptolemy and Lan-po of Hiuen Tsang.

Lāṅgala Lang-kie-lo of Hiuen Tsang, which was the way to the Western Women's country. Its capital was Su-t'u-li-ssu-fa-lo or Strīśvara.

Langhnaj A railway station on the meter gauge line between Ambaliyaṣan and Vijapur in Mehsana district, Gujarat, where microliths have been found in a stratified context. The lowest level or Period I is marked by microliths and a few tiny pot-sherds. The levels of Period II have yielded the same material but augmented by more pots, some polished neolithic tools and a copper knife. Period III starts with iron.

Lañjikā-Maṇḍala An administrative division, same as Lanji in the district of Balaghat, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Ratanpur inscription of the Kalacuri Jājalladeva. Ep. Ind., I.32-39.

Laṅkā Same as Ceylon or modern Śrīlaṅkā. The name is found in the epico-puraṇic literature of India and also in the Cola epigraphs. Al-Birūnī called it the Cupola of the earth. The Greek writers called it Taprobane, the Indian equivalent of which was Tāmraparṇī. In the Purāṇas it is mentioned as one of the nine subdivisions of Bhāratavarṣa and is called Tāmraparṇa and Siṃhala.

Lar-Desh Same as Lāṭa-deśa or Southern Gujarat mentioned by Al-Birūnī according to whom it was 42 farsakh to the south of Anhilwara and had two capitals at Bhiroj (Broach) and Rihanjur (Navsari).

Larike Same as Lāṭa-deśa or South Gujarat which according to Ptolemy, VII.1.4 contained the mouth of the river Mophis or Mahī. "The parts east of Indo-Scythia along the coast belong to the country of Larike and here in the interior to the west of the river Namados (Narmadā) is a mart of commerce, the city of Barygaza." VII.1.62.

Lāṭa-Deśa Southern and Central Gujarat according to the Rewah stone inscription of Karṇa (Ep. Ind., XXIV.110; cf. ibid., IX.278-80). According to Bühler, it was the district between the Mahī and Kim rivers and its chief city was Broach. According to the Rāṣṭrakūṭa records it comprised the maṇḍalas of Kheṭa and Lāṭa, i.e. modern Kaira on the north and Daman on the south. In the Pali chronicles of Ceylon its capital is mentioned as Siṃhapura or Sihapura which has been identified with Sihor. It is mentioned as Ilāla in the Tamil inscriptions. It was same as Ptolemy's Larike which lay to the east of Indo-Scythia along the sea-coast. Lāṭa may also be the Rāḍhā country in West Bengal which is mentioned in the Jain texts as Lāḍha. In the latter case the capital city Siṃhapura (Siṃhapura) may be identified with Siṃhapura or Singur in the Hooghly district. JASB, 1910, 604; CHI, (1) XXV; IHQ II.6.

The inland cities of Limyrike to the west of the Pseudostomos were Naroulla or Nalloura, Kouba or Kouma and Paloura.

Liptatuṅga Probably same as Lupattara-khandā (q.v.), it is modern Lepta, six miles north of Bolangir, mentioned in the Patna grant no. 1 of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya. Ep. Ind., XI, 101ff.198.

Lohaggala Village visited by Mahāvīra during his long penance. It has been identified with Lohardagga in the Ranchi district, Bihar.

Lohara A principality of Kashmir on the north-west of Rajapuri, modern Rajauri, which included the valley now known as Loharin.

Lohārā Modern Lohar, four miles north by north-west of Murambi, in the Akola district, Maharashtra. Sirso CP of Govinda III, Ep. Ind., XXIII.218.

Lohārgala Modern Lohaghat in the Kumaon district mentioned in the Varāha Purāna, (CXL.5; CXLIV.10; CLI.1-83) as a place in the Himalayas sacred to Viṣṇu.

Lohita A river, same as the Śoṇa, mentioned in Mbh., XIII.166.21. In Brahmāṇḍa, II.16-27 Lohita seems to be meant for Brahmāputra.

Lohasihāni A village in the Viṣaya of Vikrauni mentioned in the Garra grant (b) of the Candella Trailokyavarman. It has been identified with Lohani in Bijahar (24°23' N, 79°12' E) in Chhatarpur, district. (Bundelkhand) Madhya Pradesh. Ep. Ind., XVI.272-77.

Lolsarā A village in Gidāṇḍa-maṇḍala (q.v.) mentioned in the Kudopali grant of Mahābhavagupta II Bhīmaratha (Ep. Ind., IV.254-59). It has been identified with the village of the same name in Bargarh Tahsil of Sambalpur district. Ep. Ind., XI.201.

Lokkigundi Modern Lakkundi, situated seven miles to the south-east of Gadag in the Dharwar district, Karnataka, which is famous of a Jain temple in Calukyan style.

Lonārakuṇḍa Modern Lonar, a salt lake in the Buldana district of Mahārashtra. In the Padma, VI.176.41 it is located in Viṣṇu-Gayā. This tradition is also maintained in the Ain, II.230-31 which states that this region was called Bishan Gaya by the Brāhmaṇas.

Lothal Harappan settlement in Saragwada village, Ahmedabad district, Gujarat, being nearly sixty miles due north of the Ahmedabad city. It is situated in an alluvial marshy lowland called bhal almost at the junction of north-eastern end of Saurashtra Peninsula and mainland Gujarat. Originally the site must have been on the confluence of the Bhogava and the Sabarmati which is now removed to a distance of nearly two miles to the south-west of Lothal. Here three cultural sequences have been observed: Pre-Harappan, Mature Harappan and Decadent or Late Harappan. The town was divided into six blocks, each built on extensive mid-brick platforms and connected with each other by streets. A trapezoidal brick structure with an overall measurement of 710' × 124' with inlet and outlet channels is the most important structure, identified as a dockyard. The copper-bronze repertoire includes a mirror, needle fish-hooks, chisels, drill-bit, fragment of a fine saw, etc. The evidence of carts, boats, horses, etc. is attested to by the terracotta models.

Ludrava Modern Ludorva, about ten miles west by north of the town of Jaisalmer. Elliot, IV.180.

Lumbini Birthplace of Buddha, modern Runimidei (27°28' N, 83°16' E) in district Bhairhwa, Nepalese Tarai. Besides the Aśokan pillar locating the site of the Buddha's birth, the place contains numerous Buddhist relics. The site with its ruins largely corresponds to Hiuen Tsang's account of the La-fa-ni grove. It was also visited by Fa-hian and Wu-kung. Its traditional location is on the bank of the river Rohinī between Kapilavastu and Devadaha.

Lupattarā-Khaṇḍa A territorial unit mentioned in the Sonpur grant of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya. It is modern Lepta, six miles south-east of Bolangir Ep. Ind., XI.93-95.

M

Ma'bar The coast of South India from Quilon to Nellore. The name finds mention in Marco Polo's account. By the term Ma'bar the Muslim historians meant the Pāṇḍya country, the boundary of which varied from time to time.

Maccha, Matsya One of the sixteen Mahājanapadas which lay to the south or south-west of Indraprastha and to the west of Sūrasena and included a considerable portion of Rajasthan. The Matsyas were prominent Kṣatriya tribe from the Vedic period. According to the Mbh., IV.4.35; IV.13.3; IV.14.1 the capital of the Matsyas was Virāṭanagara which has been identified with Bairat (q.v.) situated in the midst of a circular valley surrounded by low hills, one hundred five miles to the south-west of Delhi and forty one miles north of Jaipur. Dīgha, II.200; Jāt, VI.280f.

Mācchagrāma Name of a village and of a viṣaya mentioned in the Ganjam grant no 1 of Netrabhaṅja. It is represented either by Machgaon in the Cuttack district or by Majhigram in Berhampur, Orissa. Ep. Ind., IX.272, XVII.301-03.

Macchikāsaṇḍa A township in Kāśi, about 30 leagues away from Śrāvastī. Samyutta, IV.281; Vinaya, II.15f; II.15f; Dhamma A, II.79.

Mādamāliṅgam A locality near the Bay of Bandon, S.E. Asia, mentioned in Cola inscriptions.

Madanapura A village mentioned in the Varidurga grant of the Candella Madanavarman which has been identified with the modern village of the same name in the Jhansi district, Madhya Pradesh, Ep. Ind., IV.158.

Madapalliparṣu A village in the north-eastern boundary of Gonturu (q.v.) mentioned in a grant on the Eastern Cālukya king Amma I. SI, I.43.

Madaran Area around the Arambagh subdivision of the Hooghly district, West Bengal. The name is a corruption of Mandāra i.e. Aparā-Mandāra (q.v.) which later came to be known as Mandāran. In the thirteenth century this region was a vassalage of the Orissan king Narasiṃha which was subsequently captured by the Turkish general Yuzbak. Ruins of its fortress (Garh-Mandaran) are still visible. In the Ain-i-Akbari Madaran is mentioned as a Sarkar or administrative division.

Madda, Madra Vedic tribe of northern and western Punjab. During the epic period, and also that of the texts of early Buddhism, the Madras possessed the region which is now identical with the modern district of Sialkot between the Chenab and the Ravi. Cunningham (AGI 185) located the Madra country between the Ravi and the Jhelum. The capital of the Madras was Sāgala or Sākala (q.v.) which is identified with modern Sialkot.

Madhumata Another name of Kashmir according to the Abhidhāna-cintāmaṇi.

Madhumati Name of three Indian rivers. The first one is in Kashmir which falls into the Vitastā (Vik, XVIII.5). The second one flows through Bakharganj district of Bangladesh and falls into the Bay of Bengal. The third one joins the river Sindhu in Central India (Mālati, IX.4). It is modern Mohwar or Madhuwar which rises near Ranod in Madhya Pradesh, and passing by Karara falls into the Sindhu. There is also a very small stream called Mahua, one mile south of Terahi and five miles south-east of Ranod which may be the Madhumati mentioned in the Bilahri stone inscription of Yuvarāja II. CII. IV.208.

Madhupaghna Another name of Madhurā (q.v.) according to the Abhidhānacintāmaṇi and the Vaijayantī.

Madhupuri Same as Mathura Bhāgavata, VII.14.31; Vīṣṇu, I.12.2-4.

Madhura Same as Mathura, the capital of the Sūrasena country and Madura, the ancient capital of the Pāṇḍyas, also known as Dakṣiṇa (southern) Madhura. Madhura is only the Tamil way of pronouncing Mathura.

Madhuravana Same as Madhuvana or Madhura (Mathura), mentioned in the Mathura Buddhist image inscription of Huiṣka. Luders', List nos. 288, 291.

Madhuvana A locality on the Yamunā, said to have been founded by Śatrughna, which is now represented by Maholi, five miles to the south-west of present Mathura. Kūrma, II.35.9; Varāha, CLIII.30; Vāmana, LXXXIII.31, XC.14; Bhāgavata, IV.8.42, IX.11.14.

Ma Dhurvedha Same as Madhuvan, a small hamlet about four miles from Turenga near Kulapadar, fifteen miles south-east of Sirpur, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Sirpur Lakṣmaṇa temple stone inscription of Mahānvagupta. ICPB, 103-04.

Madhuvēṅ A river mentioned in an inscription found from Tirahi in Madhya Pradesh. It is same as Mahwar on which Tirahi is situated.

Madhyadeśa The Middle country. The term Madhyadeśa is not Vedic, but it is represented in the Ait. Br., VIII.14.3. by the term madhyamā pratiṣṭhā diś, the middle fixed region', the inhabitants of which are stated to be the Kurus, the Pañcālas, the Vasas and the Uśīnaras. The latter two peoples practically disappeared later on. Madhyadeśa was then bounded on the east by the Kosala-Videhas and on the west by the desert. The Āryavarta of Baudh D.S. I.1.2.9ff., i.e. the territory lying to the east of Adarśana, to the west of Kālakavana, to the south of the Himavat and to the north of the Pariyātra, later became famous as Madhyadeśa which was defined by Manu II.21 as the land between the Himavat in the north and the Vindhya in the south and between Vinaśana (Adarśana where the Sarasvatī lost herself in the sands near Kurukṣetra) in the west and Prayāga in the east. In their eagerness to include the land of the Buddha's birth and activities in the holy territory of the Madhyadeśa, some Buddhist writers gave its boundaries as Kajaṅgala (near modern Rajmahal) in the east, the river Sarāvātī in the south-east, the town of Svetakarnika in the south, the town and district of Sthuna in the west and Mount Uśīradhvaja in the north (Mahāvagga, V.12.13) while others would make them Puṇḍravardhana (modern Mahasthan in the Bogra district) in the east, the river Saravātī in the south, Sthuna and Upasthuna in the west and the Uśīragiri in the north (Divyāv. 22). Rājaśekhara's Kāvyaṁimāmsū (GOS, 93-94) states that the countries of the east, south, west and north lay respectively beyond Vārāṇasī, Māhismatī (on the Narmadā), Devasabhā (modern Dewas) and Pṛthudaka (modern Pehoa), all lying on the borders of Madhyadeśa.

Madhyama Kaliṅga Territory around modern Vizagapatam district mentioned in Eastern Cālukya records.

Madhya-Maṇḍala A territorial division comprising part of Bilaspur district, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Amoda grant no. 1 of the time of the Kalacuri Pṛthvīdeva II. It comprised a village called Āvalā which was same as Aurābhata and Buḍubuḍu in the Lapha region in which Tummāna, the old capital of the Haihayas was situated IHQ, 1925, 409-11.

Madhyamikā Modern Nagari, near Chitor, Rajasthan. The discovery of the coins of the Śibi-janapada, minted at Madhyamikā, at this place has helped scholars in suggesting that Nagari was just the latter part of the old name Madhyamikā-nagari.

Madirai A variant reading of Madurai found in the Cola inscriptions.

Madra Vedic tribe divided into two sections, uttara (northern) and dakṣiṇa (southern). The Uttaramadras (q.v.) dwelt beyond the Himalayas, probably in the north of Kashmir. The territory of the southern Madras roughly corresponds to Sialkot and its adjoining districts in the central Punjab which were known even in the seventeenth century as Madradeśa. The Madras first appear in the Brhad. Up., III.3.1.III.7.1. In Buddhist times the Madras dwelt between the Chenab and the Ravi. There was also a territory of the eastern Madras who occupied probably some district to the east of Sialkot, not far from Trigarta or Kangra (Mbh., VI.61.12). The ancient capital was Sākala on Sāgala-nagara (q.v.) on the bank of the Āpagā (q.v.) in the Rechna Doab.

Madraka People mentioned in the epigraphic records of the beginning of the Christian era. A branch of the Madrakas or Madras were the neighbours of the Uttarakurus and lived in the Himalayan region. The Madras proper had their capital at Sākala (modern Sialkot in Punjab) which later became the capital of the Indo-Greek kingdom under Menander. The mention of the Madrakas in the list of tribes that came under the influence of Samudragupta suggests that they acquired an amount of political influence after the decline of the Kuṣāṇas.

Madrakāra Same as Bhadrakāra, a clan of the Śālvas, mentioned in the Puraṇic lists of Janapadas as inhabitants of Madhyadeśa.

Madura-Maṇḍalam Name of the Pāṇḍya country, the capital of which was Madura. It is mentioned in the Tirumalai rock inscription of Rājendra Cola and other Cola records. SII.I.97, 99.112.

Magadha Ancient Janapada corresponding roughly to South Bihar. The name occurs for the first time in AV, V.22.14 though the earlier prototypes of the Magadhas viz the Kikaṭas (q.v.) occurs in RV, III.53.14. In AV, XV.2.1-4, the Magadhas are described as vrātyas, i.e. belonging outside the pale of Vedic culture. The Ait. Br., II.1-1. mentions the Vagadhas (Magadhas) as speakers of unintelligible language. In Baudh, D.S. 12. and the Śrautasūtras (Baudh, XX.13, Āpas, XXII.6.16; Hiranya, XVII.6) the Magadhas appear as a people with a definite territory. During the time of Buddha, Magadha was one of the sixteen Mahājanapadas rapidly developing into a powerful state. It was then bounded on the east by the river Campā, on the south by the Vindhya mountains, on the west by the river Soṇa and on the north by the Ganges. According to Hiuen Tsang the province of Magadha was about 5000 li or eight hundred thirty three miles in circuit and was bounded by the Ganges on the north, the district of Benares on the west the Hiranya Parvata or Monghyr on the east and Karṇasuvārṇa on the south-east. Cunningham held that Magadha must have extended to the Karmanāśā river on the west and to the sources of Damodar on the south. Rhys Davids gave the following boundaries: the Ganges to the north, the Soṇa to the west, the country of Aṅga to the east and the forest reaching the plateau of Chotanagpur to the south. Thus Magadha corresponded basically to the Patna and Gaya districts in Bihar, but it had extensions in different ages. It was called Makata by the Siamese and the Burmese, Mo-ki-to by the Chinese and Makala by the Japanese.

Magadha-Phukti A province of the Gupta empire in South Bihar. A Magadha-riṣaya is also found in the colophon of a ms. of Aṣṭasōhasrikā-Prajñāpāramitā.

Mahābala Mahavālēsvara in Satara district and the same in Gokarṇa (q.v.). Padma, VI.113.29; JBBRAS, X.1-18; Ep. Ind., XXVII.157.

Mahābalipuram Mamallapuram, the sea-port city at the mouth of the Palar river, thirty two miles south of Madras, celebrated for the free-standing monolithic rathas revealing characteristics of Pallava architecture. Every one of the surviving eight rathas except the Draupadī, exhibits a storeyed elevation of the roof, each storey being terminated by a convex roll cornice ornamented with cāitya-window arches, called kudus in South India each enclosing a human head. Of the square type of rathas, which furnished the starting point for the Draviḍa vimāna, the Dharma-rāja is the most imposing as well as the most perfect. Of the two rectangular rathas, the Gaṇeśa is the more interesting.

Mahācīna One of the 56 countries mentioned in the Śaktisaṅgama which is said to have extended from the Kailāśagiri and from the place of origin of the Sarayu as far as Moṅga (Mongolia) Mahācīna therefore, refers to China proper. SGAMI, 104.

Mahad A Buddhist site on the bank of the Sāvitrī river, twenty eight miles south-east of Kuda (q.v.) on the Rajapuri creek, Maharashtra.

Mahadeo Piparia Palaeolithic site in the Narmada valley between Hosangabad and Narsimhapur in Madhya Pradesh.

Mahāgaurī River issuing from the Vindhya mentioned in the Puranic lists of rivers.

Mahālakṣmi Same as Kolhapur in Maharashtra. SP, 90.

Mahākāntāra The forest regions of Jaypur, Orissa, mentioned in the Allahabad inscription of Samudragupta.

Mahakāla Site named after the Śiva temple at Ujjayinī (23°09' N, 75°43' E).

Mahākosala Country, same as Uttara Kosala.

Mahākūṭa Name of the hills containing temples to the east of Badami (15°55' N, 75°45' E) Vāyu, LXXVII.57; Brahmāṇḍa, III.13.58; Ind. Ant., X.102-03.

Mahūkūṭeśvara A village lying between Badami (q.v.) and Pattadakal (q.v.) famous for the Śangameśvara temple which is a neat little specimen of the nāgara style.

Mahānadī River issuing from the Vindhya flowing in Orissa near Cuttack and falling into the Bay of Bengal. Brahmāṇḍa, II.16.28 (which says that it rises in the Pariyātra), XLVI.4-5; Kūrma, II.35.25.

Māhana-Kumḍaggāma Brahmanical part of Kuṇḍagrāma, a suburb of Vaiśālī.

Mahānandā River in North Bengal which rises in the Himalaya and joins the Ganges below the Malda district. IGI, XX.413-14.

Mahāpadma Ancient name of the Wular Lake in Kashmir. RT, IV.591.

Mahārāṣṭra, Mo-Ho-La-Cha A country in Aparānta (Pali: Mahārāṭṭha) which corresponds to the modern state of the same name. According to Hiuen Tsang the country was about 6000 li in circuit. The climate was hot and the peoples were simple. The ancient capitals of Mahārāṣṭra in different periods were Pratiṣṭhāna (modern Paithan on the Godāvarī), Kalyan and Vātāpi or Badami.

Mahāvana The eighth vana (grove) out of twelve at Mathura which is the same as Vraja. It is represented by Modern Mahaban town on the left bank of the Yamunā. Varāha, CLIII.40, CLXI.8.

Mahāveṅguli Modern Dodda Bengali in North Kanara district mentioned in the Gudnapur inscription of the Kadamba ruler Ravivarman.

Mahāvṛṣa A northern tribe mentioned in AV, V.22.4-8 along with the Mujavants.

Mahendra One of the seven Kulaṣarvatas or traditional mountain ranges extending from the mouths of the Ganges (Orissa) to Madura. In the Ganjam district there is a peak called Mahendragiri about 5000 feet high. The Raghuvamśa, IV.39-40 shows that Kalinga country had some portion of Mahendra in it. Pargiter holds that it is the portion of the Eastern Ghats between the Mahānadī and the Godāvarī. The Rām., IV.41.19-21 locates it between Pāṇḍyakavāta and the ocean while the Bhāgavata, X.79.11-12 places it between Gaya and Saptagodāvarī. Veṅṅā and Pampā. Mahendra is mentioned in the Allahabad pillar inscription of Samudragupta. Mbh., V.11.12, VI.9.11; Rām., IV.67-37; Matsya, XXII.44; Padma, I.39.14, V.85.16; Bhāgavata, V.19.16; Vāmana, XIII.14-15, LXXXIII.10-11; Kūrma, I.47.23-24.

Mahendraparvata Indian name given to the Phnom Kulen hill of Campuchia which lay to the north-west of Ankor Thom. SGAMI, 321.

Maheshwar Important Palaeolithic and Chalcolithic site on the Narmada, district Nimar, Madhya Pradesh, characterised by square or round huts, Malwa ware (black-and-red ware with white paintings is confined to Period I), relics of dietary, copper tools and ornaments, agate, carnelian and faience beads, etc. Navdatoli (q.v.) on the opposite bank, belonging to the same complex, has identical development, and hence both the sites are viewed as an organic whole. Both the sites in Period IV (c. 400-100 BC) have yielded iron objects. The ancient name of Maheshwar was Māhismatī (q.v.).

Maht Name attributed to two rivers. According to the Millindopāṇḥo (SBE, XXXV.171) it is one of the ten great rivers that flow from the Himalayas. Probably this river is referred to in the Nadyādi-gaṇa (Pāṇini, IV.2.97). The second one is the Mophis of Ptolemy and Mais of the Periplus which rises in the Gwalior region and falls into the sea southwards near Cambay. It is mentioned in the Mārkaṇḍeya, LIV.19 as rising from the Pāriyātra.

Māhīrhāra Viṣaya The area around modern Moharee in the Murbad Taluka of the Thana district, Maharashtra. In the records of the Śilāhāras of North Konkan it is placed in the Puri-Koṅkaṇa Maṇḍala or Deśa (q.v.). Ep. Ind., III.271.

Mahiṣa (Maṇḍala) Country of the Mahiṣas mentioned in Mahāvamsa, XII.3.29 as rāṣṭra and in Dīpavamsa, VIII.1.2 as maṇḍala. Fleet's (JRAS, 1910, 441) identification of this country with Māhismatī (q.v.) is generally accepted. Mirashi (JHQ, XXII, 34ff, JNSI, XI.1ff) identified it with the southern portion of Hyderabad, while according to Sircar (SAGMI, 245ff) it was the Tumkur area of Karnataka and there was more than one settlement of the Mahiṣa people. It is not unlikely that the name of Mysore was combination of Mahiṣa and ur (city). The Mahiṣaka country mentioned in a Brahmi inscription from Guntupalli (JAIH, III.30ff) may refer to the Chanda district of Maharashtra.

Māhiṣmatī An ancient city celebrated in the Buddhist and epico-puranic tradition. The Mahābhāṣya, (Kielhorn II.35) on Vārtika 10 to Pāṇini, III.2.26 refers to its way from Ujjayini, while the Buddhist Suttanipāta, (SBE, X, part II, 188) to that from Pratiṣṭhāna. It has been identified with Mandhata in Nimar district, Madhya Pradesh, though according to some it is represented by the modern town of Maheśvara on the right or northern bank of the Narmada. It is also known as Vṛkasthalī and Śārasvata. The Barwani plate of king Subandhu, belonging to the end of the fifth century AD, was issued from Māhiṣmatī. Mbh., V.19.23-24, V.166.4; Padma, II.92.32, VI.115.4; Bhāgavata, IX.15.22; JRAS, 1910, 425-47; Ep. Ind., XIX.261.

Mahodaya A suburb of Kanauj, also known by the name Kuśasthala. Though generally identified with the city of Kanauj, in the Bara CP on the Gurjara-Pratihāra Bhojadeva, dated 836-37 AD. Mahodaya is said to be a skandhāvāra (encampment) as distinct from Kānyakubja. Mahodaya is mentioned in the Gurjara-Pratihāra and Rāṣṭrakuṭa records. Ep. Ind., V.208-211; VII.28-30; XIX.17.

Mahotsavapura Modern Mahoba (25°19' N, 79°55' E) in the Hammirpur district, Uttar Pradesh.

Mahuḍa A district mentioned in the Mandhata grant of the time of the Paramāra Devapāla. It has been identified with Mahoḍ, twentyfive miles south of Satājirṇa (q.v.) or Satajana near Mandhata in the Nimar district, Madhya Pradesh. Ep. Ind., IX.103-17.

Maiandros Greek name of Mandara or Mahendra mountain range.

Maināka Ancient name of the Siwalik range. In the epico-puranic tradition, there are three mountains under this name, the first near Badari, the second in the west near Gujarat and the third near the river Sarasvatī. Mbh., III.139.17; III.145.44; Brahmāṇḍa, III.13.70; Bhāgavata, V.19.16; Kūrma, II.37.29.

Maisoloi People mentioned by Ptolemy as having metropolis at the city of Pitundra (probably from Sanskrit Pṛthuda) which seems to be the same as Pithuda (q.v.) of Hathigumphā inscription and Pithunda of the Uttarā-dhyayana. The Maisoloi lived about the present Masulipatam or Bandar Taluk of the Krishna district, and their chief city was not far from Masulipatam.

Maisolos River, same as the Krishna, mentioned by Ptolemy.

Majjantiya-70-Bhukti An administrative subdivision probably same as modern Majjigud in the Navalgunda Taluka of the Dharwar district, Karnataka. Konnur CP of s.782. Ep. Ind., VI.29.

Makarapāṭaka Modern Magaramuha, about four miles to the west of Bheraghat in the Jabalpur district, mentioned in the Bheraghat stone inscription of queen Alhanadevi. Ep. Ind., II.7ff; CH., IV.314.

Malacheri Site of Pallava cave temple architecture in South Arcot district.

Malada People of Prācyā and Vindhya-prṣṭha as mentioned in the Puranic Lists of Janapadas.

Mālāda Visaya Region round modern Mālād near Bombay in the Thana district, Maharashtra. In the records of the Śīlāhāras of North Konkan it is mentioned as a part of Purī-Koṅkana Maṇḍala or Deśa (q.v.).

Malai-Maṇḍalam The hill country of Malayalam mentioned in the Cola inscriptions, also known as Malai-nāḍu. SII. I.86,87, 89.

Malaiyur South-east Sumatra mentioned in the Cola records.

Malakūṭa Name of the Pāṇḍya country.

Malangpur Buddhist stūpa site (33°53' N, 74°59' E), in the Anantanag district, Kashmir, about twenty-one miles south-east of Srinagar.

Malaprahāriṇī, Malāpaharīṇī River, same as modern Malaprabhā, rising from Sahya (q.v.), about twenty two miles south-west of Belgaum. The famous village of Ayyavole or Aivalli or Aihole is on this river, sixteen miles to the east of Badami. BG., XXI.12, XXII.545, Ind. Ant., VIII.243.

Mālava Name applied to a number of communities and territories in different parts of central, western and north-western India. In the fourth century BC the Mālavas lived in the land lying north of the confluence of the Ravi and the Chenab. Subsequently they migrated to Rajasthan and made their capital at Mālvānagara (q.v.). They fought against the Kūrdamaka Śakas. In the post Gupta period a Malava clan called the Aulikaras became powerful in the Dasapura region (modern Mandasore, formerly in the realm of the Kūrdamakas). It was probably the Aulikara king Yaśodharman (AD 532) who was responsible for the name Mālava being applied to a wide region of Central and Western India, including the old janapadas of Avantī (district around Ujjayinī) and Ākara or Daśārṇa (district around Vidiśā). Coins of the Mālavas have been discovered in the Jaipur region, Rajasthan. The name Mālava is probably derived from the Dravidian malai meaning 'hill'.

Mālavaka-Bhukti The province of Mālava comprising the region which included the Mandasur district in the north and the Rutlam district in the south mentioned in the Nogawa plates of Dharasena II (Ep. Ind., III.190ff., cf. CII., II.15). It included the city of Daśapura, Ayanakāgrahāra (Aiyana, ten miles north of Nogawa), Agastikāgrahāra (Agasti, four miles north of Nogawa) Candanaputraka, Dhammaṇa-Haḍḍikā (modern Dhamnar) and Navagrāmaka (Nogawa, ten miles north of Rutlam).

Mālava-Nadī River mentioned in the Khajuraho inscription of Dharmapala dated v.s. 1011. Kielhorn identified it with the river Vetravatī or Betwa. Ep. Ind., I.129.

Mālvānagara Capital of the Mālava republic in Rajasthan which has been identified with modern Nagar or Karkoṭa-nagar in Uniyara, Jaipur, lying about twenty-five miles to the south-south-east of Tonk and about forty-five miles to the north-north-east of Bundi. An inscription dated v.s. 1043 (AD 986) found at Nagar, called the place Mālvānagara and describes its prosperity. The name Karkoṭanagar, often applied to the city probably suggests that, for a time it passed to the Nāgas.

Malaya One of the seven principal mountains (Kulaparvata) of India mentioned in the Purāṇas. (Mbh., III.282.43; III.313.32, VI.9.11; Vāyu, XLV.88; Brahma, XXVII.19). The Kūrma, I.47.23 says that the sea can be seen from its top. The Raghu, IV.45-51 says that it was on the Kāverī where it falls in the sea and that cardamon and sandalwood grew therein. Again it is mentioned as the mountain of the Pāṇḍya country on the Tāmraparṇī. Malaya has been identified with the portion of the Western Ghats from the Nilgiris to the Cape Camorin. The southern extension of the Western Ghats below the Kāverī, now known as the Travancore hills formed the western side of the Malaya. It was also known as Śrīkhaṇḍādri and Candanādri and Podigei or Podigai in Tamil tradition. Ptolemy mentions it as Mount Bettigo.

Malaya Name applied to Malabar by Al-Bīrūnī.

Malayakūṭa Hiuen Tsang's Mo-lo-kiu cha, the Pāṇḍya-Kerala region.

Malayāla One of the fifty-six countries mentioned in the Śaktisaṅgama which is described as lying between Mukāmbikā and Malayādri i.e., between Kollur in the northern part of the South Kanara district and the Travancore hills. SGAMI, 95-96.

Mālinī Ancient name of Campā (q.v.) the capital of Aṅga (q.v.). Mbh.,

XII.5.6-7; Matsya, XLVIII, 97; Vāyu, XCIX.105-06; Hariv, XXXII.49.,

Malla One of the sixteen Mahājanapadas which lay to the south of the country of the Śākyas and the Koliyas in the Deoria district, Uttar Pradesh. It was divided into two autonomous parts, having their respective capitals at Kuśinārā (q.v.) and Pāvā (q.v.). The river Kakuṭṭhā formed the boundary between the two territories. Subsequently nine smaller Malla territories came into existence.

Mallai City mentioned in the Valūrpalaiyam plates of Pallava Nandivarman III. It has been identified with Mahabalipuram.

Mallāla Modern Mallar, sixteen miles south-east of Bilaspur, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Mallar stone inscription of Jājalladeva (K.E. 919). Ep. Ind., I.39ff.

Malloi A people whose territory during Alexander's invasion lay on the right bank of the river Hydraotes (Ravi). The Malloi territory seems to have included part of the Jhang district, besides a portion of South Lyallpur, West Montgomery and North Multan. Their name represents the Sanskrit Mālava (q.v.).

Malavan Chalcolithic site situated on the lower estuary of the Tāptī river, east of Dumas, Surat district. It was probably same as Turannoboas of Periplus 53.

Mālyavat Mountain, same as the modern Hindukush. It was also known as Krauñca and Prasravana. In the cosmographical sections of the Purāṇas it is located on the boundary of the Ketumālavarṣa.

Mālyavat The Arṅgundi hill on the Tuṅgabhadrā. Mbh., III.280, 26, III.282.1, Rām., III.49.31, IV.27.1-4.

Manada River same as Mahānadī, mentioned in Ptolemy, VII.1.16, 38.

Mānadeśa Malshiras Taluka of the Sholapur district. It is mentioned in the Yādava records as an administrative division. SMHD, I.79.

Māṇaka Viṣaya Administrative division under the Rāṣṭrakūṭas corresponding to modern Man in the Murtizapur Tehsil in the Akola district, Maharashtra. Sirso CP of Govinda III, S.729. Ep. Ind., XXIII. 206.

Mānakkavāram Same as the Nicobar Islands mentioned in the Cola records.

Mānapura The seat of the early Rāṣṭrakūṭas, which has been identified either with Man in the Satara district, Maharashtra, or with Manpur near Bandhogarh in the Rewa division of Madhya Pradesh (ICPB, 70; ABORI, XXV.42; Ep. Ind., VII.166). Bhagvanlal Indraji thought that it was the older form of the name Mānyakheta (modern Malkhed), about sixty miles south-east of Sholapur (BG, I.1.120). Fleet at first identified it with Manpur in Malwa, about twelve miles south-west of Mhow in Indore district (Ind. Ant., XVIII.233-34) but later thought it not impossible that Mānapura might have been the older name of Shohagpur or Sobhapur (Ind. Ant., XXX.514).

Mānasa Lake in the Himalayas between Kailāsa on the north and Gurla Māndhāta on the south at a height of 14950 feet above sea-level. It is mentioned as a holy place and as source of different rivers in the Mbh., III.130.12; Brahmāṇḍa, II.18.15; Matsya, CXXI.16-17., The name is attributed to several other holy places. The Varāha, CXXVI.29; CLIV.25 mentions two lakes of the same name respectively at Kubjāmraka and Mathura while Matsya, CVII.2 refers to one near Prayāga on the north bank of the Ganges. The Vik., XVIII.55 mentions one Mānasa in Kashmir which has been identified with modern Manasbal.

Manasākata A Brāhmaṇa village in Kosala. Dīgha, I.235.

Maṇavirkottam, Maṇayirkottam Same as Eyirkottam (q.v.), modern Eyil in the south Arcot district, Tamil Nadu, mentioned in the Tamil inscriptions from Kanchipuram and the Sanskrit Kuram Pallava grant. SII., I.120,123, 147,154,155.

Martand Neloithic site in Kashmir valley.

Mārtanḍa Modern Martan or Matan in Kashmir, five miles to the north-east of Anantnag. Its popular name is Bhavan. It is the site of a sun temple originally built by king Lalitāditya in the first half of the 8th century. The temple is now in ruins.

Maru Lit desert, identified with the Marwar region in Rajasthan in later Vedic texts which regard it as the western boundary of Madhyadeśa. It is same as Daseraka.

Marucipattana Same as Mārici of the BrS, which has been identified with modern Masulipatam.

Maru-Deśa Also called Nadvla-deśa i.e. Naddula-deśa or Nadol in Desuri, Jodhpur district, Rajasthan. Ep. Ind., IX.63ff, XI.68ff.

Marudur A village near Ambasundaram, Tinnevely district mentioned in the early Pāṇḍya records.

Marudvṛdhā River mentioned in RV, X.75.5. It is regarded by some as the combined stream of the Asiknī and the Vitastā. But the name is apparently the same as that of modern Maruwardan which joins the Chenab at Kistawar in Kashmir.

Marumāra Marmad of the Muslim historians, corresponding to Jaisalmer and part of Jodhpur.

Marumaṇḍala Jain site same as modern Sanchor in Jalor district Rajasthan.

Māruṭūra Modern Māruteru in the Tanuku Taluka of the East Godavari district mentioned as an agrahāra in the Maruteru grant of Śatyāśraya Pṛthivīvallabha. CII., III.188.

Masalia Same as the Masulipatam region mentioned in Periplus 62 as a country where muslins were produced.

Maski Chalcolithic site on the Maski river, a tributary of Tuṅgabhadrā, in the Lingsugar Taluk, Raichur district. The site shows a fourfold sequence. Period I is marked by a profusion of microliths and blades. Metal industry is represented by a rod of copper. Period II is marked by megaliths, black-and-red ware and iron. Two gold objects have also been reported from this period. Early historic period begins with Period III. A version of the Minor Rock Edict of Aśoka is found here.

Ma Srur Site in Kangra district represented by a series of monolithic temples. These temples which are cut out of the rock and reproduce the characteristics of the early nāgara temple, may belong to the eighth century AD.

Massaga Capital of the Assakenoi (q.v.) described as a 'formidable fortress' by the Greek writers. It lay evidently to the north of Malakand Pass, but its exact location is uncertain.

Massanoi A tribe whose territory in Alexander's time lay in Northern Sind with contiguous portions of the Punjab (Mithankot and Bahawalpur).

Māsuṇi-Deśam Territory in Madhya Pradesh contiguous to the Veṅgi kingdom to the north west which was conquered by Rājendra Cola during his northern campaign. It is mentioned in the Tiruvalangadu plates of Rājendra.

Mātaṅga Same as Mātaṅgavāpī, modern Mātaṅgāśrama at Bakraur on the Phalgu opposite Bodhgaya in the Gaya district, Bihar., SP., 91.

Mathurā Represented by modern Mathura (27°28' N, 77°41' E) on the Yamunā, it was the capital of the Surasena country. It was known to the Greeks as Methora and Modoura (city of the gods). It was also known as Madhupurī, Maḍhura, Madhupaghna and Śivapura. The territory was the land of the Yādavas who were always in conflict with the eastern powers led by Magadha. Mathurā was subsequently occupied by the Indo-Greeks, the Śakas and the Kuṣāṇas. The Nāgas and the Yaudheyas reigned at Mathura before they were subdued by Samudragupta. Mathura was the centre of numerous religious systems. It was a stronghold of Bhagavatism. The Mathura-Nāga statuette inscription amply proves the prevalence of serpent worship which is important in view of the story of Kāliyanāga and his suppression by Kṛṣṇa. Buddhism existed also in Mathura for several centuries. The Upagupta monastery had a very important part to play in the propagation of Buddhism in this region. Many dated and undated Buddha and Bodhisattva images have been unearthed here. Fa-hien called the city Ma-taou-lo or the Peacock City where he saw numerous monasteries. Hiuen Tsang called it Mo-tu-lo which he described as 5000 li in circuit and the capital about 20 li. It was also a stronghold of the Jains who called the region as Siddhakṣetra consisting of ninety-six villages each containing Jina temples and images. Numerous inscriptions from Mathura belonging to the first century AD afford sufficient proof of the existence of different Jain Śākhās or groups. It is also testified by numerous Jain monuments and antiquities from Mathura.

Matsya Tribe mentioned in the RV, VII.18.6. cf. Śat. Br., XIII.5.4.9. In subsequent period they lived to the west of the Surasenas of Mathura, i.e., in modern Alwar, Bharatpur and Jaipur which was probably their home also in the R̥gvedic age. They appear in connection with the Vaśas in the Kauṣītaki Ūp., IV.1. and with Śālvas in the Gopatha Br., I.2.9. According to Manu (II.19, VII.1993) the Matsyas were included in the Brahmaṣṣideśa (q.v.). The Apara-Matsyas whom Pargiter places on the hill tracts on the north bank of the Chambal and the Vira-Matsyas mentioned in connection with the Sarasvatī and the Ganges (Mbh., II.31.2.7., III.24.25., IV.5.4; Rām, II.71.5; cf. Pargiter in JASB, 1895, 250ff.) point to the extension of this people. The Matsya capital Virāṭanagara (q.v.) has been identified by Cunningham (AGI, 387) with Bairat in Jaipur. There is also a Virāṭanagara in South India (Bomb. Gaz., I, II, 558). Pargiter (JASB, 1895, 252) thinks that the capital was Upaplavya.

Mattamayūra A people of Central India whose chief centre was probably Kadwaha in the Guna district of Madhya Pradesh. The city of Mattamayūra is mentioned in an inscription from Ranod (Ep. Ind., I.354ff). A people of the same name is mentioned in the Mbh. whose territory was Rohitaka, modern Rohtak district. They may be identified with the Yaudheyas (q.v.).

grant of the Kāmarupa king Dharmapāla (JRAS, VIII. 113-26, IX-1-3). It was inhabited by the Bodos.

Meyl-Sambaddha-Ghosādi A village in the Vāḍajā Caturaṣṭi Pattalā mentioned in the Set-Mahet grant of Gāhaḍavāla Govindacandra. It has been identified with the village of this name near Subhgapur on the Gonda-Intiathok road, Uttar Pradesh. Ep. Ind., XI.21-22.

Midhunapura Same as Midnapur in West Bengal mentioned in the inscriptions of Anantavarman Coḍagaṅga, Nerasiṃha II and Nerasiṃha IV. JAHRS, VI.215.

Mihran Arabic name of the river Indus.

Mi-Li-Kia-Si-Kia-Pu-No Site of a temple for the Chinese monks which was about forty Yojanas to the east of Nalanda following the course of the Ganges mentioned by I-tsing. The Indian version of the Chinese term should be Mṛgasthāpana, which was situated either in Varendra, or not far from its boundary, on the bank of the Bhāgīrathī or the Padmā. IHQ, 532-35; Foucher, Icon, 62-63.

Min-Nagara General name of the Śaka capitals. Isidore of Charax mentions the city of Min as the capital of Iranian Śakastan. The Periplus mentions Min-nagara as the capital of Indian Seythia. It also refers to another Min-nagara which was the capital of king Mambarus.

Miriñja Deśa Region around modern Miraj, (16° 49' N, 74° 43' E) mentioned in the Miraj copper plate of S.980, the Kolhapur copper plates of s.1037, 1048 and the Taleni copper plate of s.1032 of the time of the Śilāhāras of Kolhapur. JRAS, IV.281; JBBRAS, XIII.3.; Ep Ind., XXIII. 30. The record of s.1037 mentions a subdivision of Miriñja-deśa as Mirinja-gampana or Kampana which included Appeyavāḍa, perhaps modern Akkalkop in the Satara district. It is mentioned in the Khedrapur inscription of s.1136 of the time of the Yādavas of Devagiri. The British Museum copper plate of Satyāśraya mentions that it included Komgulvali-12 in which the donated village Selāgaragrāma was situated. Ind. Ant., XIV.41.

Mirmad Territory mentioned by the Arab historians as conquered by Junayd. It may be same as the Maru-Māra referred to in a Ghatiyala inscription which included Jaisalmer and parts of Jodhpur in Rajasthan.

Mirpur-Khas Buddhist stūpa site (25°32' N, 69°01' E) in Thar and Parker district, Sindh, forty-two miles east of Hyderabad.

Mithila Capital of Vedeha (q.v.) identified with the small town of Janakpur just within the Nepal border north of the place where the Muzaffarpur and Darbhanga districts meet. The city is nicely described in the Jātakas (nos. 406,489,539,546). Digha, II.235; Buddhavamsa, XXVII.II.

Nagarī Same as Madhyamikā, near Chitorgarh, district Udaipur Rajasthan where iron objects were found in the occupational deposits of the Mahādeva temple mound assignable to the third century BC. The discovery of the coins of the Śibi republic minted at this place helped scholars in suggesting that Nagarī was just the latter part of the old name Madhyamikā-nagarī. Here fragments of an āmalaka, the crowning member of a śikhara temple, datable in the fifth century AD have been unearthed.

Nagarjuni Group of hills about half a mile to the north-east of Barabar (q.v.) range situated about ten miles to the north of Gaya. This group of hills was dedicated by Daśaratha to the Ājivikas and the Buddhists.

Nagarjunikonda Famous for historic monuments, Nagarjunikonda (16°31' N, 79°14' E) in the Krishna valley, Guntur district, has yielded an interesting series of stone-age industries—pebble tools, handaxes, Levallois cores and flakes, blades, microliths and polished axes—covering a long period from Lower Palaeolithic to Neolithic. In the historical period it became a great Buddhist centre wherefrom remains of more than thirty establishments were brought to light. Inscriptions throwing light on Buddhist sects have been found here. The valley of Nagarjunikonda has eventually been converted into a reservoir under the irrigation project of the Nagarjunasagar dam.

Nagarkot Modern Kot Kangra in the Kangra district. Its fortress was described by Al-Bīrunī.

Nāgasāhvaya Same as Hastināpura. Vāyu, LXXVII. 271, Matsya, L.78.

Nagda Chalcolithic site on the Chambal in district Ujjain, Madhya Pradesh. The occurrence of iron objects in Period II (c.750-530 BC) in a context which is a continuation of the earlier chalcolithic phase is striking. Period III heralds the NBP and yields 131 iron objects which include knives, daggers, chisels, sickles, arrow-heads, hoes, nails and bowls.

Naggepādi A village mentioned in the Vaddarse inscription of Āḷuvarṣa which may be located in the vicinity of Vaddarse in the Udipi Taluk of South Kanara district. EP. Ind., XXXVII.313ff.

Piklihal Archaeological site in the Raichur Doab, Andhra Pradesh, showing traces of neolithic-chalcolithic and iron age cultures.

Pilakkhaghā A cave near Kosambi. Majjhima I.518.

Pi-Lo-Mo-Lo City, same as Bhillamāla, modern Bhinmal in Jodhpur division, Rajasthan, mentioned by Hiuen Tsang.

Pimparma Capital of the Adraistai dwelling on the eastern side of Hydraotes, i.e. Ravi or Irāvātī, mentioned by the classical writers.

Piṇḍāraka Holy place in Khambhalia Mahal of Kathiawar. Mbh., III.82. 65-67; Matsya. XIII.48, XXII.69; Viṣṇu, V.37-6; Bhāgavata, XI.1.11.

Piṇḍāraka Holy place situated at a distance of sixteen miles from Dvārakā. SP., 93.

Pipalahā A village, modern Pipal in Teonthar Tahsil of Rewa, mentioned in the Bharat Kala Bhawan plates of Madanavarman (vs. 1192). It is also mentioned in the Alhaghat stone inscription. The Ajaygarh rock inscription of the time of Bhojavarman records the grant of a village named Pipalāhika near about Kālañjara. Ep. Ind, I.333ff; Ind. Ant, XVIII. 213-14.

Piparia Lower Palaeolithic site on the river Kopra, Damoh district, Madhya Pradesh.

Pippalanagara Modern Pimpalner in West Khandesh region mentioned in the spurious Pimpalner copper plate of Satyāśraya, s.310. Ind. Ant., IX.297.

Pippalaśroni See under Payasvini.

Pippaliguhā A cave in the R̥ṣigiri (Isigili) mountain at Rājagṛha. Samyutta, V.II, Udāna; III.7.

Pippari-Maṇḍalaka Region around Pimpari on the Bori river, about four miles to the south of Dhulia mentioned in the Thalner charter (set B) of Bhānuseṇa, year 30. Ep. Ind., XXXVIII.71.

Piprahwa Site of Buddhist establishment (27°26'N, 83°07'E) in Basti district, Uttar Pradesh, characterised by Stūpa of the Maurya period, numerous Buddhist antiquities and a significant inscription on the lid of a steatite vase.

Pirisingi Shirsangi, sixteen miles west of Konnur, Navalgunda, Dharwar, Karnataka. Konnur CP of s. 782. Ep. Ind., VI.29.

Piṣṭapura Modern Pithapuram in East Godavari district mentioned in the Allahabad Praśasti of Samudragupta. Later it became the chief city of the Mātharas and the Vāsiṣṭhas of Kaliṅga and also of the Eastern Cālukyas. CII., III.7.

Pitalkhora Site of early Buddhist caves (20°20'N, 75°00'E) in the Aurangabad district, Maharashtra.

Piṭāsaila Name of a hill and its adjoining district mentioned in the Candella and Kalacuri records. It has been identified with Pet in the Baldeobagh Tahsil in the former Orcha state, now in the Rewa division of Madhya Pradesh.

Piṭhi A kingdom in Magadha region ruled by the family of kings with names ending in Senā. It corresponded roughly to the present district of Gaya, as is indicated from an inscription found at Janibigha near Bodhgaya. S.N.Majumdar identified it with Pirpainti in the region between the railway stations of Colgong and Sakrigali junction. But from the evidence of the Rāmacarita in which Bhimayaśas is described as Piṭhī-pati and Magadhādhipati K.P. Jayaswal and N.G. Majumdar held that Piṭhī and Magadha were practically identical. IC, V.379ff; JBORS, IV.266ff, 273ff; Ind. Ant., XLVIII.43ff.

Pithuda Probably same as Pṛthuda, Ptolemy's Pitundra, metropolis in the land of the Maisoli, mentioned in Khāravēla's Hāthigumpha inscription. In Jain Uttarādhyana it is mentioned as Pithunda. The country comprised parts of the present Krishna district and its chief city was near Masulipatam.

Pithunda Pṛthudaka near Kurukṣetra. The name which is found in the Hāthigumpha inscription of Kharavela recalls Ptolemy's Pihunda. Sel. Ins., 217n; Ep. Ind., XX.72ff.

Plaki-Rāṣṭra A territory comprising parts of modern Vizagapatam district mentioned in the Ramatirtham copper plate of the Viṣṇukunḍin king Indrabhaṭṭāarakavarman (A.D. 590-620). Plaki-ṣayā mentioned in the Eastern Cālukya inscriptions, corresponded to the region round the ancient town of Cherupura (q.v.) modern Chipurupalle.

Podana, Potana Capital of the Aśmaka (q.v.) country which is often mentioned as Potali in the Jātakas and probably same as Pādana of inscriptions (Lüders, List, no. 616). The Mbh. refers to it as Paudanya which seems to be a late corruption. The older MSS. give the name as Potana or Podana. The name reminds one of Bodhan which lies to the south of the confluence of the Mañjirā and the Godāvarī.

Poduca, Poduke Locality near Pondichery mentioned in the Periplus as well as in Ptolemy.

Pokhari Modern Pohari in the Chalisgaon Taluka of Jalgaon district mentioned in the Yādava records as belonging to the Kanhairi-Kampana, a subdivision of Kanhairi-deśa. Ep. Ind., XXV.209.

Polāvāsa-Deśa Modern Polas in the Yelgandal district mentioned in the Kākatīya records.

Po-Lo-Tu-Lo, Śālātu-ra A city which according to Hiuen Tsang was 20 li to the northwest of Wu-to-ka-han-tu (modern Ohind) which was 200 li or thirty-three miles to the southeast of Po-lu-sha. It was the native city of the grammarian Pāṇini. It has been identified with the modern city of Lahore.

Po-I u-Sha, Varuṣā A city visited by Hiuen Tsang which was about 200 li or forty miles to the southeast of Puṣkalāvati. It has been identified with Palodheri.

Pondi A village mentioned in the records of the Kalacuris of Dāhala. Cunningham identified it with Ponde situated four miles to the northwest of Bilhari (23°48'N, 80°19' E) in the Jabalpure district, Madhya Pradesh. ASR., IX.104.

Ponni Name of the Cola country as recorded in the Pāṇḍya inscriptions. It is named after the Panni or the Kāverī.

Porus, Kingdom of A territory which lay between the Jhelum and the Chenab, and roughly corresponded to parts of the modern districts of Gujrat and Shahpur. This area apparently included the old territory of the Kekayas.

Po-Ta Territory near Kabul mentioned by the Chinese historian Fan-yi.

Potā-Viṣaya Probably same as the Povā-ṣayā of the Cuttack grant, it may be identified with Pow in Sonpur, nineteen miles south of Binka. It is mentioned in the Patna grant no. 2 of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya. Ep. Ind., XI.199-200.

Pothaya A people mentioned in a Jain inscription from Mathura. They have been identified with the Proṣṭhas mentioned in Mbh., VI.9.61 who were the neighbours of the Trigartas and other Punjab peoples. Ep. Ind., I. 396, Lüders, List no. 94.

Poṭhivāra-Sambaddha-Payāsi Modern Bayasi about two miles to the north of Set-Mahet on the borders of the Gonda and Bahraich districts, Uttar Pradesh, mentioned in the Set-Mahet grant of Gāhaḍavāla Govindacandra.

Pottapi Town of the Telugu-Coḍas, now represented by modern Pottapi in the Pullampet Taluka of the Cuddapah district. Ep. Ind., VII.121; ARE, II.64.

Povā-Viṣaya Modern Pow, eight miles north of Bolangir, mentioned in a Cuttack grant of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya. Ep. Ind., III.345-57.

Prabhāsa Also called Somanāthapattana, it is a holy place in Saurāṣṭra near the sea which had the famous temple of Somanātha destroyed by Mahamud of Ghazni. It is mentioned as a holy place in Uṣavadāta's inscription at Nasik and in the Cintra Prasasti of Sāraṅgadeva dated AD 1287. It is styled Devapattana and has been located in the Purāṇas at the confluence of the Sarasvatī and the sea. The Skandapurāṇa has a section on Prabhāsa. Ep. Ind., I.271 283; BG, XVI.699.

Prabhas Patan Chalcolithic site in district Sorath, near Somnath, which has yielded a six-fold sequence. "Period I has the late Harappan pottery, microlithic beads. Period II shows a commingling of the late Harappan and the central Chalcolithic rounded bowls with panelled designs. Some sherds with brown paint on cream base recall Ahar (q.v.). In Period II A the lustrous-red ware, new sophisticated motifs on black-on-red ware, and two sherds with antelope appear. A rubble pavement also. Period II B shows decline of the lustrous-red ware and emergence of plain slipped red wares. Period III has the black-and-red ware with iron."

Prācyā 'Dwellers in the East' mentioned in the list of peoples in the Ait. Br., VIII.14. It is very probable that in the Vedic age the term denoted the Kāśis, Kosalas, Videhas and Magadhas.

Pradyumnagiri Same as Hariparvata in Srinagar. RT., III.460. VII.1616; Vik XVIII.15.

Prāgbodhi A hill corresponding to the present Mora Pahar, about three miles to the north-east of Bodhgaya, where the Buddha is said to have meditated in a cave.

Prāgjyotiṣa See under Kāmarūpa. It is the Gauhati region of Assam. It may be noted that the Mbh. and the Raghu locate Prāgjyotiṣa in the northern division and not in the east.

Prakash Chalcolithic site situated in the Shahada Taluk, Dhulia district, Maharashtra, on the confluence of the Gomati and the Tapti. Period IA has blades, microliths, hammerstones, lump of copper, beads of jasper, carnelian, paste, terracotta toy cart, four types of ware while Period I B is distinguished by the intrusion of two more wares, Jorwe and lustrous-red. Period II is marked by iron, black-and-red ware, NBP as also 21 objects of copper. Iron objects comprise tangled arrow-heads, axes, knife blades, fragments of a sickle, nails and clamps. The pre-NPB-ware iron using culture emerged on the site subsequent to the protohistoric chalcolithic culture, and was separated from it by an intervening accumulation of gravel.

Prārjuna People mentioned in the Allahabad inscription of Samudragupta. Their territory lay near Bhilsa in Madhya Pradesh.

Prasannā A village, same as modern Pasana seven miles north-west of Bamanghati in the Mayurbhanj district, Orissa, mentioned in the Bamanghati grant of Paṇabhaṅga issued from Khijjiṅga (q.v.). JASB., XL.165-67; Ep. Ind., XVIII.300.

Prasioi, Prasli People and their territory, recalling Sanskrit Prācya, mentioned by the classical writers along with Gangaridae (q.v.). It is not easy to determine precisely the boundary line between the Gangaridae proper and the people styled Prasioi who had their capital at Pāṭaliputra. From the statements of Curtius, Diodorus and Plutarch it appears that about the time of Alexander's invasion the Gangaridae were a powerful nation and that they either formed a dual monarchy with the Prasioi or were otherwise closely associated with them on equal terms in a common cause against the foreign invader.

Prasavana Giri A hill in Janasthāna (q.v.) Rām, III.49.31.

Prastaravāṭaka Modern Patpara near Bilahri in Jabalpur district mentioned in the Betul plates of Saṃkṣobha. Ep. Ind., VII.284ff.

Prasthala People of Uttarāpatha according to the Puranic lists of Janapadas. They lived in the Puṣkalāvati region.

Pratiṣṭhāna Modern Paithan on the left bank of the Godāvarī. Ptolemy mentions it as Baithan and the Periplus as Pithana. Brahma, CXII.23; Varāha, CLXV.1; Padma, VI.172.20, VI.176.2-6.

Pratiṣṭhāna-Bhukti District around the city of Pratiṣṭhāna, modern Paithan on the Godāvarī which was once the capital of the Sātavāhana empire. About the eighth century AD it became the headquarters of a territorial unit. Paithan CP, Ep. Ind., III.105.

Pravarā River that joins the Godāvarī at Toka in the Ahmadnagar district on which is situated the archaeological site of Nivāsapura, modern Nevasa, Brahma, CIV.46-54; BG, XVII.6.

Pravarapura City founded by the Vākāṭaka Pravarsena II. It was near Nandivardhana (q.v.) and may be identified with Paonar in the Wardha district, Maharashtra.

Pravarapura City adjacent to Śrīnagar in Kashmir. RT., III.336-49.

Prayāga The confluence of the Ganges and Yamuna near Allahabad.

Preharā River forming boundary of the Pallava kingdom mentioned in the Talgunda inscription of Śāntivarman. It was either the Malapraharā or the Ghatapraharā. Sel. Ins. I.477.

Prṣṭhicampā A suburb of Campā, capital of Aṅga, where Lord Mahāvīra passed a few rainy seasons.

Prthudaka The western boundary of Uttarāpatha or northern India according to the Kāvyaṃimāmsā of Rājaśekhara. It is modern Pehoa on the south bank of the Sarasvatī in the Karnal district, Haryana.

Pseudostomon One of the mouths of Ganges styled pseudo or false by Ptolemy. It was so called as it lay concealed behind numerous islands. It is taken to correspond to the estuary of the Padmā and the Meghnā.

Pubbajira A village in the Vajjian territory. Majjhima, III.266; Samyutta IV.59.

Pujāripali Temple site in the Sambal district, Orissa.

Puhār Same as Kāvīrippumpattinam (q.v.), a celebrated market town on the Kāverī. A vivid description of this city, its port area, markets, roads and buildings is given in Puram XXX.11.11-14. A general plan of the town is described in considerable detail in the Śilappadikāram, Canto V. The Paṭṭinappālai says that the city of Puhār had a large colony of foreign merchants.

Pukkaḷappuram Modern Tellur (Tellaiyur) near Vellore mentioned in Tamil inscriptions. SII., I.79-80.

Puligere, Purigere Modern Lakshmeshwar in the Dharwar district, Karnataka, which occurs for the first time in the Rāṣṭrakūṭa records as a Viṣaya or division of 300. The Cālukyan epigraphs mention simply the place Purigere but not as an administrative division. JBBRAS., X.194.

Pulikara Also known as Puligere (q.v.) it was the ancient name of Lakshmeswar famous for Jain temples.

Pulinda Tribe mentioned in the Ait. Br. VII.18. They are found along with the Andhras (q.v.) at the time of Aśoka. Their capital according to the Meghaduta probably lay to the south-east of Bhilsa. Mbh., XII.207.42; Matsya, CXIV.46-48 and Vāyu, XLV 126 locate them in the Deccan.

Pulinda Name of a river, modern Unanda in Nasik district, Wai CP. Ind. Ant., XI.157.

Puliyūr Same as Chidambaram. SII., I.112.

Puḷḷalūr Modern Pallur near Conjeeveram mentioned in the records of the Pallavas of Kāñci.

Punaḥpunā River, same as the modern Punpun in Bihar. Vāyu, CVIII.73.

Puṇaka, Puṇya-Viṣaya Same as Poona or Pune district mentioned in the Rāṣṭrakūṭa records.

Puṇavadhana Prakrit name of Puṇḍravardhana (q.v.) mentioned in a Sanchi Stūpa inscription.

Puṇḍra A people mentioned in the Ait. Br., VII.13-18. The digvijaya section of the Mbh. places them to the east of Monghyr and associates them with the prince who ruled on the banks of the Kosi. This accords well with the evidence of Gupta epigraphs and the records of the Chinese writers which agree in placing the territory of the Puṇḍras—then styled Puṇḍravardhana—in North Bengal. Place names associated with the Puṇḍras are often mentioned in its derivative form Paṇḍra, e.g. Paṇḍraka, Paṇḍra-bhukti, Paṇḍra-nagara, Paṇḍravardhana-Pura, etc.

Puṇḍranagara The capital city of the Puṇḍras which was situated in the Bogra district of North Bengal, precisely in Mahasthangarh seven miles to the north of Bogra town on the river Karatoyā. A Brahmi record found at this place, which is usually assigned to the Maurya period, refers to Puṇḍranagara as a prosperous city. The discovery of terracotta figurines of the Śuṅga period at Mahasthangarh proves that the city of Puṇḍravardhana continued to flourish even after the fall of the imperial Mauryas.

Punḍravardhana A country comprising North Bengal and its adjoining regions, a bhukti (q.v.) or province and a city (see under Punḍranagara) named after the Punḍra people. Varendri or Varendri-maṇḍala was a metropolitan district of the Punḍravardhana country, as the city of Punḍravardhanapura—the Punḍranagara of an old Brahmi inscription—was situated within its area.

Punḍravardhana-Bhukti A province of the Gupta empire in north Bengal and its adjoining regions mentioned in the Gupta epigraphs ranging between the years 444 and 554 A.D. It was divided into the following viṣayas and maṇḍalas Vyāghrataṭi-maṇḍala (to which was attached the Mahāntāprakāśa-viṣaya), Sthālikkata-viṣaya (to which was attached the Amrasaṇḍika-maṇḍala near the Udragrāma-maṇḍala), Kuddālakhāta-viṣaya, Koṭivarṣa-viṣaya (in which were included the Gokalikā and Halāvarta maṇḍalas), Brāhmanigrāma-maṇḍala, Khediravalli-viṣaya (which included the Vallimunda-maṇḍala), Nānya-maṇḍala, Ikkadāsī-viṣaya (which included the Yolā-maṇḍala), Satatāpadmāvati-viṣaya (in which was included the Kumāratālaka-maṇḍala), Pañcavāsa-maṇḍala, Adhahpattana-maṇḍala, Khāḍī viṣaya or maṇḍala, Varendrī maṇḍala and Vaṅga (which included the Vikramapura-Bhāga and Nāvya).

Puraji A viṣaya inhabited by the tribals mentioned in the Khonamukhi grant of the Kāmarūpa king Dharmapāla. JRAS., VIII. 113-26.

Pūrṇā Name of several rivers. The Ain., II.225 refers to Pūrṇā in Berar falling into the Tāpī on its left bank. A second river of the same name is in the Surat district (BG., II.26) while a third falls into the Godāvarī in the Parbhani district.

Purana Qila Considered to be the site of Indraprastha this site at New Delhi has revealed the evidence of the use of iron in association with the NBP ware, dating back to the sixth century B.C. The site has also yielded PGW in its earliest levels.

Purī Capital of the Śīlāhāras of North Konkan from about the 8th to the 10th century A.D. It seems to be modern Gharapurī, an island, a few miles from Bombay, the site of the Elephanta Caves.

Purikā City of the Paurikas of the Māhiṣmatī region mentioned in one of the Bharhut inscriptions. CII., III.206.

Purimatal Region visited by Mahāvīra during his long penance. It has been identified with modern Purulia district of West Bengal.

Purī-Koṅkaṇa-Maṇḍala Also mentioned as Purī-Koṅkaṇa-Deśa, or Mahādeśa or 1400 in the North Konkan Śīlāhāra records it comprised parts of modern Thana, Kolaba and Ratanagiri districts of Maharashtra and the Salsette island.

Puru People mentioned with the Anus, Druhyus, Turvaśas and Yadus in RV, I.108.8. They also occur as enemies of the Tṛtsus and Bharatas in RV, VII.8.4, VIII.18.13. They are expressly mentioned as residing on the Sarasvatī in RV, VII.96.2. In post-Ṛgvedic period they coalesced with their erstwhile enemies, the Tṛtsu-Bharatas to form the Kuru people of later times.

Puruṣapura Peshawar, mentioned as capital of Gandhāra by Hiuen Tsang (Pu-lu-sha-pu-lo) where Kaṇiṣka is said to have erected a Stūpa. This tradition is also recorded by Al-Bīrūnī

Puruṣottama Same as Jagannātha or Purī in Orissa.

Pūrva-Khātikā See under Khāḍi-viṣaya.

Pusauli Same as the modern Pusauli, situated two miles to the south of Basahi in Etawah district, Uttar Pradesh, mentioned in the Basahi grant of Gāhaḍavāla Madanapāla. Ind. Ant., XIV.102.

Puṣkara Town, lake and place of pilgrimage in Rajasthan, six miles from Ajmer. One of the few temples of Brahmā exists here. Uṣavadāta's Nasik inscription no 10 mentions gifts made by him at three pools of Puṣkara (BG, XVI.570). Its earliest mention is found in Pāṇini IV.2.82. Legends centring round this place are given in Purāṇas like Vāyu, LXXVII.40; Kūrma II.20.34; Padma, V.15, 63, 82, 150; Vāmana. XXII.19, LXV.31; Brahmāṇḍā, III.34.7ff, etc. According to Al-Bīrūnī (Sachau, II.147), "outside the town in three places they have constructed ponds which stand in high veneration and are places of worship."

Puṣkarāvati, Puṣkalāvati City of Gandhāra (q.v.) represented by modern Prang and Charsadda, seventeen miles north-east of Peshawar. In Prakrit it is known as Pukkalaoti which is the source of the Greek name of the town Peukelaotis (q.v.).

Puṣkarāṇa Modern Pokharna on the south bank of the Damodar in the Bankura district, West Bengal, mentioned in the Susunia inscription of the fourth century AD.

Puṣkarī Capital of the Nala kings of north-eastern Deccan mentioned in one of their inscriptions discovered at Podagadh in Koraput district. The city was probably identical with the findspot of the inscription. Ep. Ind., XXI.155f.

Puṣpapura Name of Pāṭaliputra. According to the Gārgī Samhitā it was besieged by the Yavanas.

Q

Qandābil A city in northern Sind not far from the western bank of the Indus. It is mentioned in the Arab records. KFB., II.230-31.

Qanli City on the Makran coast in Baluchistan represented by modern Qanbali. According to the Arab writer Balādhuri it was a part of Sind (q.v.).

Qannazbur Also known as Fannazbur, it is modern Pañj-gur in Baluchistan. According to Balādhuri it was a part of as-Sind (q.v.). KFB, II.216 ff.

Qānuj Name of Kanauj as recorded by Masudi in his Murāj al-Zahab. According to him the kingdom of Qānuj included in the tenth century some portions of the Punjab and Sind and bordered on the dominions of the Rāṣtrakūṭas of the Deccan.

Qassah Arabic name of Cutch.

Qunduhar City said to have been occupied by Hisham ibn Amr in the eighth century according to the Arabic writers. It is identified with Kandhahar in the peninsula of Kathiawar.

Quzdār An Arab principality in Sind mentioned by Ibn Hauqal. Also known as Kuzdar, the territory comprised the region around Kabākānān or Kizkānān, i.e. Kikan or modern Kelat in Baluchistan. It was subsequently conquered by Sabuktigīn. Elliot, I.38-39.

R

Rāḍhā The Burdwan division of West Bengal comprising the districts of Burdwan, Hooghly, Howrah, Birbhum, Bankura, Midnapur and Purulia. The Rāḍhā people and their country are mentioned in ancient texts. The Jain works mention it as Lāḍha-deśa, divided into two segments, Vajjabhūmi (q.v.) and Subbhabhūmī (q.v.). This far-famed territory was divided into two parts, viz. Dakṣiṇa-Rāḍhā (q.v.) and Uttara-Rāḍhā-Manḍala (q.v.).

Rahavirapura A town near Mathura celebrated in Jain tradition.

Rai Name of the Rāḍhā country as recorded in the TN, I.584-86.

Raigirvagu Middle Palaeolithic site on the river of the same name in Nalgonda district, Andhra Pradesh.

Rairh Site in district Jaipur, Rajasthan, where excavations in the habitation area have yielded iron objects belonging to the third century BC.

Raivataka Hill at Junagarh opposite to Girnar. The Mbh., (I.218.8, I.219, II.14.50) and the Purāṇas (Varāha, CXL.66; Skanda, VII.2.1.68; Matsya, XXII.74, etc.) locate it near Prabhāsa and the western part of Udavanta hill near Somanātha. Raivataka, i.e. present Girnar, is very sacred to Jains. Uttarādhyana, SBE, XLV, 115.

Rājādittapuram Also known as Tirunavalur, it was a town between the rivers Pennar and Vellar named after the Cola prince Rājāditya.

Rājagāha, Rājagṛha Ancient capital of Magadha (25°02' N, 85°26' E) and one of the six main cities of India (Dīgha, II.147). Its other names were Kuśāgrapura, Girivraja and Bārhadrathapura. It has been identified with Rajgir in the Nalanda district of Bihar about thirteen miles southwest of Bihar-Sarif. The southern portion of the city was hill-girt, encircled with five hills, namely, Vebhāra (Vaibhāra), Vepulla (Vaipulya) Isigili (R̥sigiri), Pāṇḍava and Gijjhakuṣa (Gṛdhrakūṣa). It was an important centre of the Buddhists for several centuries. The relics of the Buddha's body were enshrined in a stūpa at this place. During the reign of Ajātaśatru, the first Buddhist council was held in the Saptaparnī cave of Rājagṛha. Aśoka constructed here a stūpa and pillar with an elephant capital. Archaeological remains belonging to the Guptas and later ages have been found at Rājagṛha. During the visits of Fa-hian and Hiuen Tsang, Rājagṛha was almost deserted. Here excavations have yielded a few iron objects apparently associated with the NBP ware which should be dated to the sixth century AD, Majjhima, II.68; Vimāna A, 82, Suttani A, II.383, Ghosh and Qureshi, Rajgir 2 ff.

Rājamahendrapura Same as Rajamahendri in Andhra Pradesh founded by Amma, II, AD 945-70. It probably became capital or a secondary capital of the later Eastern Cālukyas.

Rājanya People whose coins with legends either in Brahmi or in Kharosthi may be assigned to the latter half of the first century BC. They lived somewhere in northern or north-western Rajasthan. The BrS XIV.28 places them in the north along with the Yaudheyas and Trigartas.

Rājapura Modern Rajpur in the Kawarda Tahsil of the Raipur district, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Mandava-mahal inscription at Chaura. ICPB, I.164ff.

Rājapura Capital of Kaliṅga (q.v.) mentioned in Mbh, XII.4.3.

Rājapurī Modern Rajaori district in Kashmir, bounded on the north by the Pirpanchal, on the west by Poonch, on the south by Bhimbar, and on the west by Rihāsi and Akhnur. RT, VI. 286, 348-49, 351, VII.105, 267, 533, 539, 541, 556.

Rājyapura Modern Rajorgarh or Rajorgaḍh in the Rajgarh district of the former Alwar state, about twenty-eight miles south-west of the town of Alwar, mentioned in the Jaina inscriptions and later Gurjara-Pratihāra inscriptions, ARIE, 1961-62, B. 128; Ep. Ind., III.273-67.

Rakkhula A village, modern Lakhgaon in the Nasik district, Maharashtra, mentioned in the Dhulia copper plate of the time of the Rāṣṭrakūṭas in which it is placed in the Nāsikka Viśaya. Ep. Ind., VIII.185.

Rupar Chalcolithic site on the Sutlej which marks the northern boundary of Harappa culture. The site is on the junction of the Himalayan foothills and the plains, characterised by structures of baked and unbaked bricks, variety of pottery and a cemetery showing relics of pot-burial. The 1952-55 excavations have shown ample occurrence of iron objects in Period III.

Ruvika Modern Rui, eight miles south of Alta, Kolhapur. Alta CP, Ind. Ant., VII.211.

S

Śabara A generic term for non-Vedic tribes mentioned in Ait. Br., VII.18. This term may have something to do with the Suari of Pliny and the Sabarae of Ptolemy. The Sabaras were probably ancestors of the Savara'u or Sauras of the Vizagapatam hills, the Savaris of the area around Gwalior, and certain frontier tribes of Orissa. The Śabaras are found also in the south-east portion of the district of Raipur, in Sambalpur and Ganjam, the western part of the Cuttack district as well as in the north western portion of Vizagapatam. The Mbh., XII.207.42; Matsya, CXIV.46-48, and Vāyu, XLV.126 locates them in the Deccan together with the Vaidarbhas and Daṇḍakas.

Sabbisayira-1000 A territorial unit that seems to be identical with Sabbināṇḍu, which is located in the Karimnagar district, Andhra Pradesh. It is mentioned in the inscriptions of Beta II's reign who was a feudatory of the Kalyānī Cālukyas.

Sābhramatī River, same as modern Sābarmatī that rises in the Mewar hills and falls into the gulf of Cambay. The holy places on this river are extensively dealt with in the Padma, VI.131-70. It speaks of seven streams of this river, viz. Sābhramatī, Seṭikā (Śvetakā), Bakulā, Hiraṇmayī, Hastimatī (modern Hathimati), Vetravatī (modern Vatrak) and Bhādrāmukhī. It was also known as Śabhraṇvatī and Candanā. IGI, XXI. 344.

Saccē Saraucae People same as the Śakas.

Sadānīrā River serving as the boundary of Kosala and Videha according to Śat. Br., I.4.1.17. Sāyana explains it is Karatoyā and this is retained in the Amarakoṣa. The Mbh., II.20.27, VI.9.24, 35 keeps the two distinct and indicates that it was between the Gaṇḍakī and the Sarayū. Pargiter identifies Sadānīrā with the Rāptī.

Ṣaḍarhadvāna Buddhist establishment in Kashmir identified with the modern village of Harwan, two miles from the Shalimar garden on the Dal Lake (RT., I.174). Archaeological excavations in this site have yielded numerous Buddhist relics.

Sādrukā A village in Kosala. Samyutta, V.348.

Sagadhā Vāsaka An encampment and headquarters of the district of Sagadhāhāra mentioned in the Balasore copper plate inscription of Śrī Bhānu. IHQ, XI. 611-18; Ep. Ind., XXVI. 239-40.

Saptagaṅgā Collective name of seven rivers Gaṅga, Godāvarī, Kāverī, Tāmraparnī, Sindhu, Sarayu and Narmadā. According to another list Bhāgīrathī, Pāvani, Hrādinī, Hlādinī, Sitā, Sindhu and Vaṅkṣu.

Saptagodāvara Holy place, seven mouths of the Godāvarī, about sixteen miles from Pithapuram in Godavari district. They are mentioned in the Khairha plate of king Yaśaḥkarṇa dated 1071-72 A.D. Ep. Ind., XII.205ff; SP. 95.

Saptagrāma Medieval capital of south-western Bengal. The famous city is now represented by Satgaon, a small village on the left bank of the Sarasvatī in the Hooghly district, West Bengal. It should be mentioned in this connection that in earlier times the major waterload of the Bhāgirathī (Hooghly river) flowed through the Sarasvatī which accounts for the growth of a great port and market-town on its bank. Owing to the silting of Sarasvatī the waterload subsequently began to flow through the present course of the Hooghly river which contributed to the decline of Saptagrāma.

Saptapuṣkariṇī Also known as Stana-kunḍa, it is a collective name of seven springs at Thid in Kashmir. Ain, II.361.

Saptārcī Holy place, possibly the same as Guptārcī at Viṣṇupada or Saptārṣa (Satara) in Maharashtra. SP., 95.

Saptasindhavaḥ A definite country according to RV, VIII.24.27, whereas in other places of the same text seven streams themselves are intended. According to Max Müller, the seven rivers are the five rivers of the Punjab along with Indus and Sarasvatī. Ludwig, Lassen and Whitney substituted Kubhā for the Sarasvatī and think that originally the Oxus also must have been one of the seven. Max Müller's view seems to be more reasonable.

Sarabhapura Name of a kingdom comprising Raipur, Arang, Khariar and Sarangarh, all situated in the Raipur district of Madhya Pradesh. Hiralal thinks that Śarabhapura may be another name of Sripur in the district of Raipur. ICPB, 90.

Sarabos Greek name of the river Sarayu or Ghogra as recorded in Ptolemy VII.1.28.

Śāradātrītha Modern Sardi on the right bank of the river Kisangaṅgā in Kashmir. Ain., II.365-66.

Sarākoṭṭa A viṣaya, same as modern Sargot in Marot, Jodhpur, Rajasthan, mentioned in the Harsa stone inscription of Cāhamāna Vigharāja II. Ep. Ind., II.116-30; Ind. Ant., 1913.60.

Sarai Nahar Rai Mesolithic site in the Ganges valley, Uttar Pradesh, situated on the bank of a horse-shoe lake, about 15 km from Pratapgarh. It has yielded two dozen burials in a country.

Sāranātha Site of the Buddha's first sermon, represented by modern Sarnath (25°22'N, 83°01'E), district Varanasi, Uttar Pradesh. The modern name seems to be a derivative of Sāraṅganātha meaning 'lord of deer'. The earliest remains of Sarnath date from the days of Aśoka who erected here an inscribed pillar. The Dharmarājikā stūpa was also built by Aśoka. In the Suṅga, Kuṣāṇa and Gupta period Sarnath became a great monastic establishment. The Dhamekh Stūpa is the most imposing monument, a cylindrical tower, 93 feet in basal diameter and 143 ft. in height including the foundation. The monasteries of Sarnath were built and rebuilt in successive periods. A few images of the Mahāyāna-Vajrayāna pantheon have been discovered here.

Saraostos Saurashtra, i.e. Kathiawar or South Kathiawar. This name was used by Strabo.

Sārasadollaka Modern Sarsi, a village two miles south of the Śoṇa and thirty-four miles southwest of Chandrehe in Madhya Pradesh mentioned in the Gurgi stone inscription of Kokalladeva II.CII., IV.227.

Sārasvata Eastern Punjab named after the traditional river Sarasvatī. In the lexical works Sārasvata has been identified with Vikarṇika, Haihayapura and Māhiṣmatī. In the Puranic lists of Janapadas the Sārasvatas are located in the Aparānta division and as such they may also be identified with the people of the Sarasvatī valley in Gujarat.

Sarasvatī The best of rivers (nadītamā, RV, II.41.16) most frequently mentioned in the RV. In the nadīstuti (RV, X.75.5) Sarasvatī comes between the Yamunā and the Śutudri, and is generally identified with modern Sarsuti, which is lost at the desert at Bhatnair. It is possible that the Sarasvatī was as large as the Sutlej in the Vedic age and actually reached the sea, as the RV, VI.61.2.8; VII.95.2 describes it as going to the ocean.

Saraṭavura Village in Puligere Viṣaya (q.v.), it is modern Sortur, sixteen miles east of Lakshmeshvar in the Dharwar district, Karnataka. Sortur Stone ins. Ep. Ind., XXI.208.

Śarāvati Probably same as the river Rāptī. (Pāṇ, VI.3.120; Mbh, VI.9.20). In Raghu, XV.97 Śarāvati is mentioned as a city which was the capital of Lava, son of Rāma.

Sarayū Celebrated river on which stood the city of Ayodhyā. It is the Sarabos of Ptolemy. RV, IV.30.18, V.33.9, X.64.9; Pāṇ, VI.4.174; Rām, II.49.15; Raghu, XV.95, 100; Cullav. (SBE, XX.302), Milinda (SBE, XXXV.171); Matsya, XXII.19. CXXI.16-17; Vāyu, XLV.94; Brahmāṇḍa II.18.70.

Sardonix Mountain, same as the Satpura range, mentioned in Ptolemy VII.1.20.

Sāregrāma Modern Sirsi in North Kanara district mentioned in the Sirsi plates of Ravivarman. Ep. Ind., XXVI.264-72.

Sarnal Site of the Galteśvara temple in the Kaira district.

Sarveśa-Kerala One of the fifty-six countries mentioned in the Śaktisaṅgama which is said to have extended from Anantaśaila to the city called Uḍupa. The Anata hill may refer to Trivandrum which is known as Anantaśayana or Anantapura. Uḍupa-pura is possibly Udipi, headquarters of the Udipi Taluka of the South Kanara district. SGAMI, 92.

Śaryañāvant A lake in the district of Kurukṣetra mentioned in the Vedic texts. Its other name was probably Anyataḥplakṣā. RV, I.84.14, VIII.6.39, XI.65.22, X.352 etc.; Jaim. Br., III.64.

Sāsaimaua A village in the Koṭi-pattalā mentioned in the Chhatarpur grant of Gāhaḍavāla Govindacandra. It has been identified with Sisamau which is now a part of the Kanpur city. Ep. Ind., XVIII.225.

Satajuṇā Modern Satājana, about thirteen miles south-west of Mandhata in Nimar district, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Mandhata grant of the time of Paramāra Devapāla. It lay in the Mahuāda-pratijāgaranaka (q.v.). Ep. Ind., IX.103-17.

Satallamā Modern Satalma in Barpali, Sambalpur district, mentioned in the Nagpur Museum grant of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya. Ep. Ind., VIII.138-43; XI.101ff,201.

Sa-t'a-ni-ssu-fa-lo Chinese name of Sthānviśvara or Thanesar as recorded by Hiuen Tsang.

Sataṣpadmāvāṭī A viṣaya in the Puṇḍravardhana-bhukti in which was included the Kumāratālaka-maṇḍala. It was apparently situated on the banks of the river Padmā. The name of the viṣaya is important as furnishing evidence of the early use of the name Padmā for the main eastern branch of the Ganges.

Sat Deuliya Site of an interesting nāgara temple with ratha plan and curvilinear tower in Burdwan district, West Bengal.

Sātimāla-Bhoga A subdivision of the Palayaṭṭhāna-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Jejuri copper plate of Vinayāditya, dated S.609. It is to be located some where in Phaltan region, Maharashtra. Ep. Ind., XIX.63.

Śatruñjaya A hill at Palitana in Gujarat celebrated for Jain temple complexes.

Satṣaṣṭhī-*viṣaya Modern Salsette island mentioned in the Yādava records as part of Koṅkana-deśa (q.v.). In the records of the Śīlāhāras of North Koṅkan it is mentioned as a part of Puri-Koṅkana-Maṇḍala (q.v.). JBBAS, V. 183, XII.333; Ind. Ant., V. 277; ZDMG, XC.265.

Sātvant, Sāvat (A) A northern people, originally living near the Gaṅgā and Yamunā (Śat Br., VIII. 5.4.11; XIII.5.4.21), but subsequently pushed southwards beyond the river Cambal (Ait. Br., VIII.14). They had close relation with the Bhojas (q.v.) and are spoken of as an offshoot of the Yadus (Matsya, XLIII.48, 46-48; Vāyu, XCIV.52; XCV.18, XCVI.1-2; Viṣṇu IV.13.1-6).

Satyapura Modern Sanchor region in Rajasthan mentioned in the records of the Cāhamānas of Nadol. It was the political centre of a branch of the Cāhamānas as is known from the Khyāta of Muhanota Nainsi as also from epigraphs. Ep. Ind. XI.64-67,73-79.

Saubhāgyapura Modern Sohagpur in the Sahdol district, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in Bilhari stone inscription of the time of the Kalacuri Yuvarāja II. It is said to be the Vairāṭapura, capital of king Virāṭa of the Mbh., Ep. Ind., I.251-70; ASR, VII.245-46.

Saurasa-Vihāra A Buddhist monastery which lay in the modern village of Sowur on the bank of the Anchar Lake to the north of Srinagar in Kashmir.

Seng-Ha-Pu-Lo Simhapura Country mentioned by Hiuen Tsang which was 700 li or one hundred seventeen miles south-east of Taxila. It was then a dependency of Kashmir and was about 3500 li or six hundred miles in circuit with the Indus on its west frontier. The capital was fourteen or fifteen li in circuit which was identified by Cunningham (AGI, 142f) with Ketas situated on the north side of the Salt Range sixteen miles from Pind-dadan-khan and eighteenth miles from Chakowal. but not more than eighty-five miles from Shah-dheri or Taxila. Hiuen Tsang mentioned the existence of one Aśoka tope and a deserted monastery near the south of the capital. Watters, I.248.

Seres Land of the Chinese and Tibetans in Central Asia, according to Strabo.

Se Sāyi A village in Vikaura-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Semra grant of the Candella Paramardi. It is modern Sajee near Madanpura in the Jhansi district, Uttar Pradesh. Ep. Ind., IV.153ff.

Setaka The chief town of the Sumbhas (Sumhas, q.v.). A Svetakā-dhiṣṭhāna is often referred to in the inscriptions of the Eastern Gaṅgas.

Setu, Setubandha The supposed bridge, called Adam's Bridge, between Rāmeśvara and Srīlaṅkā, said to have been built by Rāma. The Brahmakhaṇḍa of Skanda III.1-52 deals with the efficacy of pilgrimage to this place. Rām, VI.22.45-53, VI.126.15; Padma, v.35.62; Bhāgavata, VII.14.31, X.79.15; Garuḍa, I.28.1.

Seuna Deśa A big administrative division of the Yādavas which included the northern part of the Ahmednagar district, Sinnar Taluka of the Nasik district and the Western part of the Aurangabad district, Seunapura, the chief place of the Deśa, is perhaps Sinnar in the Nasik district.

Shahi Tump Protohistoric settlement situated on the Kej river at a distance of six km from the Turbat Fort in Western Makran, Baluchistan, with distinctive burials and painted grey ware culture which is proved to be earlier than the Harappan. The latter element in the forms of red ware, chert blades and mud-brick structures and numerous terracotta bulls is however found in subsequent strata. Again the distinctive post-Harappan cultural trait is represented by the finds of the cemetery.

Shah-Ji-Ki-Dheri Site of Buddhist establishment in Peshawar (34°00'N, 71°37'E). It was visited by the Chinese pilgrims, Fa-hian, Hiuen Tsang and Sung-yun. Excavations have yielded here Buddhist remains of the Kuṣāṇa period.

Sharibahlol Buddhist establishment (34°15'N, 71°58'E) in Peshawar district where remains of ancient Stūpas and rich collection of stone and stucco sculptures have been found.

Sihgao Lower Palaeolithic site on the Dudhasagar, Goa.

Śibi Śibipura See under Siboi.

Siboi A people of the lower part of the Rechna Doab whose territory during Alexander's invasion lay in the Shorkot region in the Jhang district below the junction of the Jhelum and the Chenab. They were probably identical with the Śivas of the RV, VII, 18.7. The Ummadanti (no. 527) and Vessantara (no. 547) Jātakas mention a Śibi country and its cities, Aritthapura and Jetuttara. A place called Śivapura is mentioned by Patañjali on Pāṇini, IV.2.2 which is identical with Śibipura mentioned in a Shorkot inscription (EI, 1921, 16). The Mbh, III.130-31 refers to a Śibi state near Yamunā ruled by king Uśīnara. It appears that the Śibis had migrated in different parts of the country because evidence is not lacking that they had settlements in Sind, Madhyamikā (near Chitor, Rajasthan) and even on the banks of Kāverī in the South.

Siddhalagrāma Modern Siddhangram in the Birbhum district, West Bengal. JRAS, 1935, 99; IB, 71.

Siddha Patha Modern Sidau or Budil, lying on a route which in an almost straight line connects Srinagar with Aknur and Sialkot in the Punjab plain. RT, VIII.557.

Sindān A city in Cutch occupied by the Arabs at the beginning of the ninth century.

Sindavāḍi Land of the Siṅḍās which comprised parts of northern Mysore, Bellary, Dharwar and Bijapur districts of Karnataka. The Sindā families ruled from Bagalkot and Yelburga in Bijapur and Hollavur and Belagutti in Mysore.

Sindhu Territory watered by the Indus, now represented by modern Sind. The Hindu geographers probably included the lower Indus valley in the term Sindhu-Sauvira. When Hiuen Tsang visited Sind, the whole region from Shikarpur down to the sea was politically subject to Sind, but of this area Sin-tu (Sind) appears to have formed only a small portion. To the Arab writers, however, as-Sind (q.v.) meant a much bigger area which comprised the whole of the lower Sindhu valley from Multan down to the sea, including nearly the whole of modern Baluchistan. LEC., 329-31; KFB, II.210ff; Watters II.252 ff.; AGI, 285ff., 690.

Sindhu River, same as the modern Indus which rises in Tibet, passes through Kashmir, the Punjab and Sind and discharges its waters into the Arabian Sea. It finds mention in the Vedic, epico-puranic, religious and secular literature of ancient India.

Excavations at this place have yielded several pieces of pottery, coins and terracotta figurines. According to the Periplus 51 it was 10 day's journey from Paithan and was a great mart of cotton products. In Ptolemy VII.1.82 it is mentioned as belonging to the country of the Ariake. CII.III.111; JIH, LI.316; JNSI, XXXIII.37-4.

Ta-Hia Chinese name of Bactria. See under Tukhāra.

Tallakampa A country mentioned in the Rāmācarita. Its king Rudraśikhara joined Rāmapāla in his expedition against Varendrī. It is modern Telkupi in the Manbhum district. This region is still known as Sikharbhum, perhaps after the royal family.

Tallaṅga One of the fifty-six countries mentioned in the Śaktisaṅgama which is said to have existed between Śrīśaila and Coleśa (site of the Brhadīśvara temple at Tanjore). Tallaṅga is the same as Telengana. SGAMI, 95.

Tajjika Same as the Arabs mentioned in the Valabhī records.

Takka-Deśa The region between the upper waters of the Chenab and the Ravi. It has been identified with the Tseh-kia of Hiuen Tsang, the capital of which was close to the old city of She-kie-lo (Sākala or Sialkot). Al-Bīrūnī mentioned is as Tākeshar. According to the Abhidhānacintamaṇi it was same as Bāhika.

Takaṇalādam Same as Dakṣiṇa Rāḍhā (q.v.) mentioned in the Tiruvalaṅgādu plates of Rājendra Cola as one of his conquered territories.

Takkārikhetaka-grāma A village on the banks of the river Buravi (Bori) in the district of Sthālī-nagara-viṣaya-bhoga. It is represented by Tākarakheḍa situated about six miles to the east of Amalner, the headquarters of the Amalner Taluk in the Jalgaon district. Ep. Ind., XXXVIII.71.

Takkolam The venue of war between the Colas and the Rāṣtrakūṭas which lay six miles to the south-east of Arkoṇam in the North Arcot district. Ep. Ind., IV.331.

Takṣakanāga Sacred spring near Jayavana, modern Zevan in Kashmir. Mbh., III.82.90; Padma, I.25.2; RT. I.200.

Takṣaśilā City of ancient Gandhāra (q.v.) represented by modern Taxila (33°40'N, 72°50'E). The remains of the great city are situated immediately to the east and north-east of Sarai-Kala, a junction on the railway, twenty miles north-west of Rawalpindi. The valley in which they lie is watered by the Haro river. Within the valley and within five km of each other are the remains of three distinct cities. The southernmost and oldest of these occupies an elevated plateau, known locally as the Bhir mound. Others are known as Sirkap and Sirsukh.

Talahāri-Maṇḍala An administrative division probably same as the Taradaṃśaka bhukti, which comprised the southern portions of the Bilaspur and Janjgir Tahsils and northern portion of the Raipur district, Madhya Pradesh. CII.IV.411,453, 466-67,503.

Talahattikā A town at the foot of the hill of Chitor, Rajasthan, mentioned in the records of the Guhilaputras. JASB, LV(1), 46-47; Ep. Ind., XX. App.81, no.570.

Talaja Buddhist cave site (21°21' N, 72°02' E) in Bhavnagar district, Gujarat.

Talājhā Modern Talaja or Tilajha on the Setramji (Śutruṅjaya) river near Palitana in the south-east of Kathiawar, mentioned in the Timana grant of the time of Chaulukya Bhīma II. Ind. Ant., XI.337-40.

Talakād Capital of the Western Gaṅgas in South Karṇāṭaka. It is same as Puranic Tālikaṭa.

Talakajja A village in Sānulā or Sanṛtā viṣaya (q.v.) belonging to Kosala-deśa mentioned in the Patna grant of Mahāśivagupta Yayāti. It is modern Talagaja, ten miles south-east of Bolangir, Orissa. JASB, 1005, I.6-7.

Talapāṭaka Modern Talvade, Malagaon Taluka, Nasik district. Pimpri CP. Ep. Ind. X.85.

Taleyur Modern Talemoral in Navalgunda subdivision, Dharwar district, Karnataka. Konnur CP of S 782. Ep. Ind., VI.29.

Tālikaṭa Same as Talakad in southern Karnataka mentioned in the Puranic lists of Janapadas.

Tālikheḍa Talakad, sixteen miles south by east of Konnur, Navalgunda, Dharwar, Karnataka. Konnur CP of S.782. Ep. Ind., VI.29.

Ta-Lo-Pi-Ch'a Chinese name of the Draviḍa country as recorded by Hiuen Tsang.

Tamalites Greek name of Tāmralipta as recorded by Ptolemy.

Tamanāla Northern region of the former Raigarh state mentioned in a stone inscription from Rajim dated K.E.896. CII. IV.450ff.

Tamaṇur-Nādu A division of Jayankonda-Śoṛa-maṇḍalam (q.v.) mentioned in Tirumalai Tamil Cola inscriptions. It was the area around the villages Tammanur in Chingleput district, Tamil Nadu SII.I.105.

Tamaramuge A village in the Penungāl viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Vakkaleri copper plate of the time of Cālukya Kīrtivarman II. It is modern Tavarkop in Hangal, Dharwar district, Karnataka. Ep. Ind., V.202.

Tamasā Modern Tonse, flowing twelve miles west of the Sarayu and falling on the Ganges. An inscription dated 512-13 A.D. refers to the grant of a village called Āśramika which was situated on this river. Rām, I.2.3, II.45.32; Raghu, IX.20, XIV.76; CII, III.128.

Tambaḍa-Grāma A village in the Alkuka Viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Elapur copper plate of the time of the Cālukyas of Badami. It is modern Tambur, two miles west of Bammigati (q.v.) and about twenty miles south of Dharwar. IHQ., IV.428.

Tāmrapuri Modern Tamgaon in the Belgaum Taluka, Belgaum district. It is mentioned in the Yādava records as situated in Venugrāma Viṣaya (q.v.). Ind. Ant., XIV. 69.

Taminhal Middle Palaeolithic site in North Karnataka.

Tāmralipta, Tāmralipti Port city and country. The Abhidhānacintāmaṇi mentions Dāmalipta (q.v.), Tāmalipta, Tamālinī, Stambapura and Viṣṇugṛha as synonyms of Tāmralipti. The Trikāṇḍaśeṣa adds Velākula and Tamālika (Tamluk). It is mentioned by Ptolemy as Tamalities and is placed on the Ganges in a way which suggests its connection with the country of the Mandalai. The town of Tamluk in Midnapur, West Bengal, to which it is taken to correspond, is on the right bank of the river Rupnarayan about twelve miles from its junction with the Hooghly. The course of these rivers have shifted frequently, and it is possible that in early times the port of Tāmralipti might have been situated on the Sarasvatī or another branch of the Ganges. In the days of the Chinese pilgrims Fa-hian, Hiuen

Tsang and I-tsing and of Daṇḍin, the author of the Daśakumāracarita, it was the place for embarkation for Ceylon, Java and China in the east and the land of the Yavanas in the west. The Kathasaritsāgara preserves traditions about people embarking on ships at Tāmralipti and going to Katāha, possibly, the Malay Peninsula. The decline of this famous port commenced after the eighth century A.D. The BṛS XIV. 6-8 refers to the country of the Tāmraliptakas and distinguishes it from other regions of Bengal. The Jain Prajñāpanā mentions Tāmralipti as city of the Vaṅgas. In the digvijaya section of the Sabhāparvan of the Mbh Tāmralipta is distinguished from Suhma (q.v.) and other parts of Bengal. In the days of Hiuen Tsang it lay over 900 li, that is about 150 miles, from Samataṭa (q.v.) and was about 1400 li (two hundred thirty-three miles) in circuit.

Tāmrapaṇa, Tāmrapaṇī One of the nine subdivisions of India found in the Purāṇas. It is Taprobane of the classical writers and identified with Ceylon. The region around the southern river of the same name (q.v.) is suggestive of Tāmra-rāṣṭra mentioned by Anuruddha.

Tāmrarāṣṭra A kingdom in South India mentioned in the Nāmarūpapariccheda of Anuruddha. The only geographical name associated with the word tāmra in South India seems to be that of the river Tāmrapaṇī flowing through the Tirunelveli district into the Gulf of Mannar, a second stream of the same name flowing through the old Travancore state. There is also a Tāmrapura in Kambuja, a Tāmrappattana in Arakan and a Tāmraliṅga in Malayasia. The island of Ceylon is called Tāmradvīpa, Tāmrapaṇa or Tamrapaṇī in Indian literature and Taprobane (also Palaesimundu i.e. Pārasamudra) by the Classical writers. SGAMI, 317.

Tāmrapaṇī River in the Pāṇḍya country rising from Malaya mountain and falling into the gulf of Mannar through the Tirunelveli district. Pearls were found here according to the Raghu, IV. 49-50 and Brahmāṇḍa, III. 13.24. A second stream of the same name flows through the old Travancore state. Rām, IV.41. 17-18; Brahma, XXVII.36; Matsya, CXIV.30; Vāyu, XLV.105; Bhāgavata, X.79.16; Ep. Ind., XX.23.

Taṇḍabutti Same as Daṇḍabhukti (q.v.) mentioned in the Tiruvalangadu plates of Rājendra Cola as one of his conquered territories.

Taṇḍaralavalu Also read as Tundilavāluja, this village belonged to Dakṣiṇa Tosali. It was somewhere near Patiakella, the findspot of the inscription in which it is mentioned, in the Cuttack district, Orissa. CII. III.221; IO, I(II), 124-27.

Taṇḍikuppaka Village near Anjeri in Kroṣṭukavarttani (modern Srikulam district, Andhra Pradesh) mentioned in the Urjam plates of Indravarman II. Ep. Ind., XXXVII, 159ff.

Taṅgana Himalayan people settling around Taṅganapura near Joshimath in the Garhwal district; Uttar Pradesh, mentioned in the Purānic lists of Janapadas.

Taṅja A city where the Buddhist author Anuruddha of Ceylon resided in South India. It may be either Thanjavur or Tanjore, situated on a branch of the Kāverī, or Tañjai, otherwise called Tanjakkur, near Madurai.

Tañjai Name of Tanjakkur as mentioned in certain Pāṇḍya inscriptions. (see above).

Tañjāvūr Also known as Tañjapuri, it is modern Tanjore, the headquarters of the district of the same name in Tamil Nadu. It was chosen as capital city by Vijayālaya. Here the great Bṛhadīśvara temple was constructed about 1010 A.D. during the time of Rājarāja. In the pavilion of the temple in the foreground is the big nandi, the second largest in India. It has a single prākāra with closed verandah lining the interior. It has two entrances with stunted gopuras.

Tañjāvūr-Paṭnam Same as the Tanjore district, mentioned in the Cola records.

Tan-mo li-ti Chinese equivalent of Tāmralipti as recorded by Hiuen Tsang.

Tanwat Same as Tīrabhukti or Tirhut mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī.

Tapati River, same as the Tāpī (q.v.). Matsya, XXII.32-33.

Tāpī River rising from the Vindhya and falling into the Arabian Sea at Surat. It is mentioned in the Purāṇas and in Uṣavadāta's Nasik inscription no. 10. Matsya, CXIV.27; Brahma, XXVII.33; Vayu, XLV.102; Agni, CIX.22; BG, XVI.509.

Tapodārāma A grove near a large lake called Tapodā from which a stream of the same name (now known as Sarasvatī in the vicinity of Rājagṛha) flowed out. Vinaya, II.76; Dīgha, II.116; Āṅguttara, v. 196; Majjhima, II.192; Jāt, II.56.

Taprobane Greek name of Śrīlaṅkā or Ceylon. In the time of Periplus the island was still known as Taprobane (Tambapanni or Tāmraparṇī) and Palaesimundu. It is only in the Geography of Ptolemy that we come across the new name Sālike along with the older designations (Taprobane and Simounden). The inhabitants of Salike were known to Ptolemy as Salai, doubtless the Sīhalas of Ceylonese tradition. The name Sīhala (Sīphala) is also met with in the Nagarjunikonda inscription of about the third century A.D.

Tārā Holy place identified with Farapur near Nalhati in the Birbhum district of West Bengal. SP, 97.

Taradamaśaka-Bhukti An administrative division, probably same as Talahāri-maṇḍala (q.v.) mentioned in the Mallar plates of Mabāśivagupta. It comprised the southern portions of the Bilāspur and Janjgir Tahsils and the northern portion of the Raipur district, Madhya Pradesh. Ep. Ind., XXIII. 120; CII.IV.503.

Tārakeśvara Village in the Hooghly district of West Bengal famous for its shrine of Śiva. IGI, XXIII.249.

Taraori, Talawari Same as Tarain, the venue of the fateful war between the Cāhamānas and the Turks, situated on the route from Karnal to Thaneswar, Haryana.

Tarddevādi Viṣaya (1000) Region around the village Tadewadi on the south bank of the river Bhimā in the Indi Taluka of the Bijapur district.

mentioned in the Kalyāṇi Cālukya, the Kalacuri and the Yādava records. It is also mentioned as Tarddavadi and Tadevadi. Ind. Ant., XIX.272; Ep. Ind., XV.3, 27, 29, 34; XXI.9.

Tardehi Lower Palaeolithic site on the Bearma, Damoh district, Madhya Pradesh.

Tarkāri A Brahmanical settlement in Śrāvastī of North Bengal, also known by such names as Tarkārikā, Tarkāra, Takkāra, Takāri Takkārikā, etc. mentioned in the Pāla records. There is much controversy in regard to its identification. In all probability it lay in the Bogra district of North Bengal. Ep. Ind., I.336, III.348, 353, IX.107, XIII.283, XXIII.103; Ind. Ant., XVI.204, 208, XVII.118, 121; IC., II.358-59.

Tāsapaikerā A village in the Uttarapalli on the river Mahānadi mentioned in a grant of Raṇabhaṅja found at the village of the same name in Binka to the north of the river. Ep. Ind., XVIII.302.

Trivenī Confluence of any three rivers, but the term usually refers to Prayāga in Allahabad, There is a Triveni in the Hooghly district, West Bengal, where the combined course of the Gaṅgā and the Yamunā is joined by a local Sarasvatī. The Varāha CXLIV refers to a Trivenī as the junction of the Devikā, Gaṅḍakī and Brahmaputra.

Trivenī See under Muktaveni.

Trtsu Probably kinsmen of the Bhāratas (q.v.), the Trtsus in the Ṛgvedic age occupied the country to the east of Paruṣṇī, the modern Ravi. In post-Ṛgvedic times the coalesced with the Purus (q.v.) their erstwhile enemies, to form the Kuru (q.v.) people of later times.

Tukhāra Seems to be Ta-hia (q.v.) of the Chinese records which formed the northern province of Bactria. According to early Muslim authors Tukharistan usually indicated the Old Bactria to the south of the Oxus, but properly speaking, it was the mountainous country on both sides of the river as far as Badakhashan.

Tulajāpura Modern Tuljapur, four miles from the Khandwa railway station, in Khandwa district. Devī Bh., VII.38.

Tuleṇḍā Probably modern Tulund, a village near Pow to the north-east of Bolangir mentioned in a Cuttack grant of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya. Ep. Ind., III.345-51.

Tulumva-Khaṇḍa Modern Turun on the Mahānadi, twenty-seven miles south of Sambalpur, mentioned in a Cuttack grant of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya. Ep. Ind., III.345-51.

Tuḷu-Nāḍu Northern Kerala, the country of the Tuḷuvas, mentioned in a Tamil inscription on the Tirumalai rock. SII, I.104.

Tumbavana Modern Tumain in the Guna district, mentioned in the Puranic lists of Janapadas and also inscriptions from the stūpa of Sanchi (Lüders, List nos.201-202, 449-50, 520,). It is mentioned in the Buddhist Suttani 194 and also in the Tumain fragmentary inscription of the time of Kumāragupta I. Sel. Ins., 299.

Tumbigi Modern Tumbagi in the Middle Bihal Taluka of the Bijapur district, Karnataka. Tumbagi ins. dated s 926. Ep. Ind., XVII.6.

Tummāna Modern Tumāna (22°35' N, 82°45' E) forty-five miles north of Ratnapur (22°12' N, 82°11' E) in the Bilaspur district, Madhya Pradesh which was the political centre of a branch of the Kalacuris. Tumāna is referred to as a deśa in a Muhammadpur epigraph (Ind. Ant., XX.84ff; Ep. Ind., I.39ff.).

Tūnakupaka Modern Tunu in the Sikar-Shekhawati region of Jaipur, Rajasthan, mentioned in the Harsa stone inscription of the Cāhamāna Vigharāja II. Ep. Ind., II.116-30.

Tuṇḍurāva A village in the Ramalavva-vṛṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Orissa grant of Vidyādharaḥhañja. It is modern village of Tuṇḍura in the Aska Taluka of the Ganjam district. JASB, LVI.154-60; Ep. Ind., IX.271-77, XVIII.301.

Tuṅgabhadrā The united course of the rivers Tuṅgā and Bhadrā watering Karnataka. The junction takes place near Kudli and the united course falls into the Krishna near Alampur in the Raichur district. (Matsya XXII.45, CXIV.29; Bhāgavata V.19.18; Brahma XXVII.35; Vāyū XLV.104). The Cālukya king Someśvara I died on its bank Vik. IV.44-68; Ep. Ind., XII.294).

Turān An Arab principality in Sind mentioned in by Ibn Hauqal. It lay just below the kingdom of Quzdar (q.v.) Elliot, I.456; LEC, 331-32.

Turiva Same as Arachosia or Kandahar.

Tuvara Village, identical with modern Reṅṅāla in Palnad Taluka, Guntur district, Andhra Pradesh, mentioned in the Reṅṅāla pillar inscription of Siri-Cāntamūla I. Ep. Ind., XXXVII.29ff.

Turvaśa Ṛgvedic tribe living somewhere between the Asiknī (q.v.) and the Paruṣṇī (q.v.). Later they merged with the Krivis, etc. to form the Pañcālā people. (Śat. Br., XIII.5.4.16). This fusion seems probable in view of the Puranic statement that, after Marutta, the line of the Turvaśa was merged into the Paurava line, of which the Pañcālas are represented as an offshoot.

Tuvarai Tamil name of Dvārakā (q.v.).

U

Ubbhika Village in the north of Jamalakheṣa of the Surambi kingdom mentioned in the Mahurzari plates of Pṛthvisena II. It has been identified with Khubali, two miles to the north of Jamalpani in Saoner Taluka of the Nagpur district. ABORI, LII.191-94.

U-Ch'a Chinese equivalent of Udra or Odra, the Balasore-Cuttack-Puri region of Orissa, as recorded by Hiuen Tsang.

Ucchāla A country mentioned in the Rāmacarita. Its ruler Bhāskara joined Rāmapāla in his expedition against Varendri. It has been identified with Jain Ujhial, a pargana in Birbhum district, West Bengal.

Ucchādānagar Modern Uchahra or Unchahra, thirty-one miles to the north of Karitalai in Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Karitalai inscription of Virarāmadeva of AD 1335. ICPB, 39; ASR IX.5-6.

U-Chang-Na, Udyāna Country mentioned by Hiuen Tsang which was situated on the river Su-po-fu-su-to, the Subhavastu or Suvāstu of the Sanskrit literature and the Suastus of Arrian being identified with the modern Swat river. It was 5000 li or 833 miles in circuit and it comprised the modern districts of Panjkora, Bijawar, Swat and Buner. Its capital was Men-kie-li or Manjhil which has been identified with modern Mangura or Manglora between Swat and Buner.

Udabhāṇḍapura Ancient capital of the Kia-pi-shi country which subsequently became the seat of the Śāhis of Afghanistan and Punjab. It was the Waihand of Al-Bīrūnī (Sachau, I.206, 259, 317), modern Ohind or Und near Attock on the Indus. RT, V.152-55, VI.175.

Udagi Hill fortress in southern Western Ghats, conquered by the Cola king Rājarāja I. Details of this conquest are given in the Kaliṅgattupparaṇi, VIII.24.

Udantapura See under Odantapuri.

Udayagiri Site of Brahmanical rock-cut shrine, near Bhilsa, Madhya Pradesh. The shrines, which represent one movement, may be dated about the beginning of the fifth century AD. The earliest of these shrines may be recognised in what is known as the 'false cave' which is nothing but a conversion of a natural ledge of rock into shrine by adding to it a structural portico with pillars in front. The other shrines are elaborations of the 'false cave' and consist of plain rectangular shrine chambers scooped out of the rock, with shallow porticos, built, of stone, in front. Cave IX is locally known as the 'Amṛta cave'.

Udayanta Mountain near Somanātha in Kathiawar. Skanda, VI.2.11.11.

Udayapura Site of the Nilakanṭheśvara temple in Gwalior which was built by the Paramāra king Udayāditya. The temple is of nāgara type having analogues in the Deccan.

Uḍḍamaloka-Viṣaya A district in Orissa mentioned in the Olasing plate of Bhānuvardhana. D.C. Sircar read it as Uttamāloka. JKHRS, II.37-46; IO

I(11) 133-35; Ep. Ind. XXVIII.331.

Uddehika Tribe of Madhyadeśa according to Br.S. Al-Bīrūnī observed that their country lay near the city of Bazana (q.v.), which lay to the south-east of Kanauj, the distance between the two places being the same as that between Kanauj and Mathura. Bazana, called the capital of the Gurjara country, is no doubt modern Bayana in Bharatpur. Coins, bearing the legend udehaki and udehaki suyamitasa may be assigned to the second half of the first century BC.

Uḍḍiyāna See under Oḍḍiyāna. This territory in the Swat valley is mentioned by Hiuen Tsang as Wu-chang-na.

Udīcya Region between the Eastern Punjab and the Oxus valley, including the Himalayan region.

Udīśa Country same as Orissa.

Udra See under U-ch'a.

Ujāni Holy place identified with modern Kogram in the Burdwan district, West Bengal. SP, 97.

Ujjapurī A town of the Telugu Cōdas now represented by modern Ujjini in Kudligi Taluka, Bellary district.

Ujjayanta Girnar in Saurāṣṭra which was the southern boundary of Vastupathakṣetra. According to the Abhidhānacintāmaṇi it was same as Raivataka (q.v.). Mbh, III.88, 21-24; Vāyu, XLV92. LXXVII.52; Vāmana, XIII.18; Skanda, VII.2.11.11.

Ujjayint Capital of Avantī (q.v.) on the river Śiprā (23°11' N, 75°51' E) represented by the area around the present city of the same name in district Ujjain, Madhya Pradesh. Archaeological excavations have shown broadly four periods of occupations in this place. Period I assigned to c. 700-500 BC is characterised by the black-and-red ware and various other forms of pottery along with iron objects for domestic use. Period II, assigned to c. 500-200 BC, is characterised, among others, by the NBP ware in a wide variety of shapes and forms including local imitations. Excavations have also revealed that the ancient township of Ujjain was protected from almost the beginning of its life by a massive mud-fortification and that there existed an extensive manufacture of iron objects involving smelting and forging in period II. Ujjayini is mentioned in the Rock Edict of Aśoka (CII, I, 92 ff.) which in his days was the headquarters of a southern viceroyalty. The town is mentioned in Periplus (XLVIII) as Ozene.

Ujjayini City in Ceylon, stated to have been founded by Vijaya's minister Acyutagamin, which was named after the capital of Avanti. SGAMI, 325.

Ujūṭṭha A township in Kosala. Dīgha, I.161; Majjhima, II.125.

Ukkācelā A village in the country of the Vajjis on the northern bank of the Ganges on the road from Rājagṛha to Vaiśālī. Samyutta, IV.261-62, V.163f; Udāna A., 322.

Ukkatṭha A town in Kosala near the Himalayas which was linked with Setavyā and Vaiśālī by a road. Jāt., II.259.

Uladana Modern Ooldana, seven miles north east of Madanpur in Jhansi district, Uttar Pradesh, mentioned as a part of Vaḍavari-viṣaya (q.v.) in the Semra grant of the Candella Paramardi. Ep. Ind., IV.153 ff.

Ulumpa Also known as Medatalumpa, it was a village in the Śākya country. Jāt., IV.151f.

Ulva Modern Ulba in the Raipur district mentioned in the Kharod stone inscription of Ratnadeva II (KE 933). CII, IV.536.

Umāvana Kotalgad in the Kumaon district. Vāyu, XLI.36.

Undavalli Site of Pallava architecture in storeyed caves in the Guntur district.

Uṇḍikavātikā Modern Oontia near Pachmari in the Hoshangabad district, Madhya Pradesh. It is the findspot of a grant of the Rāṣṭrakūṭa Abhimanyu of Mānapura. Ep. Ind., VIII.163-66.

Upaplavya See under Matsya.

Uragapura See under Uraiur.

Uraiur Town of the Cola country which is now represented by a suburb of Trichinopoly. It is same as the inland called Argaru in the Periplus, which was also an administrative division in the beginning of the Christian era. Ptolemy's Soretai or Soringoi denoted the Colas and their capital Orthoura was the same as Uraiur or Uragapura.

Urangai A city occupied by Kulottuṅga III as mentioned in the Pudukkottah inscriptions. It is the Tamilized form of Orungallu or Warangal.

Urasa Modern Hazara or Abbottabad where Hiuen Tsang found an Aśokan tope, 200 feet in height and a monastery inhabited by the Mahāyānist monks. Watters, I.256.

Urdhvaśrīṅga Modern Olasinga in the Puri district, Orissa, mentioned in the Kanas plates of Sri Lokavigraha IO, I (11) 120-23; JKHRS, III.261-66; Ep. Ind., XXVII.331ff; CII, III.276.

Urjayat Modern Girnar hill, source of the rivers Suvarṇasikatā (q.v.) and Palāsini (q.v.) watering the Sudarśana (q.v.) lake. It is mentioned in the Junagarh rock inscription of Rudradāman. Ep. Ind., VIII.36, 42.

Uruvelā, Uruvilva Modern village of Urel, six miles south of Gaya railway station where the Buddha, at the foot of the Bodhi tree in ancient Senānigāma practised austere penances for the long period of six years and also attained the supreme enlightenment.

Ushkura Site of ancient Huṣkapura (34° 12'N, 74° 22'E) in Baramula district, Kashmir, where excavation has yielded a ruined cruciform base of a stone structure, presumably a stūpa erected by Lalitāditya.

Uśīnara People described in the Ait. Br., VIII.14 as dwelling in the Middle country along with the Vasas and Kuru-Pañcālas. The Gopatha, I. 2.9 speaks of the Vasas and Uśīnaras as united northerners who were intimately associated with the Śibis, In Kathāsaritsāgara (ed. Durgaprasad 5) Uśīnara-giri is placed near Kanakhala adjoining Hardwar in the Saharanpur district, Uttar Pradesh. It is doubtless identical with the Uśīra-giri of the Divvāyadāna and Uśīra-dhvaja of the Vinaya texts II.39. Pāṇini, IV. 2.20, V.2.118, etc. refers to Uśīnara country. In certain texts Bhojanagara has been mentioned as its capital. A fortress called Ahvara is sometimes referred to in connection with the country of the Uśīnaras.

Uśīra-Dhvaja See under Uśīnara.

Uśīra-Giri See under Uśīnara.

Utkala Same as Odra (q.v.) it comprised the lower part of the present Orissa between the eighth and the eleventh century. The geographical limits of Utkala varied from time to time.

Utkala Indian name applied to the tract between Rangoon and Pegu in Burma. SGAMI, 319.

Utpakavana Holy place in the Pañcāla country which may be identified with Bithur, fourteen miles from Kanpur in Uttar Pradesh. Mbh., III.87.15.

III.448; Haracaritacintāmaṇi, IV.54, 87.

Uttara-Kosala Name of Ayodhyā occurring in the Gāhaḍavāla records. Ep. Ind., IX.304; Ind. Ant., XVIII.11ff.

Uttarakula-Draśa Country in the Upper Brahmaputra valley in Assam mentioned in the Nowgong grant of Balavarman, Bargaon grant of Ratnapāla and the Gauhati grant of Indrapāla KS, 71ff.

Uttarakuru A people whose territory lay beyond the Himālayas (Ait. Br., VIII.23). They might have been an offshoot of the Kurus. The region is mentioned in the Udayagiri cave inscription of Candragupta. CII, III.259.

Uttaramadra A people whose territory in Vedic age lay beyond the Himalayas.

Uttara-Maṇḍala A district mentioned in the Gunaighar grant of Vainyagupta of 508 AD. It lay in the Tippera-Comilla region of Bangladesh.

Uttarāpatha The northern division of India which was bounded on the north and west by the belt of the Western Himalayan ranges and lay to the north and northwest of the Aparānta division and the Madhyadeśa. Uttarāpatha was watered by the Indus and Ganges groups. It may be taken as identical with what is called Udīcya of the Purāṇas. Rājaśekhara locates Uttarapatha to the north of Pṛthudaka (modern Pehoa) near Thaneswar. In the Buddhist texts it is described as extended to the north and northwest from the village of Thunā.

Uttara-Rāḍhā Northern Rāḍhā, the Uttiralādam of the Cola inscriptions. This area is known from the Gaṅga records of the ninth century (Ep. Ind., XXIII.74) and also in the Belava and Naihati grants. The last mentioned record includes it within the Vardhamāna bhukti (q.v.). In the time of Lakṣmaṇasena it formed part of the Kaṅkagrāma (q.v.) bhukti (Ep. Ind., XXI.218). It included such villages as Siddhalagrāma (Siddhangram in Birbhum district), Vāllahiṭṭha (Balutiya in Burdwan district) etc. (JRAS, 1935, 99; IB, 71). The Saktipur grant of Lakṣmaṇasena suggests that it also embraced villages of the Kandi subdivision of Murshidabad. The river Ajaya was the boundary line between Northern and Southern Rāḍhā. The Jain Prajñāpanā knows Koṭivarṣa of Dinajpur district as belonging to Northern Rāḍhā.

Uttara Tosali Country comprising parts of the Cuttack and Balasore districts of Orissa which later formed the major part of the Oḍra or Uḍra country, It is frequently mentioned in the records of the Kara kings.

Uttaravalli A viṣaya in Kosala-rājya-khaṇḍa mentioned in a Sonpur grant of the Somavaṃśī prince Someśvaradeva. It has been identified with the former Uttaratīra division of Sonpur. Ep. Ind., XII.237-42.

Utthunaka Modern Arthuna in the Banswara district, Rajasthan, which was the capital of the Paramāras of Vāgado (q.v.)

Uttiralādam Same as Uttara-Rāḍha (q.v.), mentioned in the Tiruvalanguadu plates of Rājendra Cola as one of his conquered territories.

Uttunaka Modern Arthuna in Banswara district Rajasthan mentioned in the records of the Guhilaputras.

Uzain Arabic name of Ujjayinī.

Vagadha Early form of Magadha.

Vāgado The Banswara district of Rajasthan which was the seat of a branch of the Paramāras.

Vāgbhata Meru Modern Barmer in the Mallanai region of Rajasthan mentioned in the records of the Cāhamānas of Nadol. Ep. Ind., XI.73-79.

Vāghaure Modern Waghur in the Bhir district mentioned in the Yādava records as situated in the Kanhairi-deśa (q.v.). Ep. Ind., XXV.209.

Vaidīśa Same as Vidiśā, modern Besnagar in old Gwalior State, mentioned in the Vadner Grant of the Kalacuri king Buddharāja dated in the year 360 (AD 608).

Valdumba A tribe which ruled over the Renāndu (q.v.) country comprising parts of the Cuddpah, Anantapur and Kurnool districts.

Valdurya A hill in Ānarta mentioned in the Mbh., III.89.6, 121.16-19. Probably it is the Satpura range which has Beryl (valdurya) mines. Ptolemy refers to it at Oroudian.

Vaidyanātha Holy place containing Śiva shrine at Deoghar, Santal Parganas. IGI., IX.244.

Vaigai, Vaigai-Malai Name of the Tirumalai rock as recorded in certain Cola inscriptions. The term Vaigai-Tirumalai is also found. SII, I.94-95, 101.

Vaigavūr Ancient name of the village at the base of the Tirumalai rock. In the Cola inscription it is mentioned as belonging to Mugaināḍu, a division of Paṅgala-nāḍu, which formed part of Jayaṅkoṇḍa-cola-maṇḍalam. SII, I.94.97, 99, 101.

Vairāgara Modern Wairagarh (20°30' N, 80°15' E) in Chanda, Maharashtra mentioned in the Ratanpur stone inscription of the Kalacuri Jājalladeva. Vajra mentioned in the Kuruspal stone inscription of the Nagavaṃsi king Someśvara has been identified by Hiralal with this Vairagara. Ep. Ind., I.32-39, X.25-31.

Vairāntya Same as Rantipura, modern Rintambur or Rintipur on the Gomati in the Malwa region mentioned as capital of king Rantideva in Harṣacarita, VI. cf. Megha, I.47.

Vairāta See under Bairat. It was Virātanagara, the capital of the Matsyas (q.v.), which later gave its name to the former Matsya territory. According to Hiuen Tsang the capital of the Vairāta country was 15 li in circuit, which corresponds almost exactly with the ancient mound on which the present town of Bairat is built.

Vaiśālī Indian name applied to modern Vethali in the Akyab district. It was the capital of the Candras of Arakan SGAMI, 319.

Vaiśālī, Vesālī Capital of the Vajjian confederacy which has been identified with modern Basarh in the Muzaffarpur district of Bihar. This identification is confirmed by archaeological excavations. Fa-hian and Hiuen Tsang gave a detailed description of Vaiśālī and its Buddhist antiquities during the time of their visits. According to the latter, the kingdom of Vaiśālī was above 5000 li in circuit.

Vaitaraṇī River in Orissa which rises in the Vindhya and serves as the boundary between the Balasore and Cuttack districts. The city of Yayātipura or Jajpur stands on it. Mbh., III.85.6, III.114.4; Vāyu, LXXVII.95, Kūrma, II.37; Padma, I.39.6; Agni, CXVI.7; Matsya, CXIV.27; Brahma. XXVII.33; IGI, VI.223.

Vajjabhūmi, Vajrabhūmi One of the two divisions of the Lāḍha (Rāḍhā) country mentioned in the Jain texts (Ācārāṅga, I.8.3). Its capital was known as Paṇita-bhūmi. Vajrabhūmi comprised parts of modern Birbhum, Burdwan and Hooghly districts of West Bengal, the area which subsequently known as the sarkar of Madāran.

Vajji, Vṛji One of the sixteen Mahājanapadas which comprised the localities of the Vajjis, Licchavis, Videhas, Jñatṛkas, Ugras, etc. The Vṛji is referred to in Pāṇini IV.2.131. The Vajji country may be identified with the tract lying between the Ganges on the south and the Nepal hills in the north. On the west the river Gandak possibly separated it from the Mallas and the Kosalas. The capital city was Vaiśālī (q.v.).

Vakana Probably Wekhan in Central Asia.

Vakaveddā A village in the Onga-tala-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Patna grant no. 1 of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya (Ep. Ind., III.340-44). It is either Bakebīra, close to the Salebhata P.S. On the river Onga, or Bakti, fifteen miles north of Bolangir and four miles to the south of the Onga river (Ep. Ind., XI.101, 198).

Vakranātha Holy place same as Vakraśvara near Dubrajpur in the Birbhum district of West Bengal. SP, 98.

Vakrānta One of the fiftysix countries mentioned in the Śaktisangama. It is said to have extended from the Karatoya as far as Hingulāja, This Karatoya is a north western river, differing from the one of the same name in North Bengal (cf. Pargiter, MP, 301). The reference to Hinglaj as one of the bordering regions suggests that Vakrānta was Makran between Baluchistan and Persia. SGAMI, 102.

Vakratentali A village belonging to the Lupattarā-khaṇḍa (q.v.) mentioned in the Sonpur grant of Mahābhavagupta Janamejaya. It is modern Batentule, sixteen miles west of Sonpur town. Ep. Ind., XI.93.95.

Valabhi The territory of the Maitrakas which roughly corresponds to Saurashtra. The site of the capital city is now represented by Wala or Vala (21°52' N, 71°57' E) in old Bhavanagar State in Eastern Kathiawar peninsula. CII, III.116; Ep. Ind., XXXVII.167-70; JOI, XII.51ff.

Vālahi Modern Bali in Godwar region of Marwar or Jodhpur in Rajasthan mentioned in the records of the Cāhamānas of Nadol. Ep. Ind., XI.32-33.

Valasna Lower Palaeolithic site in Gujarat on the Sabarmati to the direct north of Ahmedabad.

Valkha Modern Vaghli about six miles northeast of Chalishgaon in former East Khandesh district mentioned in an Indore grant of Mahārāja Bhulūḍa. CII, III.116; SIE, II.42f.

Vallabha City, same as Mānyakheta (q.v.) mentioned by Al-Bīrūnī.

Vallahitthā Modern Balutiyā on the northern borders of the Burdwan district, West Bengal. JRAS, 1935, 99; IB, 71.

Vallāla Modern Tiruvallam in North Arcot district where the Cola king Parantaka I defeated the Rāṣṭrakūṭa Kṛṣṇa II. The event is recorded in the Kanyakumari inscription of Vīrarājendra.

Vallam Village in the Paḍaviḍu (q.v.) kingdom which has been located in the Vandavari Taluka of the North Arcot district. It is mentioned in an inscription of Devarāya of Vijayanagara found inside the front gopura of the Virinchipuram temple. SII, I.83.

Vallāpura Modern Ballāvar which is situated on the west of the hill state of Chamba. RT, VII.220, 270, 588, VIII 539, 542, 622.

Vallāra Same as modern Bellary district. The name is found in Rājaśekhara's Kāvyaṁmāmsā.

Vallāśrīga A village in the Khātiā-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in a Baudh grant of Raṇabhañja. It has been identified with modern Balasinga on the confluence of the Mahānadī and the Salanki (i.e. Salki) in the Baudh-Khondmals district of Orissa. Ep. Ind., XII.325-28, XVIII.300.

Vallavaraiyar-Nāḍu A district of the Cola period which comprised the present Salem district, Tamil Nadu.

Vallimundā-Maṇḍala A subdivision of the Khediravalli-viṣaya in the Puṇḍravardhana-bhukti (q.v.).

Vallūrapura Capital of Mahārājapāḍi 7000 as recorded in the Cola inscriptions. It lay about eight miles to the north-west of Cuddapah.

Vāmanasthali Modern Vanthali in Junagadh district, Gujarat mentioned in the Royal Asiatic Society's grant of Caulukya Bhīma II. Ind. Ant., IV.73, XVIII.110-16; BG, I (1) 160.

Vāmaṇḍāpāṭī A city mentioned in the Kudopali grant of Mahābhava-gupta II Bhīmaratha (Ep. Ind., IV.254-59). It has been identified with Bamra (Bāmaṇḍā, Bamragarh) in Sambalpur region about sixty miles north-east of Binka. Ep. Ind., XI.201.

Vamkṣu River, same as the Oxus.

Vamṣa, Vatsa One of the sixteen Mahājanapadas which lay to the south of Kosala and to the north of Avantī. The Ait. Br., VIII.143 places it in the Madhyadeśa. Its capital was Kosambī which has been identified with modern Kosam near Allahabad. The district of Bhagga was a dependency of Vamṣa in Buddha's time. According to Hiuen Tsang, the country was 6000 li in circuit and its capital Kosambi about 30 li (Watters, I.366). In the Anguttara, IV.252, 256, 260 it is mentioned as a rich and prosperous country.

Vamśadharā River rising from the Mahendra range. It is modern Bamsdharā flowing between Ganjam and Vizagapatam districts on which Kaliṅgapatam stands. It finds mention in the Santa-Bommali plates of Indravarman and the Narasapatam grant of Vajrahasta V. (Ep. Ind., XI.147-58, XXV.94; Vāyu, XLV.106; Mārkāndeya, LIV.29 reads Vamśavarā.

Vaṇāri Modern Banari near Janjgir in Bilaspur district mentioned in the Sheorinarayan inscription of Jājalladeva II (KE 919). CII, IV.521.

Vānakheṭa Modern Venakhedpur in Akola district, Maharashtra, mentioned in a number of copper plate grants from Malhara.

Vāndhamava Modern Bandhmau, three miles to the east of Basahi in Etawah district, Uttar Pradesh, mentioned in the Basahi grant of Gāhaḍa-vāla Madanapāla. Ind. Ant., XIV.102.

Vaṅga People and country mentioned in the Ait. Br., II.1.1, the Baudh. D.S., I.1.25-31, the Mbh., II.30, the Rām, II.10.36-37, IV.40.23-25 etc. It is mentioned in the Meherauli inscription of Candra (CII, III.141) and the Mahākūṭa Pillar inscription of the Cālukyas of Badami (Ind. Ant., XIX.7ff). In the Raghuvamśa, IV.34 the Vaṅgas are located among the streams of the Ganges. The Western boundary of the country of the Vaṅgas possibly at times extended beyond the Hooghly to the river to Kapiśa or Kasai in the Midnapur district of West Bengal. The inclusion within Vaṅga of an area beyond the Hooghly river is also vouched for by the Jain Prajñāpanā. In the Pāla and Sena period the area of Vaṅga was shifted eastwards and was restricted to the eastern part of the Gangetic delta. In later Pāla period it was divided into two parts, northern and southern, as is indicated by the Kamauli grant of Vaidyadeva (GL, 140). These two divisions again corresponded roughly to the two bhāgas of the same territory mentioned in later Sena inscriptions, namely the Vikramapurā-bhāga (q.v.) and the Nāvya (q.v.).

Vaṅgāla South-eastern part of deltaic Bengal. Vaṅga and Vaṅgāla are mentioned separately in several inscriptions and Muslim chronicles (Ep. Ind., V.257; Elliot, III.295, etc). While the former roughly denoted the tract between the Bhāgīrathī and the Padmā and beyond (22°30'-23°30' N, 89°-90°30' E), the later denoted its lower portion (21° 30'-22°30' N, 88° 30'-91' E). The derivation of the name Vaṅgāla (Vaṅga plus āl, from ali or dike) supports its identification with that part of Vaṅga which was intersected by khāls and creeks and abounding in dikes and bridges that was known as Bhāṭi (q.v.). It was Vaṅgāla, rather than Vaṅga, that gave its name to the great eastern subah, of the Mughal empire.

Vaṅgāla Deśa Part of Bengal mentioned in the Tiruvalaṅgadu plates of Rājendra Cola as one of his conquered territories. SII, I.97, 99.

Vaṅganagara A city referred to in the Ceylonese chronicles. It may or may not be a city of Bengal.

Vāṇiyagāma Skt. Vāṇijyagrāma. It was a village near Vaiśālī where Lord Mahāvīra had passed a number of rainy seasons.

Vaṅjarā Modern Manjarā river that falls into Godāvarī in the Nander district. Brahma, CLIX.45.

Vaṅjī The capital of the Ceras mentioned in the Vilvikudi grant of Pāṇḍya Neduṅjaḍiyan. Some place it at Karur near Trichinopoly while others identify it with Turuvanjikulam on the west coast of Cochin. The latter view seems more probable. (Śilappadikāram, Dikshiter, 77). It contained a Nirgrantha shrine which was near the eastern gate of the city.

Vaṅjulā Modern Mañjirā, a southern tributary of the Godāvarī.

Vaṅjulvaka A locality in the Ganjam region mentioned in the Somavamsi records,

Vaṅkṣu A branch of the Ganges mentioned in the Paramāra records. Ep. Ind., II.194.

Vaṅṅigaon Modern Bangaon, thirteen miles from Damoh in Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in a Bangaon Sati inscription dated V.S. 1385. ICPB, 61.

Vapabhūmi A village in the Thihāra-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Antirigam grant of Yaśabhañja. It has been identified with Boppangi in the Gumsur Taluk of the Ganjam district, Orissa. Ep. Ind., XVIII.302.

Vapādeva A pāṭaka in the viṣaya of Bādāsepattan (q.v.) mentioned in the Uttarbarbil grant of Balavarman.

Vapi Middle Palaeolithic site in Bulsar district, South Gujarat.

Vappuḍam A village in Erada-viṣaya (q.v.) mentioned in the Nadagam grant of Vajrahasta V. It has been identified with Boppadam in the Narasannapeta Taluk of the Ganjam district. Ep. Ind., IV.183-93.

Vaprakeśvara Indian name given to a locality in Borneo. SGAMI, 322.

Varadā River, same as the modern Vardhā in Madhya Pradesh. Rām, IV.41.9; Agni, CIX.22; Nulacampū, VI.66.

Varadā-Khaṇḍa A viṣaya in the Koṅgoda-maṇḍala (q.v.) mentioned in the Ganjam grant no. 1 of Daṇḍi-Mahādevi. Ep. Ind., VI.135-40.

Varāhamūla Modern Baramula in Kashmir. RT, VII.1309, VIII.451-52, 1229.

Varāhamūlakṣetra, Varāhakṣetra Modern Baramula in Kashmir on the right bank of the Vitastā at the head of the western entrance of the Kashmir valley. RT, VI.186.

Varāhavartani An administrative subdivision of the Eastern Gaṅgas. It comprised modern Tekkali-Chicacole area.

Varākamaṇḍala A district mentioned in the Ghugrahati copper plate of Samācāradeva. It extended as far as the eastern sea (prāk-samudra, apparently the head of the Bay of Bengal together with the estuary of Meghnā) and included Dhruvilāti, identified with Dhulat near Faridpur town in Bangladesh. Ep. Ind., XVIII.74ff.

Vārāṇasī Capital of the kingdom of Kāśī (q.v.) represented by the modern city of Banaras. In Pali literature this city is also known as Ketumati, Surundhana, Sudassana, Brahmavaddhana, Pupphavati, Ramma and Molini. Its other names are Jitvārī, Purisreṣṭha, Śivapurī and Kāsikā.

Varaṇāvati River, identified with the Ganges.

Vardhamāna Modern Wadhwan (22°43'N, 71°43'E), in Surendranagar district, Gujarat.

Vardhamānapura Place visited by Mahāvīra according to the Vipāka, 26. There are two Vardhamānas in Jain tradition. One was same as Burdwan in West Bengal and the other was Wadhwan in Gujarat where the Jain Harivaṃśa was composed.

Vardhamāna-Bhukti A province mentioned in the Mallasarul plate of the sixth century, the Irda grant of the tenth century and the Naihati and Govindapur grants of the twelfth century. It embraced the valley of the Damodar river and at times stretched from the river Mor in the north to the Suvarṇarekhā in the south. Towards the east, the bhukti extended as far as the western branch of the Ganges now known as the Hooghly. In the tenth century the southern boundary extended to the lower reaches of the Suvarṇarekhā. About the middle of the twelfth century the northern boundary is known to have extended beyond the river Ajaya. The main subdivisions of the Vardhamāna-bhukti as may be determined from the known inscriptions of the Pāla-Sena period were Daṇḍa-bhukti-maṇḍala (q.v.), Paścima-khaṭikā (q.v.) Dakṣiṇa-Rāḍhā (q.v.) and Uttara-Rāḍha-maṇḍala (q.v.).

Vardhamānapura Town of the Pratihāras. It was either Wadhwan in Kathiawar peninsula or Badnawar, about forty miles to the south-west of Ujjain.

Vardhamānapura A royal residence mentioned in the Chittagong plates of Kāntideva of Harikela-maṇḍala (q.v.) assigned to the ninth century AD. It stood in Harikela and as such it was different from the Vardhamāna (Burdwan) of West Bengal.

Varelāpura Modern Barela in Bilaspur district mentioned in the Ratanpur stone inscription of Pṛthvīdeva II. CII, IV.503.

Varendra, Varendri-Maṇḍala Metropolitan district of the Puṇḍravardhana-bhukti (q.v.). The name occurs in the Talcher grant of Gayāḍatuṅga (JASB, NS, XII.203) and in the Kavi-praśasti of the Rāmacarita. The latter locates it between the Ganges and the Karatoyā. Its inclusion within Puṇḍravardhana is proved by the Silimpur, Tarpandighi and Madhainagar inscriptions. The TN mentions Barind as a wing of the territory of Lakhanwati on the eastern side of the Ganges. The evidence of Indian literature and inscriptions proved that it included considerable portions of the present Bogra, Rajshahi and Dinajpur districts. An important part of Varendri was apparently known as Sāvatti or Śrāvasti (q.v.). Among other localities of Varendri mention should be made of Bhavagrāma, Belahiṣṭi, Kantapura (Kāntanagar in Dinajpur). Nāṭari (Nator in Rajshahi), Paduvanvā (Pabna) etc.

Vargullaka Modern Gutta, about ten miles southwest of Sirpur and five miles from Arang in Raipur district, mentioned in the Sirpur Lakṣmaṇa temple stone inscription of Mahāśivagupta. ICPB, 88ff.

Vāridurga Modern Barigar (25°14'N, 80°6'E) near the river Ken in the Chatarpur region mentioned in the Candella records. Ep. Ind., IV.158.

Vārikheda Modern Varkhed, Dindori Taluk, Nasik district, Wai CP, Ind. Ant., XI.157.

Varṇāsā Also known as Parṇāsā, it is the river Banas in Rajasthan rising from Pāriyātra and falling into Chambal. Brahmaṇḍa, II.16.28.

Varṇu River, same as the modern Bannu in the North Western Frontier Province (Pāṇ, IV.2.77). The Kāśikā explains that the country on Varṇu was also of the same name.

Vaśa A Vedic people dwelling in the Middle Country with the Uśīnaras (q.v.) and Kuru-Pañcālas. The Gopatha Br., I.2.9, II.9. speaks of the Vaśas and Uśīnaras as united peoples and locates them to the north. The Kauṣitaki Up., IV.1 connects the Vaśas also with the Matsyas. The country of the Vaśas, who later came to be known as Vatsyas, was situated round about Kausambi, their capital.

Vasabhi Modern Basahi in the Etawah district, Uttar Pradesh. It is mentioned in a grant of Gāhaḍavāla Madanapāla found at the same place as belonging to the Jiavati-pattala (q.v.) JASB, XLII(1), 314ff.; Ind. Ant., XIV.101-04.

Vasabhā Village mentioned in the Amoda grant of the Kalacuri Pṛthvīdeva. A modern place of the same name is situated in the Tahsil and district of Bilaspur, Madhya Pradesh, with which it has been identified. Ep. Ind., XIX.75-81.

Vasantapura See under Vaṭapura.

Vasiṣṭhātrtha Holy places on Mount Abu in Rajasthan, on Mount Sandhyachal near Gauhati in Assam and near Ayodhya in Uttar Pradesh. SP, 98.

Vastrapada Same as Vastrāpatha (modern Girnar) in Kathiawar. A Vastrapa or Vastrapāda country seems to be located in the northwest in Mbh., II.48.14, III.80, 108; SP, 99.

Vastrāpathaksetra Territory round about Girnar in Kathiawar. Skanda, VII.2.2.1-3.

Vāsudevakhanda A viṣaya or district which included the village of Rātaṅga (q.v.) mentioned in the Ganjam grant no. 2 of Netrbhañja. It is represented by modern Vasudevpur in the Gumsur Taluk of Ganjam district, Orissa. Ep. Ind., XVIII.301.

Vāṭadhāna People of the Punjab-Rajasthan region supposed to have had a settlement at Madhyamikā (q.v.). They are mentioned in the Puranic lists of Janapadas.

Vatagohāli A village near Paharpur in Bangladesh which was the site of a Jain vihāra. It is mentioned in a copper plate inscription of the Gupta year 159. Ep. Ind., XX.61ff, Sel. Ins., 359ff; Bhandarkar, List. no. 2037.

Vatamukha Modern Odhe in Nasik. Dhulia CP, Ep. Ind., VIII.185.

Vaṭanagara, Vaṭapura City on the Sarasvatī mentioned in the Vasantgadh inscriptions of Varmalāta (vs 682) and Purnapāla (vs 1099) and in a somewhat earlier inscription found at the village of Samoli in the Bhomat district of Mewar. It is identical with Vasantgadh in Rajasthan or was situated nearby. Ep. Ind., IX.10-15, 99, 191.

Vaṭanagara-Bhoga Same as modern Vadner in the Chandor Taluk of the Nasik district mentioned in a grant of the Kalacuri king Buddharāja dated in the year 360 (AD 608) found at the same place.

Vatanagara Viṣaya, '84 An administrative division mentioned in the Pimpri and Wai copper plates of the time of the Rāṣṭrakūṭas. Its headquarters may be identified with modern Wani in the Dindori Taluka of the Nasik district. It might have included parts of Dindori, Bagalan, Niphad, Chandwad and Malegaon Talukas when considered as a Deśa. The northern boundary seems to have been the Mosam river and the southern the Godāvarī. Ep. Ind., X.85; Ind. Ant., XI.157.

Vaṭapadraka A village in the Ghāghradora-bhoga of Sthali-maṇḍala mentioned in the Banswara grant of Paramāra Bhojadeva. It has been identified with Baroda. Ep. Ind., XI.181-83; Ind. Ant., 1912, 201-02.

Vaṭapallikā Modern Barapali, thirty miles east of Arang in Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Arang plates of Bhīmasena. Ep. Ind., IX.342ff; ICPB, 96.

Vidarbha Ancient Janapada corresponding to modern Berar (Ait. Br., VII.34; Jaim. Up. Br., II.240). Its capital Kuṇḍina has been identified with modern Kaṇḍinyapura on the bank of the Wardhā in the Chandur Taluk of Amraoti. According to Mbh, III.61.22-23, III.120.31 in the north it reached Pāyṣṇī, a tributary of the Tāptī.

Videha Land and people which corresponded roughly to the modern Tirhut in North Bihar. It was separated from Kosala by the river Sadānīrā (q.v.), usually identified with the modern Gandak which rising in Nepal flows into the Ganges opposite Patna. The story of the spread of Vedic culture into this region is mentioned in Śat. Br., I.4.1.10ff. According to Pargiter Videha comprised the country from Gorakhpur on the Rāptī to Darbhanga, with Kosala on the west and Aṅga on the east. On the north it approached the hills, and to the south it was bounded by Vaiśālī. Its capital was Mithilā (q.v.). The close connection between the Koslas (q.v.). Videhas and Kāsis (q.v.) is mentioned in the Śākh. SS. XVI.29.5. According to the Suruci Jātaka (no. 489) Vidcha was 300 leagues in extent, and it consisted of 16000 villages.

Vidhuvatti Modern Viduvalur or Vidavalu in Kovu Taluka, Nellor district, mentioned in the records of Simhavarman II. JMU; XII.155-56.

Vidiśā River and city represented respectively by the river Bes or Besall which flows into the Vetravati, modern Betwa, and the city of Besnagar near Bhilsa (at present called Vidiśā) in the Madhya Pradesh. The Meghadūta, I.24 states that Vidiśā was the capital of the Daśārṇa country. In the Mālavikāgnimitra, V.1 Agnimitra is shown as enjoying himself on the bank of the Vidiśā river. He is also called as Vaidiśastha i.e. belonging to the city of Vidiśā. The city is also mentioned in Raghu, XV.36 while the river in Brahma, XXVII.29; Brahmāṇḍa, II.16.28 and Mārkaṇḍeya, LIV.20. The Vadmera plates of Katakchuri Buddharāja (dated about 609 AD) were issued from Vidiśā which was then a military encampment (Ep. Ind., XII.30). It was an important centre of Buddhism also.

Vidyāpura Probably the same as Vidyānagara or Vijayanagara (modern Hampi) in the Bellary district. Vidyānagara was possibly a name of Rajahmundry or of a place near it in the Godavari district. Another Vidyānagara is supposed to be modern Vijayanagar at the confluence of the Sindh and the Para, twentyfive miles below Narwar. SP, 99.

Vigrahapura Same as Visalpur near Rajmahal in Jaipur, Rajasthan, mentioned in the records of the Cāhamānas of Śākambhari. ASR, VI.156.

Vijayanagara, Vijayapura Capital of the Sena kings of Bengal which was situated near Trivenī in the Hooghly district of West Bengal. Vijayanagara is mentioned in the Nātha works like Goraṅgavijaya, Mīnacetaṇa, etc. Vijayapura is described in Dhoyi's Pavanadūta as the capital (rājadhānī) of the Sena kings which stood on the banks of the Ganges in the world-sanctifying country (deśam jagati pāvanam) where the Yamunā (tapanatanayā) starts off from the Bhagirathī. This undoubtedly points to the region of Trivenī.

Vijayapura Either Vijapur of the Pancha Mahals or the headquarters of the Vijapur subdivision of Baroda district, Gujarat, mentioned in the Kheda grant of Cālukya Vijayarāja. CII, III.121-22; Ind. Ant., VII.248.

Yamunā River same as modern Yamunā, mentioned thrice in the RV, V.52.17, VII.18.19, X.75.5 on the bank of which the famous dāsarājña was fought. (cf. AV, IV.9.10; Ait. Br., VIII.14.4, VIII.23; Śat. Br., XIII.5.4.11; Pañc. Br., IX.14.11, XXV.10.24; Śāñ. S.S., XIII.29.25.33; Kāt. S.S., XXIV.6.10.39; Lāt. S.S., X.19.9.10; Patañjali, I.1.9, I.4.2 etc.). Its other names are Kālindī Kalindakanyā. Kālindrī, Suryajā, Yamabhagini and Yamī. The Greeks called it Diamouna (Ptolemy, VII.1.29) and the Chinese Yen-muk-na.

Yarrur Modern Arrūr in the Salem district mentioned in one of the Pukalur Brahmi inscriptions. AO, XXXIV.187.

Yaṣṭivana Modern Jathian near Gaya, some twelve miles away from Rājagṛha according to the Buddhist texts, where the Buddha stayed. It was visited by Hiuen Tsang. Mahāvagga, I.35, Jāt., I.83ff.; Mahāvastu, III.441; Watters, II.146.

Yatodbhava River, also known as Yatoda, which is a tributary of the Brahmaputra, flowing through the district of Jalpaiguri and Coochbehar in North Bengal. Kalikā, LXXVII.

Yaudheya Tribe whose territory comprised eastern Punjab and parts of Rajasthan and Uttar Pradesh. They are mentioned by Pāṇini and classed with the Trigartas and other peoples as āyudhajīvi Kṣatriyas. Their seals have been found at Ludhiana and coins have been discovered in the area extending from Saharanpur to Multan, including Dehra Dun and Rohtak (JNSI, LL.109ff). A clue to the extent of their territory is found in a Yaudheya inscription at Bijayagarh, two miles to the south-west of Bayana in Bharatpur. Their descendants may be identified with the Johiya Rajputs inhabiting the tract of land called Johiyabar along both banks of the Sutlej on the borders of Bahawalpur. Thus the heart of the Yaudheya territory was the eastern Punjab, but they dominated over the adjoining tracts of U.P. and Rajasthan.

Yaugandhara Modern Jhind to the northwest of Delhi mentioned as gateway of Kurukṣetra. Pāṇini, IV.2.130, Mbh, III.129.9.

Yavana Greek or non-Indian peoples having settlements in north-western India mentioned along with the Ārabas, Barbaras, Siṃhalas and Pārasikas in the Jain Antagaḍadasāo among non-Āryan tribes. The Jambudvīpaprājñapti, 52 refers to the Yavanadvīpa, while a Yavana-viṣaya in Western India is mentioned in the Vāsudevaniṇḍi 38, 62.

Yavyāvati River mentioned in the RV. Sāyana indentified it with Hriy-yūpiā. Hillebrandt considers it to be the Djob.

Yayapara-Maṇḍala Region around the modern village of Jaijapur, a few miles from Amoda in the Bilaspur district, Madhya Pradesh, mentioned in the Amoda grant of the Kalacuri Pṛthvīdeva. Ep. Ind., XIX.5-81.

Yayātinagara City from which the Patna grant of Mahāśivagupta Yayāti was issued. Mentioned in Dhoyī's Pavanadūta, it has been identified by Hiralal with Binka on the Mahānadī. According to him the old capital Vinītapura was named Yayātinagara after the name of the king. Fleet points out that as Yayātinagara was situated on the Mahānadī it could not be identified with Jajpur, which was on the Vaitaraṇī, some fifty miles north of the Mahānadī. Ep. Ind., XI.189, 201.

Yayātipura City on the Mahānadī said to have been founded by the Somavamśī king Yayāti Mahāśivagupta I wherefrom his charters were issued. Some take it to be same as Vinītapura (q.v.) while others with Jajpur, the celebrated Kṣetra of the goddess Virajā. The Muslim chroniclers referred to Orissa as the kingdom of Jajnagar. See under Yayātinagara.

Yelleswaram Now submerged under the Nagarjunasagar dam, it was a burial site, situated on the left bank of the Krishna in Nalgonda district, Andhra Pradesh.
